Successful Baptist Concert in S' side

The Trinity Mr. and Mrs. Club variety concert, held on Wednesday, March 12th, in the Baptist Hall, Summerside, was enthusiastically received by a full house. The programme sparkled in contrast to the storm outside.

All hearts were warmed by the opening chorus "Dixieland", and fun and laughter on the stage and in the audience kept everyone in a cheerful mood, more serious numbers being interwoven throughout the interesting programme.

Candy was sold during the intermission and a delicious lunch served to the cast by other members of the club after the performance. Mrs. J. S. Jerry, who has assisted the club concerts on numerous occasions with her refreshing readings, was presented with a beautiful pastel bouquet by little Miss Carol MacLean. Mrs. Perry graciously thanked the members for their thoughtfulness.

Every assistance was given by the members of the Baptist Church to promote the success of the concert, and the cast and audience in their efforts and encouragement received the gratifying thanks of the club.

Inquest At S' side Into Airman's Death

At an inquest at Summerside last evening a Coroner's jury presided over by Dr. Austin Delaney, meeting to inquire into the cause of death of an airman, accidentally shot last night at the Esquevink by trouncing the Freetown boys by the decisive score of 7-2.

The league moguls, all ready to present the trophies, spoons, etc., were forced to pack away the silverware until next Tuesday night when the two teams will resume hostilities.

Garnett Howatt came through with the "hat trick" for the winners and his linemate, MacFarlane, got two covers, Cutcliffe and Carruthers, fired on each Taylor and Simmons shot the Freetown tallies. Cutcliffe and Mutart were a tower of strength on the Cape blue-line, and young Miller in the cage played one of his best games.

The contest was clearly played but a wild melee threatened at the conclusion of the game when Delaney and Howatt tried to close-in for fastbreaks, and other players surged around to support them.

The referees and other officials succeeding in restoring order however.

Desires Actions

Harold Prestley Roberts, clerk at R.C.A.F. Station Summerside, told of going to the barrack room on Oct 1 Somers about 12:30 p.m. of day of fatal shooting, to inform him he had purchased ammunition for Somers' automatic pistol. In company with Somers' room mate, the three returned to the barrack room, taking the pistol with them.

After testing ammunition in barrel to see if it would fit, he watched Somers loading the magazine clip with 7 rounds of ammunition, and trying to eject them without much success, however, by moving the magazine faster.

He watched Somers reload the magazine clip and again repeat the process of ejecting the cartridges. After all ammunition was apparently ejected, he saw Somers remove the ammunition clip from the gun and lay gun and clip on the mattress on the floor.

As he had seen what he believed to be the last shell ejected, and as the clip had been removed from the gun the witness picked up the gun to look at it and doing so the gun went off.

At the time he did not notice the hole in the wall made by the bullet but on immediately going out into the hall he observed McGuire at the door to his room. McGuire told him he had been shot, and asked to be taken to the hospital. McGuire then walked to his desk and tried to tear a page from the pad on which he had been writing. He then collapsed, and did not respond to questions asked him about his injuries. Witness then helped to carry McGuire to hospital.

In response to a question by a jury member he said he did not remember pulling the trigger, and knew now it was the empty shell that he had ejected. McGuire had understood he was being organized, he already being an active member of a rifle club.

Andrew Robert Burgess, R.C.A.F., gave evidence that was substantially the same as that given by Roberts and Somers. His evidence included a statement that he, too, had seen Somers pull back the ejector several times after shells stopped coming out, before he laid gun down to gather up shells.

Paul Francis Hickey, R.C.A.F., also in room at time of shooting gave evidence similar to that given by the previous witnesses.

Constable Ray M. Stunden, R.C.M.P., gave evidence concerning the police investigation, and submitted photographs, diagrams, measurements, and the bullet that was removed from the body of the deceased.

Cape Traverse In 7-2 Victory Over Freetown

Facing elimination from the South Shore Hockey League finals, having lost two straight to the Freetown Royals, the Cape Traverse Rovers roared back into contention last night at the Esquevink by trouncing the Freetown boys by the decisive score of 7-2.

The league moguls, all ready to present the trophies, spoons, etc., were forced to pack away the silverware until next Tuesday night when the two teams will resume hostilities.

DEFENCE CONTRACTS

He did not think we had a right to expect defence contracts as raw materials would have to be shipped here and then the finished product returned to an assembling plant. The transportation cost would not make it feasible. Anyway defence projects might fold up within four years unless there was a war and he advised the Legislature to concentrate on starting something that would go on for a long time.

His philosophy on this point was loudly applauded on both sides of the House.

The Department of Industry and Natural Resources was a great thing, he felt, and it was especially valuable to the farmers in clearing land and helping them in many other ways. As a result of the help it gave there were many new buildings going up in the country and that indicated the prosperity of the people.

It was also a boon to fishermen as without the draggers there would be no fish plants and people today "do not want to eat salt fish." They want their fish fresh. Asked by Dr. MacMillan if the fish still could not be sold during Lent he replied that he understood "your people have changed that so you are not required to eat so much now."

Then too, he said, the strawberry growers and the smelt fishermen could not get along without the cold storage facilities provided by the department.

After first complimenting Hon. Douglas Mackinnon on his fine work he ripped into the Minister for the fact that King's County had only 8 plows working there while the other two counties had 28 between them. He reminded the Attorney General of an earlier remark that his Prince County district was the banner of the Province by saying "it ought to be, you get everything there."

When Mr. Douglas concluded his part in the debate the adjournment was moved by Mr. Hubert Gaudet, First Prince, who will have the floor when the Legislature meets again at 3 p.m. Monday.

SCORES

Continued from page 8. "lonaires" getting into the farm business and said they were just speculators. One in Nova Scotia had 250,000 hens, he stated, and added "it is no wonder the price of eggs is low." He said they should stay out of farming and put their money into plants which would help the farmers.

Best In World: The Government had done much for agriculture in this Province he thought, and as a result of its efforts the P. E. I. hog was known as the best bacon hog in the world.

He did not agree with the Opposition Leader's proposal to lend young farmers money to get established on farms. Not many here would want to take it as it would cost about $15,000 to properly establish themselves and they could never pay the interest let alone the principal. He maintained the time to get the young farmers interested in remaining on the farms was when the Conservatives were in power. "Everything was low then and as Mr. Saville once said you could buy cows for $60 a dozen."

Mr. Douglas felt the young men were not leaving the farms because of that, but because of the greater attractions offered by industry elsewhere. He said he had a son in Ontario earning $75 a 40-hour week. The farm cannot compete with that. He rather favored the young men going into industry for a couple of years. Then if they saved their money they could return and buy farms of their own with only small help from the Government.

Dr. MacMillan said if the young men were to return and asked the speaker if he advocated their going there. Mr. Douglas replied that "Ontario is part of Canada too" and said it was time people here took a broader outlook.
