St. Paul's Anglican Church, Charlottetown, was the scene of a quiet August wedding when Audrey Theresa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Doran Hynes, West Royalty, was united in marriage to Raymond William, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Birt of Covehead Road. Rev. Louis Elias officiated at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Dale Murphy, cousin of the bride was matron of honor and Phillip MacLanin, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. A honeymoon to Niagara Falls followed a reception at the couple's new home at Covehead Road.

Many Talks, Adjustments Seen Need After Marriage

Dear Mary Haworth: To DL, the young wife and mother disheartened about the future of her marriage, since her husband slapped her because he disliked the "tone" of her questioning, wish to say: Have you out-and-out talk with him. Act now to break ground for discussion, clarification and conciliation, to build understanding and mutual accommodation into the marriage. Many adjustments are to be faced in the early years of marriage and all disagreements should be ironed out verbally. If a marriage doesn't become a deliberately worked-at meeting of minds, it is heading for trouble. I have been married 20 years, have three children and it is only during this past year that a partnership spirit has existed. Previously there was never any sharing of either ideas or monies. Looking back I wonder how and why I went along with it. One year ago my husband, displeased by something I said, slapped me several times, saying repeatedly, "I've never done anything like this before." I left the house and didn't return for three days. We've never referred to the episode but he's been devoted and kind ever since, the same man, attentive and caring, who courted me prior to marriage. Ironically, it seems too late for talk between us. There have been so many wasted years. That's why I urge DL to be foresighted. If her husband won't sit down and talk things over, get a marriage counsellor's help. Years back I tried getting my in-laws' help. They told my husband just once that he was wrong. Thereafter they avoided interference — and me. I chose not to consult my folks, who

ELLEN'S DIARY

Each Fallen Leaf Leaves Behind Tight Folded Buds

"Is there, after all, any best season?" we wondered this morning, when by the pantry window we sifted four into the bread pan, with which to make our loaves. Was summer our favorite? It surely has its charms: the long days with extended hours of daylight, its freshness and flowerings; the shimmering rivers and seas, the singing dimpling brooks; the daisied fields and be-cloved, the evenings when one may loiter out of doors, watching the twilight shadows creep in gently over the farmlands. Yes exceedingly good, the summer season was... And the Autumn, what of it? It too was delightful — and beautiful beyond the telling, or describing with brush or pen. Its painted trees, in faultless placings and colorings, its mellowing sunshine and azure skies, the lingering echoes that in our quiet days come in over the rim of valley — so very much the autumn gives us in blessing, not the least of which on farms is the adequate supplies in loft and bin. So that it, too, is a favorite among seasons. Is it as one said with a sigh recently, "Pretty? Yes, but a time when Death's imprint is over all?" Not so to everyone. Only an interval of rest, we find it ushers in, since every fallen leaf leaves behind its tight-folded buds on the twigs, in warrant of springtime life. And what of the winter? It too is a beautiful time, and enjoyable to us, in that it seems to accent more the home life. There is the comfort of the hearthfire and lamplight, the doors closed against the frosts and snows. There is the peace of the fields in quiet rest beneath the coverlet of white. And, if all be well, even a winter-storm is not unlovely, when the wind-driven drifts in blown white sweep along the countryside.

SELECTING CHAIRS FOR YOUR LIVING ROOM

Many people select chairs because they are lovely to look at. Others select chairs strictly for comfort. The smart buyer buys chairs that combine both beauty and comfort.

This is not always as simple as it sounds. Generally, the wife will select chairs for design, color and co-ordination with everything else in the room. The husband will want chairs that he can sink into, stretch his legs out on.

Fortunately, the average living room has room for several chairs that can please all parties concerned. Just like a suit of clothes or a dress, a chair can "fit" the person who is going to use it. That's a good thing to keep in mind when you buy chairs.

Very often chairs are nice when used in matching pairs. This is not only a matter of attractive decor, but has its practical side, too, in making conversation groups. Many people are more at ease talking to each other while sitting in separate chairs than they are when sitting together on a sofa.

One of the attractive ways to group a pair of chairs is to use a wedge or pie-shaped table between them. This makes for a curved grouping instead of lining up the two chairs and the table straight against the wall. We invite you to see our latest selection of living room chairs, and talk over with us decorating ideas on using chairs in your living room to get both beauty and comfort.

So whether you like your chairs large or small, our decorators here at Crockett & Storey, 134 Kent St., are at your service without cost or obligation. Open Fridays until 9 p.m.

Dear P.A.: Your sad story, of a peace treaty tacitly achieved almost too late in life to work any radical improvement in your marriage, strongly corroborates the gist of my commentary to DL.

It appears that you pursued for 19 years the very pattern of mistaken action that I advised DL to beware of, namely, mistake of trying to gloss over, "forget," sweep under the rug or dissociate herself from her true feelings of anger and revulsion evoked by her husband's unfair behavior.

Very likely your eventual emotional breakdown stemmed, in part at least, from your long-time self-rejecting efforts to adjust to your husband's dictatorial pitch, as by swallowing your pride, forfeiting your self-respect, dignity of spirit, etc., as his price for keeping the peace superficially.

Your breakdown probably was a blessing in disguise, marking the turning point towards a new deal in your married experience, inasmuch as it brought you to the attention of a able doctor, who grasped the gist of your problem, managed to revive your self-confidence, helped you to recognize and coordinate your conflicted feelings and generally gave you a reborn sense of integrity and worth.

Hence, later, when your misguided husband slapped your face, in retaliation for an unprecedented hint of wifely defiance, you could take forthright action to express the outrage you felt, even if forbidden to speak. And so you walked out and stayed away for three days. And he got the message loud and clear, and has been charming ever since.

As to why it took your husband so long to keep faith with his marriage vow to "love, honor and cherish," possibly the answer is, because it took you that long to discover you didn't intend to know to further brooding.

As I said to DL, in coping with injustice, don't become a mask-wearing emotional cripple and moral coward. M.H.
