Insurance Deeds in Charlottetown Area

By GEORGE CONDON
If you have been thinking that the rainfall over the past 10 or 15 days was very heavy, you are quite right as shown by figures released by Warren Burns of the department farm in Charlottetown.

In a period of slightly more than three hours a heavy rain set in 2 p.m. Wednesday, 1.37 inches of rain fell in the Charlottetown area. This is nearly equal to the total rainfall for the first five days of July last year when almost everyone complained that it was the rainiest month yet.

Even closer scrutiny of 116 records shows that on July 3 of last year 38 inches of rain fell. But in a two-hour period from 2 to 4 p.m. Wednesday, July 3 this year, 7.3 inches fell nearly equaling the total for the whole day last year.

By far the heaviest downpour of our records came between 8:05 and 3:20 a.m. Thursday when nearly 51 inches of rain fell. This plus the 73 of the previous day made up the bulk of the 1.37 inches that fell during the storm. Drizzles throughout the remainder of the day were counted for the additional small percentage.

For the future, however, do not take a clear picture unless the totals from other months are examined. For instance, June of last year saw an overall fall of 3.22 inches whereas during the month of this year only 1.81 inches were recorded.

Another interesting fact about last year is that in the month of July rain fell nearly 77 per cent of the time during a total of 5.63 inches of water on the island. Compared with that our 1.37 inches of Wednesday and Thursday does not seem so bad.

Mr. Burns declared that the rain just experienced was badly needed and although it was extremely heavy it did not last as long and so no one could really complain. "This is what we need and want," he said, "rain, but at well spaced intervals. Maybe this year we'll get it that way."

Some rather strange tricks were played on the island during that last storm by modern nature.

Highland College opens July 29 at North Rustico

One of the most popular and colorful summer attractions on the island will take place again this year when an 18-day summer school sponsored by the Highland College at North Rustico opens July 29 with a two-day concert program open to the public.

The highlight of the concerts last year, the first season of operation, was the pipe band and the Highland dancers who performed on the huge open stage in front of the school building. More than 5,000 visitors attended despite the often rainy weather.

Although the emphasis at the Highland College is primarily on Highland music and dancing, the entertainment will feature a variety of numbers. Some of the top island talent, both individual and group, will be seen in 18 guest appearances at the 18 concerts to be staged daily, except Mondays.

Applications to attend the college have already been received from as far west in Canada as British Columbia and as far east in the U.S. such as Detroit. One of the teachers at the college this year will be Sandra Bald Jones of Eschikshire, Scotland, the current world's champion Highland dancer. The pipe band instructor will be Dr. A. MacLeod and the drums will be taught by Clarence Hunt, director of the famous MacGillivray's Pipe Band in Nova Scotia.

To accommodate more students at the school this year additional bedroom space will be available. The enrollment, however, will be limited to avoid overcrowding.

As well as advancing their knowledge and skill in dancing, piping and drumming, the pupils will also be able to enjoy their vacation with the National Park beach at their doorstep and a program of recreation keyed to their liking.

Counsel for the accused, Gerald Foster, asked that the sentence be two years on each count, and that all three terms be served consecutively. Board to Investigate Wage Dispute in S' side

The department of welfare and labor has approved a negotiation board set up to investigate and report on contract negotiation difficulties between civil maintenance employees and Alex MacLean, Parkdale, will be the union's representative on the board, while the representative of the Town of Summerside will be George McNeil. It was announced yesterday by Henry Wedge, minister of welfare and labor.

Mr. Wedge said the board has been set up because negotiations between the two groups involved have been "bogged down for some months."

HOSPITAL WORKERS
In Charlottetown, another matter facing the labor department is the NUPE's request that a strike vote be supervised by the department among non-professional workers at the Charlottetown and Prince Edward Island hospitals.

Local 895 and 826 of the union voted about two months ago for a strike vote, as they were unable to satisfactorily negotiate contracts which covered wage increases with the hospitals.

Late last week the representative of the employees were essential to the maintenance of the hospital and under the Industrial Relations Act could not take strike action.

The union, however, still wants to have its strike vote.

COUNSEL OBTAINED
Legal counsel is being obtained by the labor department to see whether or not it must supervise a vote.

Mr. Wedge indicated that he will answer the union within a few days, "possibly today."

About two-thirds of the city's street patching program has been completed so far, city engineer, Norman Stewart said yesterday.

In preparation for asphaltizing the fine grading has been completed on Queen Elizabeth Drive, V. I. Street, Spruce Street, and Marine Drive, in the North River Road district co-operative housing section. Sidewalks are being laid on Admiral, Goodwill and Victory Streets, and will be completed within two weeks between Kirkwood Drive and Belvedere Avenue on Elm Avenue.

Mr. Stewart said the "Dixieal" contract has been let, and this work will start shortly on streets between Water and Esplanade on Stewart street and last year.

The Dixieal resurfacing program is the method, Mr. Stewart explained, and requires that a block be closed to traffic for about two hours. It also has proved durable and satisfactory, he said.

The street program is scheduled for completion by September 15.
