

Canada's NRX Atomic Pile Shut Down By Accident

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's famed NRX experimental atomic energy reactor at Chalk River, Ont., Monday suffered its second most serious accident in eight years of operation.

William J. Bennett, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., announced that the reactor, built at a cost of $11,000,000, was shut down when a special fuel rod, being tested, contaminated the 30-foot atomic pile.

However, Mr. Bennett said the shutdown, expected to last for several weeks, is in no way comparable to the Dec. 12, 1952, breakdown caused by a major power surge in the reactor, located 125 miles northwest of Ottawa.

That accident was so serious that NRX, code name for the pile, had to be completely rebuilt. The reconstruction took 14 months, the reactor going back into operation in February, 1954.

FEW AWARE OF TROUBLE

A spokesman at Chalk River said in a telephone interview that the automatic shutdown control system worked so effectively that few persons at the project knew about the accident until some time after it had happened. There were no injuries.

There was no general warning sounded as was the case in 1952 when radioactive materials spewed from a smoke stack and spread over the project. The stack is used to eject air passed through parts of the reactor as a cooling agent. The spokesman said the accident did not result in the evacuation of any buildings or cause any work stoppage. Workmen were able to remain in the huge room housing the reactor and started repairs immediately.

FEW WEEKS' REPAIRS

The spokesman said it is hard to estimate when the repair work will be completed. He said it is not expected to last more than a few weeks.

"The accident will not affect the departure of scientists from the project to Geneva to attend the atomic energy conference sponsored by the United Nations," he said.

He said the accident did not cause any major damage to the reactor.

Mr. Bennett said automatic devices shut down the box-like reactor immediately the fuel rod began contaminating the reactor's supply of heavy water, one of the materials used to control the activity of the reactor, was dumped into storage tanks.

P. E. Islanders' Picnic In Stanley Park, Vancouver

It is always a grand day when the Prince Edward Islanders get together, and it sure was just that when they held their annual picnic in Stanley Park, Vancouver, B. C., on July 17th. The weatherman cooperated in splendid fashion and brought forth a real hot day from his bag of tricks. However, the gentle breeze blowing over the park from the blue waters of Burrard Inlet kept the atmosphere pleasant and cool, and with the tables in the shade of the majestic firs, loaded down with delectable food, prepared by the women cooks from the Island, everything was perfect.

There were many old timers among the merry crowd and the oldest gentleman was Mr. George Saunders, formerly of South Winslow who was 94, and for a man of his age he enjoyed himself immensely. No one could find out who was the oldest, and felt the youngest among the ladies. They were keeping that to themselves.

Mr. George H. Campbell of Ladner, B. C. was master of ceremonies, and the speakers heard were Angus MacInnis, M.P., Rev. D. M. Sinclair, and George McLean, from Beatons Mills, who came to Vancouver as a passenger on the "Overlander". Rev. Sinclair arrived by plane from Victoria to meet his many friends.

An interesting highlight of the afternoon was a telegram received by Mr. D. J. Bonnell from the Premier of Prince Edward Island, Hon. Alex W. Matheson conveying greetings and best wishes to everyone at the picnic. Rev. Mr. Sinclair had the pleasure of reading the telegram to the gathering, who is appreciation wish to thank the Premier for his kind thoughts and message of greetings was also read. This came from Miss Nora Bruce, R.N., formerly of Valleyfield who is now in Toronto. Nora was sorry that she could not attend the picnic, and be with her island friends.

It was a nice day of fun and enjoyment for all, and as the sun slowly dipped behind the mountains on the North Shore, and evening shadows hovered over Stanley Park, the Islanders went wending their way home after renewing old friendships and pleasant memories of the past.

Mr. G. H. Campbell was formerly from Montague, Rev. Sinclair, Belair, and Angus MacInnis, M.P., Glen Williams.

Jury Finds

such a mission. Coroner Prowse interrupted the dialogue between the jury foreman and the constable, informing the head juror that any recommendations that he wished to make could be included in the verdict arrived at.

Miss Eleanor Elizabeth MacDonal, school teacher who lives at 104 Fitzroy Street, Charlottetown, told of seeing the deceased briefly at the store of Levi McEachern in the town of St. John's, Newfoundland. MacDonal said that she had just gotten gas for her car and was proceeding from McNally's store toward the bridge when McEachern in his truck passed her.

The witness said that she could not estimate the speed of the truck but thought it was more than necessary to pass her. When asked by the coroner whether she saw the truck swerve before it reached the bridge, she replied in the negative.

Miss MacDonal who was accompanied by her brother and sister, stopped her car for a moment to look into the water but she could see nothing of the truck or the driver. She rushed in her house to Martin Driscoll's house pressing the horn all the way. She had Mrs. Driscoll phone the Mounted Police. When she returned to the bridge, Miss MacDonal was still unable to see anything in the water. A sister of Miss MacDonal's, Mrs. Anna Jacqueline MacDonal of Newton Upper Falls, Mass., corroborated the evidence of Miss Eleanor.

Saw Victim's Head & Hand

John Alexander MacDonald, student and third occupant of the MacDonald car said that he was talking to Dan MacEachern in McNally's store. His evidence was the same as his sister's until the time when they arrived at the bridge. Mr. MacDonald said that he was the first out of the car and when he went to the bridge to look over he saw the victim's head and his arm with a wrist watch on it come toward the surface. He turned quickly to get one of the bridge railings to help MacEachern but found on looking the second time that the deceased had gone under and out of sight. Mr. MacDonald on questioning from the coroner said that MacEachern's condition while he was talking to him was normal. "There was absolutely no evidence of drinking," he said.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Levi McNally who talked to the deceased a short time before the ill-fated accident affirmed that Dan MacEachern was absolutely sane and sober.

After deliberating for a short time the jury returned the above verdict.

The second copter transferred a doctor to a high-speed launch in case the first was unable to land on the ship.

The helicopter landed at the Stadacona naval base here and the two men were rushed to Camp Hill Military Hospital by ambulance. Hospital officials said that the man, W. J. At Le Paz the crew also found there was little or no money aboard for supplies.

The ship-agent "left us 26 watermelons and two packs of wiener's. All but three passengers left the Mazatlan when she reached Acapulco, saying they "had enough."
