dislike of segregation.
Coun. Johnstone said that if any group wanted favors it should pay for them rather than force a charge on the general tax payers.

More Space Needed
At the beginning of the discussion Mayor Stewart said that real estate cannot stand any more tax increase so the matter of the cost of a high school came down to a straight school tax per person. Coun. McCormac asked what would happen if the Council decided that it could not finance a school. He was told by Mayor Stewart that if the School Board goes ahead the Council must provide the money. He admitted that there was a definite need for more space for pupils.

Councillor Elmer MacDonald asked how much space was required and the Mayor stated that the schools were crowded now and the peak of pupil attendance would not be reached until 1958.
Coun. McCormac agreed with the necessity and said that the longer the building were put off the more expensive it would be. He noted that a "patch up" job on the schools could be done now, but wondered what good such action would be. In general all Councillors were opposed to any action to tax a real estate with Coun. Farmer saying there was too heavy a burden now. Coun. MacDonald wondered how a proposed poll tax of $15 or $20 could be collected for school purposes on a 100 percent citizen basis when the present tax caused so much collection difficulty.

Plebiscite Asked
Coun. MacDonald was not in favor of the Council taking any definite action on its own and specifically requested that a plebiscite be held to determine the wishes of the populace. Mayor Stewart replied "You mean we should go to the citizens and ask if they want to pay more taxes?"
Mr. K. M. Martin, Q.C., City Recorder, reminded the Council that there were many legal problems involved and that the School Act was specific in its language that the schools should be strictly non-sectarian. However, he being that in practice this did not hold true in the city and it was being avoided through the ownership by the Catholic Church of its own schools.
Councillor Gormley opposed the imposition of a poll tax for school purposes as he stated there were many who simply could not pay the additional amount.

Coun. MacDonald asked would the School Board, with its overriding authority, still proceed with the erection of a new school or

Victoria Holds Coronation Celebration

At 3:00 p.m. the school children of Victoria planted a Manitoba Maple tree in the school grounds to commemorate the crowning of Her Gracious Majesty Elizabeth II.

Rev. Mr. Ebery of the local Church of England addressed the gathering and instilled in the minds of young and old the significance of the Crown. After a number of patriotic songs were sung the children, paraded to the hall under the supervision of Mr. Ken MacLean, a veteran of World War I, where they participated in the planting of another tree near the cenotaph.

After listening to the Queen's address the children were treated with confectionery by the community.

In the evening a large gathering congregated at the community hall where inspiring addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. Kallam of Tryon and Rev. Mr. Baxter of Hampton. Mr. Keith Boswell, president of the local branch of the Canadian Legion capably performed the duties of chairman. All the number on the programme were well applauded by the appreciative audience, but special mention might be given to Miss Ruth Boswell and the dance "Pop Goes the Weasel" by a group of Junior children. After singing God Save the Queen, ice cream and cake were served to all present.

Square dancing to the music of the Boswell Orchestra ended the activities of the day.

schools if the citizens said through a plebiscite that they did not wish such a program. Mayor Stewart replied that in such an eventuality "You would be looking for a new School Board."

Coun. Storey reminded members that while the Council had to consider a great many matters the Board had only one problem and could concentrate on it. For this reason they had greater technical knowledge of the needs than Council members. If they found a new school necessary then it was the task of the Council to find the money.

Asks Complete Cost
Coun. Cudmore was not in favor of an decision being reached until the Board brought in complete plans with their cost and maintenance expenses of both one and two schools.

Coun. MacDonald wondered why the Board had first brought in a recommendation for only one school and then had later asked for the erection of two. Coun. Farmer said that according to the report of the Board there was only a small difference between the proposed cost of one and two schools and he believed the slight difference would be worthwhile for the sake of achieving harmony. He agreed there was no legal basis for such sectarian planning, but he said there was a traditional basis in this city. He also said that Catholics would not build if only one school were built. Coun. MacDonald asked him if that were only a personal opinion or an official one. Coun. Farmer replied that it was an official opinion. He did not elaborate.

Coun. McCormac said it was the duty of the Council as it was of any governing body to promote harmony and the school system in operation in this city had done so. Mayor Stewart said the present system had been in vogue too long. The City cannot afford to build two schools and he expressed his determination to oppose such a plan. He said it was the primary duty of the Council to administer the money of the citizens to the best of the Council's ability regardless of religion. "I do not and will not favor the building of two schools when it will cost the taxpayers extra."

Motion Carried
On a formal standing vote Mr. Johnstone's reply to the School Board was carried with Counors Farmer, Gormley and McCormac opposing.

The text of the reply follows: "Having studied the various representations made by the School Board of the City with reference to the need for increased school accommodation, the Council wishes to go on record as follows:
"We have confidence in the School Board, and we commended them for their ardent desire to provide for the best school service possible for the City.
"We appreciate their willingness to consult with the Council and to keep us informed from time to time as to their plans and ask that this policy be continued.
"Realizing that the Council has neither the expert knowledge nor the legal right to deal with matters of policy as effecting the schools we wish to make it clear that we have no intention of advising the Board in matters of policy.
"The Council considers that in view of the undoubted need for improved and extended school facilities the Board should proceed immediately under the authority vested in them by law, with the building programme in keeping with the need on one hand and with the present economic status, of the other. In exercising this view the Council wishes to go on record as opposing any building programme which would result in greater costs to the taxpayer due to additional building or buildings to meet the wishes of any particular group.
"In connection with the costs of a building programme this Council gives assurance that it is prepared to seek legislation which will enable it to raise the necessary funds on a fair and equitable basis."

Three Prisoners Escape From Prince Co. Jail

Arthur Cannon, Ensor Perry and Frederick Peters last evening escaped from the Prince County Jail after attacking Roy Grady, the assistant jailer, and taking the keys from him. All three prisoners have participated in previous jail breaks and are awaiting trial for this offence.

Last evening's escape was made about 8:00 P. M. when Mr. Grady was locking up a prisoner for the night in their cells.

The prisoners who escaped had been under close arrest since their last escape and it had been the custom to permit them access to the bathroom in making a nightly cleanup of their cells. Immediately after releasing them, Mr. Grady reported he was attacked by Cannon who struck him a heavy blow in almost indistinct when first she spoke.

In the later responses, her voice was firm and steady.
"The things which I have here promised, I will perform and keep," she said emphatically.

The service moved on. The Bible, "the most valuable thing that this world affords," was presented to her.

The essentially-religious and infrequently-mentioned passages of the Coronation ceremony were solemnized in the Communion. The Queen was anointed with holy oil on hands, breast and head.

Then the articles of the regalia—the sword, the armills (bracelets), stole royal and robe royal, the orb, the ring and the sceptre were brought to her.

Each had a special symbolism. The robes clothed her in majesty and the prayer was that God would clothe her in righteousness. The orb signified "that the whole world is subject to the power and empire of Christ the Redeemer." The ring meant dignity and faith. The sceptre signified her to justice and to protect widows and orphans.

Suddenly, in this part of the ceremony, sunshine touched the abbey.

A great golden shaft of light came through the windows high above. It rested on the peers and peeresses and blazed out the soft glow of the electric lamps focussed on the rose-and-gold throne. A rustle of surprise and pleasure ran through the immense audience.

Then the sunshine disappeared, but it came back again, twice, before Elizabeth was crowned.

Having been crowned, and holding the slim golden sceptre in her right hand and the rod with dove in the left, the Queen moved from King Edward's throne to the throne where she would receive the homage.

She walked slowly, with bishops at each elbow. The crown on her head glittered with each step.

Westminster Abbey is built in the shape of a cross. At the intersection of nave and transept, a dais was placed, with five echeveried tiers, like a flattened pyramid. The throne was on top.

Peers were on the Queen's right, peeresses on her left. Each formed a solid block of color. A pattern of crimson shot through with white, they resembled a field of flowers and the glitter of coronets was like dew sparkling in the sunshine.

She was assisted into the throne—also a symbolic gesture signifying loyalty—by the bishops and the principal officers of state.

Then the archbishop paid his homage.

Next came the Duke of Edinburgh. The all, and contrasted with his fair hair. Removing his coronet, he knelt before his wife, placed his hands between her hands and said: "I, Philip of Edinburgh, do become your liege man of life and limb, and of earthly worship; and faith and truth I will bear unto you, to live and die against all manner of folks. So help me God."

Rising, he touched the crown with his right hand and bent to kiss the Queen's left cheek.

The Duke of Gloucester and Kent followed, and then the senior representatives of the peers. The formula was the same for each, but instead of kissing Elizabeth's cheek, they kissed her right hand.

Prayers followed, setting forth the invitation, the General Confession, the Absolution, the prayer of Humble Access, the prayer of Consecration and Communion.

For the Communion the Queen and her husband advanced together to the steps of the altar and knelt as the steps and wife. The archbishop administered the bread and the Dean of Westminster the cup.

The choir sang: "O, taste and see, how gracious the Lord is. Blessed is the man that trusteth in Him."

The high, sweet voices of boys mingled with deeper tones of the men's choir. Throughout the services, music welled upward from an orchestra and frequently from the mighty voice of the pipe organ.

That part of the service ended with the Te Deum Laudamus, "We praise Thee, O God."

After that, the Queen retired to the chapel. There she placed the sceptre and rod on the altar and, removing the crown of St. Edward, put the lighter Queen's crown on her head.

Her robes were changed so that, leaving the abbey, she was dressed in purple velvet.

Rain began to fall again as the Queen and her husband started back to the palace, but the excitement and cheering was by no means dampened. If anything, it was greater than when the Queen's coach had passed going the other way. The Queen was radiant and smiling.

Glittering Procession

Fine Library Concert At Crapaud Hall

The annual library concert held at Crapaud hall last night was a great success. It was attended by a large and appreciative audience. The program began with a short address on the occasion by the chairman, Mr. John H. Myers, followed by "God Save the Queen" and "O Canada."

Solos "Coronation Bell" and "God Save Her Majesty" were rendered by Miss John Howatt. This was followed by two one-act plays, "Old Ladies Home" by Crapaud ladies and "Mistrooms Coming Up" by the Tryon Dramatic Club.

Two step-dancing numbers by Miss Mary MacDonald, P. E. I. champion last year, and her brother, Clifford MacDonald were greatly enjoyed.

The "Happy Gang" from Hampton gave a delightful number. "Waiting Matilda" His Deanna Bell from DeSable sang as a solo "Your Cheating Heart."

The concert came to a close with the singing of "Hearts of Oak" and "Land of Hope and Glory."

A repeat performance will be given tonight with new numbers including a one-act play, "The Operation Cold Sure" a drama festival award, a number of musical numbers by Victoria performers and dancing.

Proceeds from the concert go to maintain the public library at Crapaud.

coach rolled through the decorated streets in a wide circuit back to the palace.

The coach carrying the Earl of Athlone, former Governor-General of Canada, and Princess Alice got stuck several times and the resulting scramble squeezed the coach carrying Churchill out of the procession. It managed to get back in at the end.

Appears On Balcony
Back at the palace, Elizabeth immediately made an appearance on the balcony with her family. At the sight of her, the crowds ripped police lines apart and surged up to the gill-tipped iron pickets of the palace fence.

Prince Charles clung to his mother, apparently frightened by the tumult below. Nevertheless, at her urging, he waved to the crowds and they responded with an explosion of cheering.

In the skies overhead, a flight of RAF and RCAF jets suddenly thundered toward the palace. As they passed, the Queen put her arm around the little boy and pointed up at them.

Little Princess Anne, 2, joined the waving. The Duke beamed. Behind them, the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret smiled and occasionally waved.

About an hour later, in response to persistent and ever-louder calls, the Queen again appeared on the balcony. This time, she stayed only a few minutes.

The palace windows were dark after that except for a few on the east wing. Still the crowd went on calling and cheering.

Prince Charles Appears
It got a reaction, not from the Queen, but again from impish Prince Charles, who apparently has been leading his nurse a merry chase all week.

He suddenly pulled aside the drapes and appeared at the window, with his sister. They got in one wave before the nurse recaptured them and the curtains closed.

The Queen made her third appearance on the floodlit palace balcony at 8:45 p.m. and the crowd cheered hysterically. The Duke of Edinburgh, who had discarded his admiral's uniform and was wearing a dinner jacket and black tie, stood smiling one pace behind her.

The Queen, fishing a beaming smile, looked much more rested than in earlier appearances. She had removed the state crown and was wearing a glittering diamond tiara. A light shawl topped her Coronation gown to protect her against the evening chill.

Elizabeth and Philip stayed on the balcony only a few minutes. Before she left, the Queen threw a switch which flooded the nearby Mall, London's main processional thoroughfare.

or King of Canada.
The Administrator in concluding stated that Elizabeth the Second, Queen of Canada, is "more than a mere symbol to her subjects; she is a woman whom we ourselves have seen and loved. She has not merely won our loyal allegiance for what she stands for, she has won our lasting affection for what she is."

Mayor Stewart
Presiding at the ceremonies yesterday was City Councillor M. Alban Farmer, co-chairman of the Coronation committee, who introduced the guest speakers. Mayor J. D. Stewart said that like the first Elizabeth and Queen Victoria the new ruler comes to the Throne in the freshness and vigor of youth. He also noted that "she has her father's strong moral sense, blended with her mother's charm." And he said she had something of the will of the late Queen Victoria who once declared to a Minister: "I was brought up to know what was right and what was wrong. Never let me hear the word 'expedient' again!"

Mayor Stewart traced the history of the Crown since 1066 when William the Conqueror was enthroned and said that despite beliefs of casual readers of history the Queen still maintains a great deal of authority and remains yet the "Foundation of Justice." He also told the gathering that she is "the unimpeachable figure of all that is good in government; her crown is

Alberton Lady Winner Of The "Jumbo Jackpot"

Miss Helen Hardy, Alberton, is richer by one hundred dollars today, the result of winning the Canada Packers' Jumbo Jackpot Monday evening.

Miss Hardy, the fourth person called, answered the phone correctly by stating "York New Process Corn". It was a highly excited and happy young lady who accepted the one hundred dollar cheque from Mr. Lloyd MacLeod, Canada Packers salesman later that night.

While Miss Hardy was the winner Monday, three earlier phone calls were incorrectly answered.

They were 7002, 8163 and 2882, Summerside. The numbers were picked by Mrs. Gordon Raynor, President of the I.O.D.E.

The winner of the first one hundred dollars was Miss Elsie Hickox, Canoe Cove. The contest continues for eight weeks. More and more people are learning to play "Jumbo Jackpot." The next contest will appear in (today's) Guardian and the names of another of Canada Packers' products will be the word with which to answer the telephone next Monday evening between 6:30 and 7:30.

Colorful Ceremonies At S'side Yesterday

In Queen Elizabeth Park in Summerside, recently dedicated and named in honor of Her Majesty, yesterday ceremonies were held to celebrate the coronation of Queen Elizabeth the Second.

Possibly the largest parade ever to be formed up in Summerside moved off at 1:05 P.M. from the Canadian Legion Home composed of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, ex-service men, Air Cadets, Scouts, Girl Guides, Cubs and Brownies. Headed by two bands, the P. E. I. Regiment band and the band from the R. C. A. F. Station, Summerside, as well as a color guard from the Airport, the parade marched up Water to Central Street and was augmented by the children of St. Mary's Academy and the Summerside High School as it proceeded to Queen Elizabeth Park.

To open the ceremonies, the new flag pole at the park was officially dedicated and the flag unveiled by a pupil from the High School and St. Mary's Academy.

Ven. Archdeacon G. R. Harrison delivered the address in which he reminded the vast audience that it was mainly through the efforts of the children that the flag pole was obtained. He spoke of the honor due the flag which he said symbolizes the liberty for which our nation stands.

At the sounding of "The Alert" by the trumpeters, the flag was slowly raised to the top of the new flag pole.

At the conclusion of the address and dedication prayer, seven aircraft, timed to a split second, flew overhead.

Following the dedication of the flag pole the ceremonies moved to the ball diamond of the park where hundreds of school children were seated in the bleachers especially reserved for them. Here each child, who had been supplied with a flag, took the places assigned to them, and the overall scene as viewed from a distance was most impressive, the scarlet tunics of the R. C. M. P. adding color to an occasion that was long live in the memory of those who were present.

Seated on the speakers stand were His Worship, Mayor Henry W. Wedge and members of his council, Group Captain A. G. Kenyon, commanding officer, R.C.A.F. Station, Summerside, J. Watson MacNaught, M.P., Miss Wanda Wyatt, Regent I.O.D.E., Hon. W. E. Darby, attorney general of the Province.

Mayor Wedge opened the ceremonies at the diamond with a brief address in which he returned thanks to Providence for the giving of a fair day. He thanked Councillor H. E. Clark and the members of the Coronation committee for the splendid way in which they had carried out their duties and said that it was due in a great measure to their efforts that the ceremonies were carried out with such precision.

In his talk he stressed the importance of patriotism and said that the people of this great country must never falter in their allegiance to the Queen.

Hon. W. E. Darby delivered the main address of the afternoon and he spoke of the great ceremony which had taken place in London during the morning in which Queen Elizabeth had been crowned. He traced the history of our system of government from the days when the English barons wrested the Magna Carta from King John down to the present day when we enjoy a democracy within a monarchy, a government of the people, by the people for the people.

During the balance of the afternoon and evening athletic events consisting of baseball and softball were the order of the day.

Due to the heavy down pour of rain which occurred during the late evening the huge fireworks display and the bonfire which were scheduled to be held had to be cancelled.—S.

Park Corner Wins Prize At Kensington Parade

A competition between 29 schools for the prize of being the most gaily decorated group was one of the highlights of a Coronation Day celebration at Kensington yesterday. Park Corner school received the prize in this competition and judges said the selection was difficult to make because of the exceptionally fine effort made by all competing schools.

The parade, led by the Reserve Army, moved away from the Kensington athletic field on a route a symbol standing above creeds and parties.

Royal Salute
The ceremonies opened here with the firing of a Royal Salute of 21 guns from old Fort Edward, Victoria Park, at noon. The Salute was under command of Capt. F. W. Smith and with him were Lieut. Col. R. D. MacNeil, Lieut. J. McKenna, WO 2 Ralph Dennis, Sgt. W. Dennis and Sgt. A. Westergard. In the gun crews were Sgt. A. Dalziel, Staff Sgt. Robert King, Sgt. L. Duffy, Sgt. R. M. Carr, Bombardiers R. G. Gillespie, E. G. Dennis, A. E. Gauthier, C. B. Power, J. E. A. Gauthier, A. Steele, R. Walsh and Gunner L. J. Doiron.

When the ceremony ended the parade reformed and marched back to the city with the army units returning to the Armouries where the parade was addressed by Lieut. Col. A. W. Rogers, officer commanding the parade. He told the troops that they had made a splendid turnout and on behalf of Brig. W. W. Reid, C.M.C., he thanked them for "a great show."

In the parade to the Exhibition Grounds as well as the Army units were troops from H.M.C.S. Queen Charlotte and R.C.S.C.C. Kent, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, the three school Cadet Corps, and their bands from West Kent, Queen Square and Prince Street.

Pipers Get Attention
Attracting a great deal of attention was the Lads and Lassies Pipe Band with the two tiny leading pipers drawing rounds of applause. The band was led by Pipe Major Wilfred Burke. A large number of members of the Canadian Legion attended to reaffirm the loyalty they had displayed through their service to the Crown in two world wars.

On the grounds among the thousands of spectators were Cubs and Brownies and many women's organizations. Seated on the platform were His Excellency James Boyle, Bishop of Charlottetown, Senator J. Walter Jones, Senator George Barbour, Premier A. W. Matheson, Mr. Justice George J. Tvedy, R.C.M.P. Inspector N. W. Churchill, Chief of Police Charles MacArthur, members of the City Council, Mr. Ian Burnett, Bell, Mr. Gordon MacDonald and the Reece Band which rendered several selections during the afternoon as well as playing during the two parades. They were led by Bandmaster Thomas MacFarlane and were under command of Major R. H. Mahar.

City Police were on traffic duty all afternoon as the number of vehicles, in the words of a veteran traffic officer, made conditions "worse than Old Home Week ever was". At the Grounds City Firemen maintained order and assisted in many other duties. They also took part with their vehicles in the parade.
