WANTED—City canvasser of good address...

HALF THE CITY DUG UP

THE PROGRESS MADE IN THE EXCAVATIONS AT POMPEII.

Professor Mann's Description of the Discoveries So Far Made in the Overhauled Roman City—History Beginning Long Before the Christian Era.

The City of Pompeii already existed in the sixth century, B.C., as is proved by the remains of its oldest public building, the Doric temple. But the date of the first foundation of the city is quite unknown, says Professor Mann in the London Daily News. It was inhabited by the Oscans, a race whose language is imperfectly known through scanty inscriptions. The name of Pompeii is derived from a word belonging to this ancient language, the word "pompe," or "five." The city was wrested from its original inhabitants by the Samnites, when they advanced from the mountains to the coast in about the year 420 B.C. The Oscans and Samnites together, under the name of the Lucanians, the Greek colonies, developed a civilization probably for outstripping that of the contemporary Romans. In the year 8 B.C. the Samnite laws led to the subjection of Pompeii by Rome. The city was drawn into the Roman confederacy, during which it preserved its independence. In the year 62 B.C. it was only in the year 80 B.C. when the Samnites were conquered by Rome, that Pompeii became entirely Romanized, being then occupied by a colony of veterans under P. Sulla, a nephew of the then dictator. The city was presently named Cornelia Veneria Pompeianorum, after the family name of the dictator Sulla and the goddess of whom he was a special devotee, and who then became as the Venus Pompeiana, the tutelary divinity of the city. At the same time a colony was founded, probably by the citizens who had been driven out in favor of the Roman veterans. Under the Romans, after 80 B.C. there were the usual decurions, aediles and other public officers, also priests, praetores, ministers and magistrates.

Pompeii was built on the point of an ancient stream of lava, running to the east, close to the then full-flowing River Sarno. The city was the natural southern eastern part of the plain through which the river flowed. The sea was then not more than 1,500 feet distant from the city, the river serving as a harbor. In the banks of the river stood a small suburb of the city. From the busy port were exported not only the produce of the country, but also the manufactures of the plain itself, namely, wine and vegetables, which formed a large article of export to the second century, B.C. The fact that the source of profit ceased to be cultivated, and millions were even imported into Pompeii from abroad. The harbor town grew more and more wealthy. In the year 62 A.D. the Roman aristocracy, attracted by its beautiful situation and fine climate, began to settle in the environs. The inhabitants of Pompeii at that time numbered probably 20,000.

It will be remembered that the volcanic mountain on the slopes of which Pompeii stood, re-erected as a harbor. In the year 62 A.D. when many buildings were damaged or destroyed. Traces of the earthquake that happened there are still to be seen in the excavations. In the year 79 A.D. came the awful eruption which, while the people were still repairing the damage done in 62, buried the city to a depth of more than six feet in small pieces of stones and, some time later, with a rain of ashes to a similar depth. Those Pompeian stones and ashes were not red hot, as is generally believed, as the rocks have been found seemingly carbonized, has only been thus changed by chemical processes. Traces of red burning on the mural paintings are very easily distinguished from the red tint, which in some unexplained way, overpreads a great portion of the wall paintings when these have come in contact with the ashes. The manner in which Herculaneum was buried was very different, for there the pumice and ashes do not lie in regular strata, as in Pompeii, but are mixed together in a sort of sandy paste, which, hardened into stone during the course of time, makes excavation difficult. After the catastrophe the upper stories in the houses in Pompeii protruded above the ashes, showing where the city lay. Digging on a large scale then took place, and buildings material and valuable objects were carried away. All the marble, except a very few fragments, was removed in ancient times. Later on the remaining upper stories of the houses were destroyed by time, as very little of them has been found. In 79 A.D. most of the inhabitants escaped. It has been calculated that only 2,000 of the 20,000 were killed on the spot, but how far the fugitives were able to run is not known; the fact is that many of them were overtaken and buried under the falling ashes at a place on the banks of the Sarno, not far from the city. In 1880 and 1881 many skeletons, together with many valuable objects were kept in the Naples museum, were found there.

Though the existence of Pompeii under the fields that then covered it was discovered as early as 1562, the city has been regularly excavated since 1748, and till the year 1855 only the public buildings round the Forum, the theatre and the street of the tombs had been laid open to view. The present reasonable and scientific mode of excavation was begun by Professor Fiorelli in 1861, and continued by Professor Ruggieri, who has only just resigned his office in consequence of his advanced age. At present nearly the half of the whole city is excavated and the remainder is still unexcavated part will not contain many public buildings, perhaps a few temples and baths, but if the present slow rate of excavation be continued it will take another fifty or sixty years to lay the whole city bare.

HEART DISEASE.

A Toronto Physician says it Never Expires Without the Presence of some Kidney Disease.

Toronto, March 4.—The number of sudden deaths due to heart disease is appalling. The medical profession is devoting more attention to the heart and its ailments at the present time than ever before, and many physicians are making a specialty of diseases of this organ. A Toronto doctor, who devotes much attention to this branch of his practice, said to your reporter, "I have yet to learn of a single case where heart disease caused death, in which a post mortem examination did not show the existence of Bright's disease, diabetes, or some other kidney disease." Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure all disease of the kidney, and thus ward off the danger of heart disease.

A country girl riding by a turnpike road without paying toll, the gatekeeper hailed her and demanded his fee. On her demanding his authority, he referred her to the sign, where she read, "A man and horse, six cents." "Well," says she, "you can demand nothing of me, as this is but a woman and a mare."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS CURED.
HALIFAX, N. S.
G. E. PUTTNER, Esq., Ph. M.:
Sir,—I consider it my duty, not only to myself, but to my fellow creatures who are suffering from Asthma and Bronchitis, as I had for some time previous to using your "Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil" and Hypophosphites," to give my testimony to the most wonderful good effect it had. Having suffered for some time with Asthma and Bronchitis, accompanied with great nervous exhaustion, and having fully read your Essay on the combination and uses of your Emulsion, I was persuaded to give it a trial, and on using two bottles I began to receive great benefit and relief, and after using three bottles I was completely cured. I can give you a testimonial from either Asthma or Bronchitis, and my nervous system much invigorated and built up. I have found it very pleasant and palatable, and with no taste of oil. I recommend it to those suffering as I did previous to taking your compound. I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

KEEPING LOVE ALIVE.

Mrs. Lynn Linton Says Some Sensible Things on the Subject.
Sometimes Mrs. Lynn Linton says such wise things that the lover of humanity wishes they might be printed and posted in conspicuous places all the world over. Some of her recent utterances on the art of "keeping love alive" are among those which, in our opinion, are worth the attention of every man and woman to whom they are interested. Business is without care. Health disappears unless precautions are taken to resist the temptations of the world and the flesh. And even those finest and most elusive possessions—love and friendship—will need care and nourishment if they are to live.

"Too many," says Mrs. Linton, "suppose that a love once confessed and solidated becomes a burden to the soul, and that friendship once knitted up will last forever without care to keep the loops from running." No greater error, and none more disastrous to happiness, can exist. Love and friendship need as much care to keep alive, as the business which lives by man's exertions and dies by his neglect. How often young married couples, blinded by the excitement of their first union, neglect the simplest precautions to insure continuance. At home with each other, and yet are, they put no restraint on themselves, but let themselves go in speech, habits, portance, appearance, as all of minor importance, and in the main thing, their love, which is the very life of the marriage, goes to sleep. She, in a crumpled, dressing-gown, with untidy hair and discolored hands—his, in broken slippers and shabby coat, unbrushed, unshaven, unkempt—and both unappetizing to the last degree; this begins the first process of degradation. She, peevish and discontented over small matters, where she would be, he would never have heard the very echo—she, pre-occupied, snappish, unsympathetic; and both without self-restraint or reticence, this begins the second process of disintegration. But they come together again after their little tiffs, and in the beginning of things the old proverb about the quiet lovers holds good—but only in the beginning of things. By degrees that coming together is slack, and the elastic of their love is stretched to the point that is between them begins to die for want of keeping alive by care, and so the sorrowful tense is changed and for "I will love you" becomes "I will love you."

"So with friendship, which indeed requires as much tact and care to keep alive as love itself, being in its essence love without the passion that induces the other form. Two friends have all faith and confidence in each other. That does not excuse the neglect by which one, or will say the younger, tries the stability of the elder's affection. Letters left long unanswered or not sent to him, when acknowledged—reticence over those pleasant occasions of daily life which keep the interest active, and which seem when closed to bring the two parted spheres into closer contact together—in a word, neglect, though only in small and trivial matters, as surely kills the sweet growth of friendship as personal neglect and unrestrained tempers kill that of love. For nothing on earth is immortal and nothing is unchangeable. No affection that lives in the human breast is indestructible, and even the mother's love can be chilled, alienated and destroyed. If this be so with the most intense, the most deeply rooted of all, how much more then will others which are in a manner what may be called "grocery" in comparison with something that comes after and upon the more purely instinctive and prototypal? No! Friendship and love have to be kept alive by a little care, a little attention, a little self-restraint, keeping one's details from an ungainly amount of self-indulgence.

Those are wise words, and friends and lovers everywhere will do well to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest them.

One Palatable Siberian Dish.
There is a Siberian dish called "pill-man," that makes good eating in Canada on a cold day, and can be made to utilize scraps of cold meat, though the Russian dish calls for fresh meat. Chop quite fine about a pound of cold meat—steak, if you use fresh meat; put with it one small onion and season well; then add a cup of rich gravy. If the meat is fresh, cook for a few moments in the gravy, for the Canadian palate likes well cooked meats. If the meat has been cooked, simply heat it through and set aside to cool while you make the paste. Heat your butter, and add it to a pound of flour, salted slightly, and work into a stiff, tough dough, with as little water or milk as possible. Roll 3 days. It is as good as any other kind of pie, in the center of which put two tablespoonsful of meat. Gather the edges up and pinch together, as for apple dumplings; then put them in a kettle of boiling soup stock. As soon as they come to the surface of the stock they are sufficiently cooked. Serve them with a gravy, thick made of melted butter with a dash of vinegar in it, or with a boat of the broth in which they were boiled.

An Original Doctor.
Professor Zakharin, one of the most celebrated doctors in Russia, who was in attendance on the Czar, is an original character, whose feats of eccentricity have added to his fame. When the state of the Emperor became a matter of concern, the Governor of Moscow received from St. Petersburg a telegram ordering him to send Dr. Zakharin without delay. The Governor dispatched his aide-de-camp to him. "In two hours," said the officer, "the express train will start." "The express? What do you mean?" exclaimed the professor. "The Emperor is ill, and you will be in a train leaving in two hours! Go to the railway manager, and command him to get a special train for me in twenty minutes!" It was done.

The Balaful Blue Eye.
Blue or light-colored eyes are popularly supposed to most frequently carry the balaful influence, and to counteract this blue tinge, it is well to use a dash of vinegar in it, or with a boat of the broth in which they were boiled.

Priestley's Dress Fabrics
In the long run it is the quality of the material that will determine the success of a lady's costume. Every lady who has at all studied the matter knows this. Priestley's Black Dress Goods are the best that the market affords. That is conceded on all hands. The ladies of Great Britain cordially acknowledge it. The American ladies prefer Priestley's dress fabrics to French. Our Canadian ladies are now asking for them. They wear better than other goods; but their great charm consists in a peculiar richness and softness of appearance, and a flexibility which enables them to drape the costume with that suggestion of flow and rhythm which is the dream of all tasteful women to realize.
