S.A. Reporters Are Criticized

CAPE TOWN (AP) — English-speaking reporters were accused in parliament here of blackening South Africa's name as a proposed new government.

The charges were made by a Nationalist deputy in a debate on a proposed new government ministry of information.

Nationalist Deputy J. A. Marais said a string of poison was being directed against South Africa by the press in Britain.

He said the sources are people who work on English-language newspapers and the South African Press Association.

Foreigners had been conditioned to believe "the most fantastic intrusions" about South Africa, he said.

"South Africans no longer find it funny when visitors from overseas are surprised to see non-whites here wearing clothes, styles of chains around their necks."

A member of the opposition United Party, R. Durrant, said the task of the proposed ministry was impossible "owing to the racial policies pursued by the government."

"It say it is a ministry of propaganda, not of information," he added.

FRANCE MAY SEEN PARLEY PARIS (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Charles de Gaulle said Murville is "most unlikely to attend the conference, the spokesman said if the country has not decided whether it would accept an observer to the parley."
