1868. 1868. "The North Star."

THE SUBSCRIBER, under most favorable circumstances, purposes, on the 1st of JULY, to establish in P. E. Island A FIRST CLASS WEEKLY JOURNAL, entitled "THE NORTH STAR," which, while maintaining a thoroughly independent position in Politics will specially advocate Commercial relations between the British North American Colonies and the United States. The Journal will contain the latest possible intelligence appropriately condensed; and the Editors will endeavor to furnish their readers with literary selections, poetry, &c., from the best sources. It will contain reports of markets, fishing intelligence, arrivals and clearances, and such general information as will be of interest to the Merchant, the Fisherman, and the Agriculturist. As the circulation of "THE NORTH STAR" will, on this account, be necessarily large, the journal itself must afford one of the best mediums for Advertisers. A Graduate of QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY, IRELAND, a Verbalist Short-hand Writer, has been engaged, with other numerous Contributors; so the public may rest assured that neither expense nor ability will be wanting to make the "NORTH STAR" one of the brightest luminaries of the journalistic constellation, and a guide to the haven of political truths.
