

Student Art Show

If you haven't noticed yet, the venerable Robertson Library is currently playing to an exciting exhibit of artistic import. What am I talking about? Why, the Second Annual Student Art Show, of course.

If you are wondering what it is, the name is more or less self explanatory, though the exhibit includes works by non students as well. It's a fine assemblage of painting, drawing, photography, and other pieces including computer graphics and print making. artist from all faculties participated, and Tracey Arsenault (Show organizer and long time mastermind of the Fine Arts Club) said that the current show is much better than last year's, both in terms of quantity and quality of the artwork.

There has also been a great deal of interest in the exhibit from within the university and from outside parties, many persons wanting to contribute to the show, and Arsenault says that the public feedback has been "all good". The faculty thus far have responded favourably, as have students, and the Fine Arts Club is looking forward to another amateur art extravaganza next year.

In the meantime, the best show on campus will be an exhibit in the Robertson Library until May 3rd.
