Prime Minister

But late Thursday, evidently happy at the outcome of his meetings with the disputants, he said to reporters:

"We hope, and I think they hope, there will not have to be any further intervention by the government."

UNION DEMANDS

Union demands are for such benefits as eight paid statutory holidays a year, improved vacation arrangements, higher overtime pay for Sundays and 18 days a year sick leave.

Replying to reporters' questions Thursday, Mr. St. Laurent made it clear he had told the unions they should not expect to get all they have been looking for.

"I told them there were some things they couldn't expect to settle by negotiation and they insisted on them, it was quite useless," he said.

Mr. Hall said the points on which the prime minister gave his views were the issues of paid holidays, vacations and "health and welfare" (sick leave) proposals. "I would make known what Mr. St. Laurent said on particular demands, and Mr. Hall would not say how the six-man union group received the prime minister's statements during an hour's conference.

The railways have turned down the union demands, claiming they could not afford the $60,000,000-a-year cost, and the companies have not publicly indicated any retreat from that stand.
