An Unworthy Trick.
In a recent Pall Mall Gazette we find a good story of a landed proprietor in Switzerland, who was very much interested in a railway matter upon which the district where he was landed had to vote. He wanted it to vote affirmatively, and so he let it be generally understood that every voter would become the recipient of a liberal hamper of wine, provided there was no negative vote to be found in the ballot box. The number of voters, including the great man himself, totaled 108, and on the day when the voting was to be taken every one of them went to the poll. Not only that, but every one of that crowd went to the poll with the conviction that that hamper of wine was good as in his cellar. Their disgust, therefore, may be readily imagined when the ballot box was found to contain 107 affirmative papers and one negative. To the imagination also must be left the language in which their feelings found expression when they arrived at the certainty that the landed proprietor had landed them by giving that vote himself.

Too Classic For Them.
A resident in a small suburban town quite a long distance from Boston had a visit from a German friend who knew very little English but played the violin well. One of this resident's neighbors gave a "musical evening," and of course he and his visitor were invited. The German took his violin, and when his turn came he played one of his best pieces, from one of the great masters. When he had finished, there was an awkward silence and no applause. The people were still looking expectantly at the German, who looked disappointed and flustered. The silence grew painful. Finally the hostess, quite red in the face, edged over to the side of the German's friend.

"Can't you get him to?" she whispered.

"What do you mean?"

"Why, now that he's got tuned up, isn't he going to play something?"—Youth's Companion.

A Kangaroo Colony Near London.
If we were to break suddenly upon a London cyclist and tell him that within 20 miles of his great city there was a colony of wild kangaroos, he would probably either regard us as perverters of the truth or of being in immediate need of a straitjacket. Yet we are assured on the highest authority that such is the case, the colony existing on Leith Hill common. About 14 years ago some kangaroos escaped from Wootton House, where they had been kept in confinement. They took up their quarters near Leith hill and have remained and multiplied there ever since. It seems strange that such emblems of the far west should exist in a wild state where the great throb of London might almost be felt and where the hum of the wheel during the summer months is almost an unceasing song.—London Bicycling News.

A Theological Point.
That jovial Irishman and sturdy Calvinist, The Rev. John Hombpall, was having a stiff discussion with a Roman Catholic fellow countryman respecting the propriety of the prayers for the dead, the pastor of Calvary church, of course, opposing the practice. Neither of the controversialists would yield an inch. Finally the layman tried a specious argument:

"Now, doctor," he said, "if one of your parishioners should die and bequeath you $50,000, wouldn't you pray for him?"

"No, sir," replied the stalwart defender of his faith, positively. "I wouldn't pray for him. But I would pray for another like him!"—San Francisco News Letter.

One of Muller's Anecdotes.
Froode and Kingsley were special favorites of Professor Max Muller, according to his recently published memoirs. Kingsley's refusal to pray for rain—or, as his friend expresses it, to degrade his sacred office to that of a rainmaker or a medicine man—reminds the professor of a story told to Kingsley by an American:
In America we manage these things better. A clergyman in a village on the frontier between two of our states prayed for rain. The rain came, and it soaked the ground to such an extent that the young lambs in the neighboring state caught cold and died. An action was brought against the clergyman for the mischief he had done, and he and his parishioners were condemned to pay damages to the sheep farmers. They never prayed for rain after that.—London News.

One of His "Whist Days."
Andrew Lang once called at the house of the late James Payn to inquire about his health. The servant informed him in a broad accent that it was one of the novelist's "whist days." Mr. Lang imagined that the servant referred to Mr. Payn being worse and expressed his regret and walked away. But the woman meant to say that it was the day on which Mr. Payn was wont to receive three old friends, who made a four at whist. Both gentlemen were amused at the mistake which deprived each of the pleasure of meeting. At the Reform club in years gone by there was a certain group of well known whist players, among whom James Payn was certain to be found enjoying "the rigor of the game."

Novel Mensuration.
One of the difficulties in the way of acquiring exact information in Georgia courts is thus indicated by the Atlanta Constitution:
"How far was it," asked the lawyer of the witness, "from your house to the road where 'se difficulty occurred?"
" 'Bout a acre en a half, sub."
"I mean how many yards?"
" 'De wasn't any yards dere at all, sub, exceptin of my yard, en dat wuz 'bout a acre en a half tum de road!"

THE ONLY HOPE!

For Victims of Bright's Disease is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Not a day passes on which the newspapers do not record the death of one or more persons from Bright's Disease. Already its victims number hundreds of thousands. Day by day the awful total grows larger. No class is safe from this destroyer.

War and intemperance, with all their miseries and fatalities, are not responsible for as many deaths as have been caused by Bright's Disease. Yet, there is a way of resisting it; of drawing its poisoned fangs, and making it as harmless as a summer breeze. That great medicine, Dodd's Kidney Pills, has cured thousands of the worst cases. It never fails to cure, hopeless as the case may seem.

Would you safely shield your loved ones from the fatal grip of this curse of mankind—Bright's Disease? Then use Dodd's Kidney Pills, the only cure on earth for this disease.

Drinking in Medieval Universities.
The relation which the universities sustained with reference to the municipalities in which they were situated forms a large chapter in their early history. The university was a state within a state. Every person connected with it even remotely, down to the servants in the families of the professors and those who waited upon the students, were amenable only to the academic court. The student was the citizen of a nation of scholars, whose flag overshadowed him wherever in the kingdom he might be.
Members of the student world were exempt from military service, and in many cases from all municipal tax. They might receive their books and furniture, wine and beer, free of duty. The students of Leyden availed themselves of this privilege to so great a degree and imported in such immense quantities by private arrangements with the publicans that a law was necessary prescribing how much a student might legally receive without payment of excise. The wise legislators, animated with a generous sense of the privileges of a university, after due deliberation fixed the proper drinking capacity of a student at 80 gallons of wine and 12 half casks of beer, which he could receive free of all tax.—Professor W. T. Hewett in Harper's Magazine.

After coughs and colds the germs of consumption often gain a foothold.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites will not cure every case; but, if taken in time, it will cure many.

Even when the disease is farther advanced, some remarkable cures are effected. In the most advanced stages it prolongs life, and makes the days far more comfortable. Everyone suffering from consumption needs this food tonic.

Artificial Teeth.

When the natural teeth have been lost, the comfort, the health, the speech, and the personal appearance will be greatly enhanced by the substitution of Artificial Teeth skillfully made. Good health, good appearance and comfort depend upon the dentists skill in making an Artificial set knowingly and perfectly fitted. Artificial teeth can be made to present a very natural appearance, an occasional dark tooth, an irregular arrangement, or a tasty fillings will break the porcelain monopoly so often noticeable. The sunken condition of a persons cheeks and lips due to the loss of the natural teeth, is changed completely by the insertion of properly made Artificial teeth. We make Artificial teeth that will fill out hollow cheeks and add youth and tone to the countenance. If you are troubled with bad fitting Artificial teeth that do not stay in their place as they should, we can, by use of a new method, make your old set over at a small expense and give you a perfect fit. We guarantee our work to be satisfactory in all respects.

You can call in, in the morning and have your teeth same day.
