In many cases designers and manufacturers have used wool and wear miracle fibre for their sportswear and the non-wrinkle cotton knits are also popular. The outfit at the left was especially designed for summer wear and features a dashing harem top of 100 per cent cotton and solid shade dacron pants. The top is a multi-colored design against a white background and the pants come in a variety of shades. Second from the left is another outfit that is the latest word in casual wear. The pom-pom sweater of orlon has a white background with vertical stripes in shades to blend with the choice of pants. The stretch pants come in several shades including jet black and shocking pink. The next outfit is for the men and the jaunty red and white stripes accent the light-hearted cardigan of nylon acrylic fibre. A new feature is found in the rounded shank corners of the three button sweater. The relaxing look (far-right), in laminated jackets for men is found in this jacket of textured nylon laminated to polyurethane foam. It features patch pockets and front closing. (Photos by CP)

THE EXPERTS SAY

Even "Ready To Eat" Ham Should Be Cooked More

OTTAWA (CP)—Even though a ham may be marked fully cooked, ready to serve or ready to eat, it should be cooked further to improve the flavor and texture.

"About 10 to 15 minutes a pound in a 325-degree oven will do it," says Bruce Newman, home economist in the consumer section of the agriculture department.

The ready-cooked ham is processed to make it palatable, tender and safe to eat but it is considerably improved by the extra cooking, he says.

Uncooked hams should be baked at the same temperature to the well done stage, which is 170 degrees on a meat thermometer. The time per pound will vary with the weight and type of ham.

For example, a 13-16 pound whole ham should be cooked for 20 to 25 minutes a pound. Other cooking times:

Boneless ham, nine to 12 pounds, 25 to 30 minutes a pound; boneless half ham, four to six pounds, 35 to 40 minutes a pound; half ham (shank or butt), five to eight pounds, 30 to 35 minutes a pound; picnic shoulder, five to seven pounds, 35 to 40 minutes a pound; boneless picnic shoulder, three to five pounds, 40 to 45 minutes a pound; cottage roll (pickled or smoked), four to six pounds, 35 to 40 minutes a pound.

HAMS VARY
A whole ham, averaging 12 to 15 pounds with the bone and skin to 12 pounds without the bone, is ideal for a buffet party or a large family. It can yield 30 or more servings. It should be ordered ahead of time and is often sold in a casing as a skinless defatted ham with some of the bone removed.

The half ham—either butt or shank—is a good size for an average family. The butt has a somewhat larger proportion of lean meat than the shank and is the more economical cut if both are priced the same. Both take well to scoring and glazing.

"Boneless hams are often cut into portions of two or three pounds and suit a small family. They may be baked and glazed or cut into half-inch to one-inch steaks for broiling.

The picnic shoulder and cottage roll are usually more economical than some other cuts but, Miss Newman says, "are no less delicious when given long, slow cooking and an attractive glaze."

When determining the cost, it is best to compare the amount per serving rather than by pound. Allow one-third to one-half pound for each serving from hams with bones. Boneless hams will go further to allow about one-quarter to one-third pound for an average serving.

The glaze is added after the meat is cooked, the rind or casing removed and the fat cut diagonally to form diamonds. For a brown sugar glaze for a half ham combine 1 cup brown sugar; 2 tps. dry mustard; 3 tbsps. vinegar. Spread over meat for 15 minutes, basting once or twice.

BAL TIC
A St. Patrick's Concert was held in the Kingsboro Hall on March 16th sponsored by the East Baltic Junior Farmers. It included such features as music, songs, dialogues and monologues.

Mrs. James Jardine is now convalescing at her home in Kingsboro following treatment for several weeks in the Souris Hospital. Miss Elsie Jardine, Boston, came home to take care of her mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Cooley and son Reid, Charlottetown, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Young, Red Point. Mr. Hilary Halland, East Baltic, is a patient in the Charlottetown Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Robertson and Wayne and Melvin Bruce, Kingsboro, were Sunday visitors with Mr. Albert Bruce who is a patient in the P.E.I. Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Brandon Ball and two children, Charlottetown, were Sunday visitors to South Lake, Bothwell and Red Point. Mrs. Walter Dixon, Mrs. Robert Dixon, East Baltic, were recent business visitors to Montserrat.
