

New Deal For Prison Inmates Is Considered

OTTAWA, (CP)—Canada is going to see if she can give more encouragement to penitentiary inmates who show signs of becoming good citizens.

A special committee of penal experts has launched an inquiry for the justice department into Canada's methods of parole and remitting sentences in the light of the high percentage of prisoners who reform on being released.

Announcing formation of the committee, Justice Minister Garson said Friday the committee will study methods in the United Kingdom, the United States and elsewhere.

Committee members include Mr. Justice J. H. G. Fauteux of the

Will Unveil Memorial To Missing Airmen

RUNNYMEDE, Surrey, (CP)—The Queen and the Commonwealth will pay solemn tribute today at historic Runnymede to 30,456 Commonwealth airmen who fell in Europe during the Second World

Supreme Court of Canada; Joseph McCulley, president of the Canadian Penal Association; H. A. Edmiston, assistant to the principal at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont.; W. B. Common, director of prosecutions for Ontario; F. P. Varcoe, deputy justice minister; Gen. Gibson; and A. J. MacLeod, head of the department's remissions service.

War and lie in unknown graves. Atop a wooded hill looking down on the river Thames and the Runnymede meadow where free government was born in 1215, a gleaming, white stone memorial will be unveiled by Her Majesty. Watching will be 27,000 next-of-kin and friends of the unmarked fallen.

Their names are graven on stone. They include 3,072 Canadians and 26 from Newfoundland, who, in the words of the memorial inscription, "died for freedom in raid and sortie over the British Isles and the lands and seas of northern and western Europe."

With the Queen on the ceremonial dais Saturday afternoon will be the Dukes of Edinburgh and Gloucester and the Archbishop of Canterbury. Canadian diplomatic and service representatives will be among those from the Commonwealth nations.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

Did you know that our big neighbor to the south maintains twenty-two cemeteries around the globe? These cities of the dead are located as follows: one in Mexico, 6 in France and one each in England and Belgium, 2 in Italy. The other 11 are in the Philippine Islands, Holland, and Africa. These military cemeteries are authorized by congress and established by the Department of the Army, which turns them over to the American Battle Monuments Commission.

Canada too, has her permanent military cemeteries on foreign soil. Just how many there are I have not been able to ascertain at this time, but they are larger than those of the United States because our losses in the First World War were staggering.

A 72-year-old great-grandfather was recently ordained a Catholic priest at Sacred Heart Cathedral, in Richmond, Va.

Bishop P. L. Tretton, who conferred the church's sacrament of holy orders, sponsored the catholic seminary training of the Rev. Floyd Keeler, a widower and the father of five living children.

The puya flower takes 150 years to mature. It only blooms once in its lifetime in a pillar of glory 20 feet tall.

One of the strangest freaks of nature to pop up in recent years is the Siamese quadruplets joined together near the tails and the property of Mrs. Donald Sewers, Niantic, Ill. What are they? Kittens. They were born to mamma cat on the Hugh Moore farm near Niantic.

Pretoria, South Africa, boasts a store that caters to witch doctors only. This unique store features 500 different herbs and up to 80 varied types of animal fat, plus their bones and hides. Snake bone powder goes over the counter for headaches.

When a native is bothered with nightmares he can purchase through his local witch doctor, bits of skinned and burned elephant skin. Among other remedies sold are hyena skins, lion, fox, sea coral, and cuttle-fish powder. The natives really believe in their witch doctors and their strange concoctions.

Still standing, but a bit the worse of weather and time, is a chestnut tree on the farm of Dan Jewell, North River. Planted by Don's grandfather about 100 years ago, it is the biggest chestnut tree in North River—and the oldest.

Something we should all like to have and never will, is 100,000 mile automobiles and razor blades that will never get dull.

Here are a few odd happenings which cropped up at the coronation of English Queen Elizabeth. The Church was split up over religious issues that a group of clergymen boycotted the coronation of the first Queen Elizabeth.

Queen Anne had the gout so bad that she had to be carried on a chair in and out of Westminster Abbey.

And strange but true, the coronation ring was too small for Queen Victoria, and she actually shed tears when it was forced on her finger. The heavy crown was too big, and slid down over her ears.

While none of these things happened at the coronation of Elizabeth the second, the ceremony itself was something of an ordeal for the young Queen. Why? Because she was required to memorize every move in the two-hour service. Though her own responses were brief she had to speak them smoothly on cue and remember without any prompting just which of the symbols of the service must be touched, accepted, or handed back and at what point she was supposed to kneel, sit face the people, or stand for robing.

Being a queen is not all milk and honey. The beautiful young queen, beloved by all, embarks upon her reign with great promise. This is all to the good, for as queen she will need, in addition to the loyal support of her subjects, all the qualities of true womanhood to guide her far-flung empire past these days of uncertainty and besetting trials to preserve the one of the few remaining monarchies.

The reason why children learn faster than grownups is because they have sense enough to know there are many things they don't know.

Mrs. Sylvia Applebaum of New York City has a job that most women wouldn't mind taking over. She's New York City's personal shopper—which means that she can go on a shopping spree, spend all the money she likes and get paid for spending it.

But her most difficult assignment to date was spending $3,000 in one day. The spendthrift was a high official in a foreign government who commissioned Mrs. Applebaum "to purchase a lady's wardrobe" without giving any of the lady's vital statistics or tastes.

To simplify the matter she bought everything in black.

a diamond trick was off the combined hands, a solid club suit might deliver enough tricks. (Observe that this could have been the case.) However, in view of South's singleton club, and in further view of the fact that North's hand might have been seven clubs to the ace-king without the jack but with the three top diamonds, this South's decision was open to criticism.
