The bidding:

1 ♣	1 ♦	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠

Opening lead—seven of diamonds.

It is just as much a part of the game for declarer to exercise deception to make a contract which cannot be made on its merits, as it is to make a contract merely because of a superabundance of high cards.

Here is a hand played by the late Sidney Wirt, of Boston, where he managed to throw enough high-powered dust in the eyes of the defense to bring home a four spade contract which otherwise would have been defeated.

The bidding was perhaps spotty, but the final contract was moderately acceptable. West led the seven of diamonds.

It is apparent, looking at all four hands, that South must go down against the best defense He has two hearts, a diamond, and a club to lose. But Wirt succeeded in selling West a bill of goods which he purchased without question.

Declarer played the queen of diamonds from dummy on the opening lead and East won with the king. The Queen play was the first step of a scheme to steal the hand.

East returned the deuce of hearts. Again wirt selected the best card to play—the queen of hearts—to induce West to go wrong in the defense.

And go wrong West did. He returned the four of diamonds and it was all over but for the details. Wirt won with the ace, cashed the A-K of spades, discarded the ten of hearts on the ten of diamonds, and then ruffed a heart.

After drawing Wests trumps, declarer led a club to the ace and a club back towards the queen, thus making ten tricks.

The purpose of the queen of diamonds play was to plant the idea in West's mind that East had the jack. Had Wirt, on the heart return, played his ten, West would have won with the jack and almost surely would have cashed the ace. As it was, though, with Wirt playing the queen, West was reluctant to return a heart from the J-3.

High class larceny, we calls it.
