WEDDING BELLS

Here is a classically simple and elegant gown for the girl who is planning to walk down the aisle this fall or winter. This traditional and romantic bridal gown is in a mood reminiscent of a Flemish painting.

The dress is of yarn-dyed acetate taffeta with long pointed sleeves, a wide curved V-shaped neckline and a waistline dropped on the diagonal with the full skirt shirred from the sides to the back. The front panel is cut princess style and adorned, like the bodice, with large appliques, of re-embroidered Alencon lace. ELLEN'S DIARY

Granny's Hoose—This Is Edna Jacques At Best

Among visitors to this house in the sunshine of this afternoon was a blue-eyed, fair-skinned lad, of almost four months. He came in his sister's arms, along the path from the house across the lane. They came in to sit in James' armchair, she smiling happily, obviously pleased with her trust, he soberly surveying the surroundings not yet familiar to him. Presently however an answering smile rewarded ours, one which spread widely and ended in an amusing gurgle of pure delight.

"Did you hear him?" Granddaughter laughed softly. "He likes to be over here!"

"A fellow needs a grandmother near" we chuckled, reaching out to take him to what James calls, " a bit of rocking."

Was ever a September Saturday more lovely — so sunlit and fair? It was a day for men and lads to pursue vigorously the course of the harvest, and for housewives to bake the seasonal apple pies and fresh loaves and goodies "for Sunday. . ."

We rinsed the frosting-bowl with some reluctance over the clinging sweet remaining there in Mack's absence. He was away to the fields with the rest, a little concerned at the outset because he "couldn't find that three-prong fork to help with the stooking" and then all smiles at its finding, spirits lifted, anticiptaion bright in regard to the hours which lay ahead.

In a forward look to Spring, we forsook indoor cares for a while to prepare a new location for some of the perennials, overcrowded of late and existing only miserably as they are. The pup followed to sit and watch the spading — a forlorn figure at the moment.

"Which of the perennials?" Granddaughter asked, coming by.

"The crimson peonies."

"Oh."

"And some phlox."

"Yes. . . and isn't it nice outdoors today! Come, pup, we have chores to do!. . first, we 'll take in the wood."

A nice day, quiet, beautiful. .. to work, and to bring the week to an end, to let the workers-of-the-fields come to a day of rest.

And a small visitor it brought, one who having every blessing of fond parents and sister and brother, at the same time may sometimes feel the need of following the path from his house across the lane to his "Granny's hoose" close by. Edna Jacques says:

"A child needs a grandma to spoil him a bit
Someone with time on her hands who will sit,
On an old-fashioned rocker that shivers and squeaks,
And listens to words that a little boy speaks.

Someone who knows how a gingerbread man
All crumbly and fragrant and warm from the pan
Can comfort a fellow who feels a bit blue,
And nothing just right seems to happen to you.

A child needs a grandma to teach him the words
That run like a hymn in the song of the birds,
Someone who knows where the orioles go
When the garden is covered with inches of snow.

And only a grandma remembers to say,
'Now, be a good boy' as she tucks him away,
Under the covers and pats them down tight,
For little boys sometimes get scared in the night.

A child needs the comforting knowledge of love,
Steady and sure as the stars up above,
To carry him safely through sunshine and tears
A light in the darkness. . . a stay through the years.

A child needs a grandma to nod in her chair
And give him her blessing by just being there."

Until Monday — — — Diary — Goodnight. . . .

MR. AND MRS. R. A. WEDGE

Charming Autumn Wedding Is Solemnized In Halifax

Saint Thomas Aquinas Church, Halifax, was the scene of a lovely wedding on Saturday morning, September 7, at 10 o'clohk, when Sheila Rosemary Pender, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pender, Halifax, and Richard Anthony Wedge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Medius Wedge, Summerside, were united in marriage.

Reverend J. Mackey celebrated the nuptial Mass and performed the double ring ceremony. Miss Constance Inglis was organist and Miss Norma Marriott, soloist. White gladioli decorated the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an imported floor-length gown of white peau de soie. The Empire-high bodice was fashioned of re-embroidered Alencon lace, featuring a Sabrina neckline and long tapered sleeves. The full skirt was styled on princess lines with back pouf and chapel train. Her cathedral-length veil of British bridal illusion tulle fell from a coronet of regal design made of peau de soie to match the gown. The coronet was edged with tulle and studded with pearls. Traditional orange blossom rosettes trimmed the pointed toes of her slippers and her bouquet was a cascade of white glaioli florettes and stephanotis.

Miss Carole Ann Pender, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and wore a waltz-length gown of gold velveteen, princess-style with sweeping back fullness in the skirt and three-quarter length push-up sleeves. Her large picture hat, trimmed with a band of leaves around the crown, was of matching material. She wore matching mitts and carried a bouquet of gold and bronze mums.

The bridesmaids, Miss Sally Wedge, sister of the groom, and Miss Rowena Godson wore moss green and rust velveteen dresses, styled identically to Miss Pender's. Picture hats and bouquets were also the same.

Lieutenant Gerald Johnson R. C.N., was best man and the ushers were Lieutenant Albert Walszack and Lieutenant Edward Dube.

Following the ceremony, the bridal party called at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, where the bride had been a student. They were received by Reverend Mother Davis and the Community.

A reception was held at the Nova Scotian Hotel, where the bride's mother received, wearing an original model sheath of champagne French linen lace over pure silk. She wore a velvet hat of the same shade—and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

The groom's mother wore a model gown of navy blue silk crepe, a china pink felt hat with matching accessories, and a corsage if deep pink roses.

The toast to the bride was proposed by her cousin, David Jones, LL.B.

The couple left on a motor trip through the Maritime provinces. For travelling, the bride chose a two-piece dress of grey wool with matching hat and accessories, and a corsage of white camelias.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Wedge will reside in Halifax, where the groom, a former graduate of Saint Dunstan's College, will resume his studies in law at Dalhousie University. — Photo by Wright.
