

Canucks Have Tough Time In Can. Tennis Tourney

Canadian Press Staff Writer VANCOUVER (CP)—The ranks of seeded Canadian men in the annual tennis championships were cut by half Wednesday—and the remainder had to fight to stay in the running.

Some of the top non-Canadians had a rough time. Louis Surville, the white-haired young Australian, was sidelined by a cagey veteran from Los Angeles, bespectacled Merwin Miller.

Surville, ranked fourth among Canadians after his recent victory in the Vancouver clay court championships, seemed less at home on the grass and, although he took the first set, he couldn't keep up with Miller's control. The final score was 8-10, 6-2, 6-4.

Surville was the second seeded Vancouver entry to be eliminated. Paul Willey, veteran Davis Cup player, lost out Tuesday to Dale Roland of Los Angeles.

Roland himself was bounced from competition Wednesday by another Californian, muscular young Mike Crane of Berkeley, Calif. Crane went easily through the first set 6-2 and held off Roland's determined attack to win the second 14-12.

Toughest Workouts
Canada's only seeded survivors got their toughest workout of the week-long tournament which goes into the quarter-finals today.

Don Fontana of Toronto had trouble with his temperament, his service and, not least of all, a heavy-set visitor from Portland, Ore., Bill Rose. But he mastered them all to move to the quarters.

The second-seeded Fontana scowled fiercely as he faulted and erred but when his control showed through it was enough to carry him to a 17-15, 7-5 decision.

Defending singles titlist Bob Bedard, 26, of Sherbrooke, Que., beat Doyle Perkins of Seattle, 6-3, 7-5 but extended himself further than in any of his previous matches.

Whitney Reed, the top-seeded foreigner from Alameda, Calif., whipped veteran Jim Macken of Vancouver 6-1, 6-1.

The hardest lot among non-Canadians fell to Kosei Kamo, Japanese national champion. Matched against lanky Jim Watson of San Francisco, the stocky Japanese needed three sets to win 7-5, 6-8, 6-3.

Says It Was Wrong To Fine Williams For Spitting

LOS ANGELES (AP)—It was wrong to fine Ted Williams $250 for spitting during a game at Kansas City the other day, says ex-major league manager Leo Durocher.

"I think he was perfectly entitled to spit toward the stands to show his displeasure with the fans," Durocher said in an interview.

"He didn't spit on anyone or insult any one person or throw dirt on them. He was just simply expressing disgust with those who were booing him for not running out a dinky roller when the ball had already reached the first baseman.

"Unless you know Ted Williams you can't fully understand him. I have yet to hear one player knock this man, from either league. This is the most likable guy in baseball. He's unique, one of a kind."

BOOED RUTH TOO!
"People pay to see him and for some reason, to boo Babe Ruth, like they used to boo Babe Ruth. Believe me, baseball should thank its lucky stars it has someone like Ted Williams. Fining him $250 was unjustified."

Durocher, former Dodger and Giant manager now announcing network baseball telecasts, commented on the Williams case during a talk about the problems of the Los Angeles Dodgers. He attributed the club's disappointing showing to the absence of catcher Roy Campanella.

"I think the loss of Campanella is the whole difference," he said. "He ran the whole club on the field."

FRIEND FOR LIFE
SARNIA, Ont. (CP)—Michael Skelton, 9, made a friend for life when he rescued a deserted baby robin. Fed with eye-dropper and tweezers, the bird won't leave the Skeltons' yard. His favorite perch is on Michael's shoulder.

Is Well On Way To Third N.L. Strikeout Title

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Sad Sam Jones is well on his way to his third National League strikeout title by pitching as he always does, "just trying to keep the ball in the park."

The tall righthander of St. Louis Cardinals said Wednesday he rarely tries to strike out anyone.

"The only time I do that is when there's a tight situation, like having a run in scoring position.

Tight situations or not, Jones added seven strikeouts to his record Tuesday night before being lifted for a pinchhitter in Philadelphia Phillies' 3-2, 11-inning win over the Cards in the second game of a doubleheader.

That brought his total for the year to 137, 40 more than runners-up Robin Roberts of the Phils and Johnny Podres of the Los Angeles Dodgers. His won-lost record is 9-7.

In the American League, Bullet Bob Turley of New York Yankees is the leader with 118 strikeouts.

GOOD LUCK FISH
SOUTHAMPTON, Ont. (CP)—Sheepshead, a coarse fish resembling a white bass, are becoming plentiful in the nearby Sauguen River. The fish has two small round bone structures just behind the eyes which Indians once prized—and some anglers now carry—as good luck charms.
