Nervous Prostration

It is now a well established fact in medical science that nervousness is due to impure blood. Therefore the true way to cure nervousness is by purifying and enriching the blood. The great blood purifier is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read this letter:

"For the last two years I have been a great sufferer with nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart. I was weak in my limbs and had smothered sensations. At last my physician advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla which I did, and I am happy to say that I am now strong and well. I am still using Hood's Sarsaparilla and would not be without it. I recommend it to all who are suffering with nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart." Mrs. DARTON, 56 Alice St., Toronto, Ontario. Get Hood's, because

CORRECT WAY TO RUN.

NOT ANY EXCUSE FOR GETTING WINDED.

Captain Raoul's Studies of Running Tested by the Soldiers of France.

Many people are fond of outdoor exercise whose lack of time or money prohibits their joining the vast army of cyclists. Those who cannot go wheeling may comfort themselves with the thought that since the days of antiquity walking has been among the most healthful as well as the cheapest of all recreations. Yet few persons understand how to walk properly, and certainly among women it is a lost art.

The people who live in mountainous countries, it has been noticed, walk in a manner quite different from those who dwell where the country is level. The mountaineer's body is bent somewhat forward and he seems to drag one foot after the other, like a wearied soldier after a long day's march. But his stride is longer, his step surer, and it is easy to see that he can readily leave an ordinary walker far behind. Those who walk in this fashion are able to run long distances without fatigue, with their bodies inclined forward and their legs somewhat bent. To the casual observer it seems as if their equilibrium was continually on the point of being lost and that they would fall face downward.

Yet this method of walking is universal among all peoples of the globe who go much a-foot, from the savages of Africa to the runners of Japan and the Indians of the West.

A French captain of artillery named Raoul has made an exhaustive study of the various styles of walking to ascertain the one best adapted to the army on long marches. He found plenty of young fellows of considerable endurance who could march with great rapidity for a considerable distance, but would then go to pieces. The trouble seemed to be that the lungs and heart gave out before the legs.

A runner puts forth an enormous force. He must lift his own weight from the ground three or four times per second, which amounts to the development of about one-third of one horse-power. Such exertion is a severe tax of the lungs and heart.

The conclusion of Capt. Raoul was that the runner should at no time lose his point of support upon the ground; that he should run without springing through the air, as it were, and without one foot leaving the earth until the other is firmly planted; that the gait should be practically a walking run. Strangely enough, this is exactly the method that instinct and experience have taught as the best one to those whose only method of making long and rapid journeys is afoot. It has been estimated that in this way less than half the usual amount of energy is expended.

"I can take any man between twenty and sixty years of age, in good health," says Capt. Raoul, "and in a little while he will be able to run as long as his legs will carry him without his feeling the least discomfort in his respiration. Some men I have seen who were particularly apt were able at the first trial to easily get over about seven miles, while in the ordinary way they could not comfortably have run more than about two-thirds of a mile."

Capt. Raoul's method, briefly stated, is as follows: The upper part of the body should be held straight, the head well in air and the shoulders thrown back so that the breath comes easily. The elbows should extend a little back of the hips. Commence with short steps say a foot in length, raising the feet just sufficiently to clear any irregularities in the surface of the ground. The upper part of the body should be inclined forward as much as possible, so as to make it necessary to run or walk rapidly to keep from losing equilibrium. Plant the feet firmly yet with the suppleness and agility of a cat. In other words, one should seem to run after his center of gravity, which threatens continually to fall forward. The first exercises should not be hurried, but the speed and distance traversed increased gradually.

The utility of this method was put to a test not long ago at Vannes, France, with a platoon of the One Hundred and Sixteenth Regiment of Infantry. So excellent were the results that other bodies of men were trained in the same way. One of the soldiers, after a course of training, accomplished nearly twelve and a half miles without a single stop in two hours, and at the end of his route was not the least out of breath.

An Interesting Conversation.

One evening Sir Arthur Sullivan went to see Rubinstein at his hotel in London. The Russian composer asked his visitor to step out on the balcony and smoke a cigarette. They sat down, twisted their cigarettes, and puffed the blue clouds into the air. After a long pause Sullivan observed:

"You are a great admirer of Beethoven, I presume?"

"Yes," answered Rubinstein.

"And Wagner?"

"No," was the reply.

That was all. Not another word was spoken. They rocked themselves in their chairs and smoked away. After a very long while Sullivan remarked: "I think it is time for me to be going."

"Don't say so," said Rubinstein; "stay a bit longer, it is so nice to talk to you."

Sullivan remained, went on rocking himself and smoking into the small hours, when he at length got up and said:

"I must really be off now; I think we have chatted long enough."

Rubinstein drew out his watch and shook his head in blank astonishment "Half-past two!" he said. "Strange how quickly time flies in pleasant company."

Counterfeits

A few years ago a great discovery was made.

Unprincipled persons are trying to prey upon and dupe people who are led to ask for kidney treatment.

Some of the methods adopted by imitators are as follows:

First—To imitate the size, color and shape of Dodd's Kidney Pills and sell them by count.

Second—To put them up to appear very nearly the same and to be offered at the same price.

Third—To hook on the word "kidney" in naming cathortic pills so as to increase sales of mere physic.

Fourth—To give a name so near to Dodd's that unwary people may be deceived and think they are getting Dodd's.

Look out for such dodges. When you want kidney medicine you want the best. And ought not to be the subject for any trick.

So beware.

Our power is measurable by the amount of truth contained in our consciousness and the number of relative facts possessed by our intellect.

Why Contemplate Suicide?

It is like tempting Providence for consumptives to ignore the remarkable remedy known as Miller's Emulsion of Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. For any person to die of consumption without trying this remarkable flesh and blood maker, after knowing of its existence, is suicide pure and simple. All that the consumptive patient needs is new blood with which to battle against the destructive forces of the disease, Miller's Emulsion provides new blood in abundance. It is a combination of Norwegian Oil and hypophosphites of lime and soda—a triumph of science. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at all drug stores.

Tore His Flesh in Agony.

"I was troubled with blind itching piles for 20 years; was unable to work, and tore my flesh in agony. United States and Canadian doctors failed to relieve. Chase's Ointment was a God-send. I am a better man than in 20 years, and am able to work every day." Philip Wallace, blacksmith, Iroquois, Ont. Chases's Ointment cures piles, eczema and irritant diseases. All druggists 60c. per box.

With a woman her soul should always be at least as well clad as her body.

Bad Blood Between Them.

The ever-slaving farmer's wife, her delicate sister in the city, suffer more than they care to tell. The dark rings around the eyes, headaches, dizziness, palpitation or rheumatic twinges, betoken a run-down system. The blood is poor, and is a bar to enjoyment of life Scott's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, strengthens and vitalizes the system, and speedily restores the bloom of health to the cheeks. It cures when all others fail.

A domestic wife is a blessing, but not if she is too domestic.

A Prominent Londoner.

Chase's Ointment is an invaluable remedy for itching Piles and in my own case I would pay $50 it if it could not be otherwise had.

Weak, Nervous Women.

One to whom a night's rest was unknown.

Strength and good health restored.

I was subject to frequent attacks of nervousness that seemed to sap all my vitality and left me in a state of weakness and misery. I could not relish food and such a thing as a good night's rest was unknown. Incapable of any exertion and with an ever present tired and despondent feeling. Medicines that I took did not do any good; it was a case of gradually becoming weaker and weaker. Hearing of Scott's Sarsaparilla and its success with similar cases to mine, I used it, and from the first few doses began to get better, appetite returned, got natural and refreshing sleep. I grew stronger, in fact life seemed to be fanned into activity.—Lottie Graham, 174 Crawford Street, Toronto.

For any weakness of the nerves, pale and sallow complexion, loss of appetite use the best blood and nerve remedy extant, Scott's Sarsaparilla. Insist on getting Scott's—imitations do not cure.

Time For Great Thoughts.

Thomas Moore often wrote a short poem almost impromptu. He consumed over two years in reading and preparing material for "Lalla Rookh" and two years more in writing that inimitable poem.

Gibson devoted over twenty years of his life to the labor of reading for and writing the "Decline and Fall." It is one of the most stupendous literary feats ever accomplished by the labor of one man.

Johnson commonly required three or four months for the composition of a drama. He generally revised it after the rehearsals had begun, adding here and taking away there as his judgment and fancy dictated.

Emerson is reported often to have spent from six months to a year in the composition of one or two short essays. His object was the condensation of the greatest possible thought into the fewest number of words.

Congreve would prepare a drama for the stage in a week or ten days, though four or five times of this period was given to the work revision and reconstruction after the play had been given to the actors.

Irving wrote the first 120 pages of "Bracebridge Hall" in ten days; the "Alhambra" was mostly written during the three months he spent in that palace; his "Life of George Washington" required nearly five years.

Scott is said to have written "Waverley" in less than six weeks. He wrote very rapidly, seldom revised, and, as a consequence, his novels are full of blunders, inaccuracies and anachronisms.

George Eliot is said to have written "Middlemarch" in four months. Some doubt is thrown upon this statement by the fact that she commonly worked slowly, writing with great care and deliberation and making few erasures after her work was done.

Cruden labored nineteen years on his concordance to the Bible, and immediately after its publication was sent to a lunatic asylum. He never entirely recovered from the mental disease induced by this gigantic undertaking.

Burns committed his poems to memory as he composed them, and when he sat down to write he had before him no labor of composition but only the task of writing down what he had already finished.

Dickens says in the introduction of "David Copperfield" that he spent two years in the composition of that novel. He did not usually require so long a time, many of his novels being finished in less than a year, and most of his shorter stories in a few days.

Froude passed seven years in collecting materials and in writing his history of England. He was very careful in the selection of data, and spent whole days in the effort to verify a single fact or citation.

Bancroft devoted nearly thirty years to his history of the United States, which is not a history of the United States at all, since it ends where the history of the country begins. Had the work been continued on the same scale down to the present 75 or 80 volumes would have been required.

A Raft of Rats Drawn by Fire.

"It is an indisputable fact that fire will draw rats," said Louis Simonds, of St. Louis. "During a recent big fire near the river bank in St. Louis a fire brigade acted the part of Pied Piper of Hamelin, and, with the assistance of the flames, drove out of their hiding places into the Mississippi as many rats as did the mythological musician. While the water was lighted by the reflection of the conflagration, a black mass was seen floating toward the east shore of the river. This proved to be some thousands of rats.

"They were headed by their chieftain, an extraordinary large black fellow, and finding their quarters attacked by the flames had taken to the river for self-preservation. The current carried them a considerable distance out of their course, and during their passage some hundreds of them were drowned. Spectators on the bridge made bets on the race, but they were all declared off, because, on the Illinois side, there was no landing place handy for the fatigued rats, and as far as could be seen, with the exception of the stronger fellows, the whole bunch perished in the river."
