FAST URGES

In order to keep pasture herbage in as palatable and nutritious a condition as possible, close grazing to prevent coarse growth and to give white clover a chance to thrive, is essential. Under eastern climate conditions the rate of growth of pasture herbage is not uniform throughout the growing season. Following a rapid rate of growth from early spring to about the middle of June, there is usually a decided decline and relatively slow growth through mid-summer, with a slight recovery in the early fall. The method of securing optimum utilization of herbage under these conditions depends on the number of stock carried. Where there is insufficient stock to graze the spring growth of herbage uniformly, mowing the pasture is advisable to prevent a coarse stand of mature plants. Mowing when the grasses are just heading out will promote an aftermath of tender, nutritious herbage. Livestock will consume the mown grass if it is left lying on the field, although they do not relish this coarse material before it is cut.

Where pastures are heavily stocked or winter injury has occurred, it is wise to make provision for supplemental pasture for the midsummer period. This may be provided in the form of mature hay on clover hay meadows, the hay being harvested somewhat earlier than in the customary full-bloom stage. In this connection, it is interesting to note that the superior feeding quality of clover cut in the late-bud or early-bloom stage will generally offset the loss in the yield of dry matter as compared with clover cut in full-bloom. Where clover aftermath is not available, it may be necessary to sow some annual pasture crop, such as oats or sudan grass.

Rotational Grazing.—This is a system of pasture management in which the pasture area is divided into a number of equal sized fields which are alternately heavily grazed and rested. Such a system is sometimes extended to include successional grazing. This simply means that high-producing cows are turned into the fresh grass first, followed by dry cows and young stock. Such a system eliminates selective grazing and promotes a more uniform sward and better utilization of the herbage. The chief objection is the cost of extra fencing and watering facilities. It is interesting to note that there are several progressive farmers on Prince Edward Island making use of rotational grazing. Most of these men feel that it is quite beneficial.

Acetonemia

This condition is commonly seen in dairy cattle and is believed by some to be more prevalent than in former years. It is also observed in sheep and is known as Pregnancy Disease. In sheep it is more serious than in cattle and generally has a higher death rate.

The disease was first recognized in Holland, Denmark and Sweden, and then in England. A short time later it was recognized in America. At first it was believed to be a complication of Milk Fever or some other condition affecting dairy cattle, however, since that time it has been found to be an entirely separate condition.

The disease generally affects well-nourished milk cows and typical cases usually occur early in the fourteen days after calving. This is not necessarily confined to this period because it may occur anywhere up to two months after calving. Most cases occur during the period when cows are kept in stalls, in fact, affected cows show a remarkable tendency to recover when out on grass.

The principle symptoms are loss of milk flow, dullness, constipation, and an odd smell on the breath. It is interesting to note but not everybody can detect the odour from the breath.

Very few losses will be experienced if professional assistance is obtained when the animal shows the typical symptoms. A urine sample submitted to the Laboratory will enable an accurate diagnosis.

In the general feed management of dairy cattle it is essential that a highly nutritious, well-balanced ration is made available.

Poultry News

The P. E. I. Poultry Industry Committee have held several meetings recently at which the following topics were discussed and acted upon.

Preparations for two chicken barbecues, which will be held in Summerside and Charlottetown this summer are under way. Our committee hopes to have a much larger barbecue this year. The Poultry Industry Committee has made up a number of grills which will be used at our barbecue. We plan to loan out these grills to any organizations who are preparing to have a chicken barbecue.

A poultry school is to be held in Charlottetown this summer. This school will be put on to increase the sale of poultry products, to improve holding conditions and displays of poultry products.

Address and Presentation

Miss Carey McCormack

Dear Carey,
It is with mixed feelings of pride and humility that we are gathered here to-night to bid you fare-well, ere you embark on your chosen profession, as a postulant, in the missionaries of Mary at Alexandria.

We are proud to honor you among the many young men and women of St. Andrew's who have been called by Almighty God, to work in his vineyard at home and abroad.

The life of a missionary sister undoubtedly calls for unflinching stamina, courage and humility, abandonment of worldly desires and pleasures; but we, who have known of your unselfishness to your family and others, your integrity and devotion to duty while a student nurse at Falconwood Hospital and later at the Polio Clinic, at the Sanatorium, your cheerfulness and good common sense, can fully appreciate the special vocation to which you have been called and why the Mother of God has elected you one of her co-workers. May your noble aspirations serve to inspire the youth of this parish with lofty ideals.

In conclusion we ask you to accept this small token as an expression of our esteem.
May the Blessed Mother, during this Marian Year, dedicated to her Immaculate Conception, shower you with her choicest blessings and graces, in the sincere parting wish of all of us here to-night. —St. Andrew's Parish.

IN MEMORIAM

LUCY JANE GALLANT

It was with great sadness that the death on March 7 of Lucy Jane Gallant, widow of the late Abram Gallant and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Burke of Darnley, was learned. Although she had been ill health for several weeks her passing was shockingly felt by the many to whom she was so dear.

Formerly of Highfield, Mrs. Gallant lived several years in Charlottetown, recently residing with her son at 68 Elm Avenue. Esteemed by all who knew her she leaves to mourn many friends throughout the Island who sadly mourn her passing, including six daughters and three sons: (Elizabeth), Mrs. W. R. MacDonald; (Marguerite), Mrs. J. M. Wheatley of Fredericton, N.B.; (Mary) Mrs. W. H. Harvey of Saint John, N.B.; Ruth, (Jean) Mrs. W. S. MacFarlane, and (Verna) Mrs. E. J. Kirkley, all of Toronto; Albert in Kirkland Lake, Ont.; Roy at home and three other sons, Mrs. Mary Douglas and Ella of Moncton; Mrs. Anne Diamond of Charlottetown; Ed, of Saint John, N.B.; Bill in Sea View; Melvin in Calgary. Three brothers predeceased her: George, Tom, and Joseph, just three weeks before her death.

The funeral, largely attended, was from Zion Presbyterian Church of which she was a member, with Rev. W. Brown officiating. The choir was in attendance with Mr. Wendell Phillips as soloist singing one of her favorite hymns, "Saved By Grace". Interment was in People's Cemetery. The pall bearers were Blair MacDonald, Roy Huettis, Athol Roberts, Percy Gay, Reg MacNutt and Aben MacLean. The many floral tributes were a token of the esteem in which she was held.

We want to know each step you take
That we may walk the same,
For somewhere down that long path
You'll hear us call your name.

Native Islander Dies In Paradise, Montana

The passing of Joseph Howard Gay, on March 24, at Paradise, Montana, is deeply regretted by his friends there, where he was well and favorably known for more than 40 years.

The late Mr. Gay was 77 years old, and was the eldest son of the late Samuel Howard Gay of Pownal, P.E.I. and grandson of the late Howard Gay of same place. He left his native Province when a young man of 20 years and has travelled much since then finally settling in Montana. His wife and one son predeceased him, but there are left to mourn his loss a daughter, Mrs. Sutherland of Brockton, Mass., a sister, Mrs. Joseph MacEachern of P.E.I., Canada and a brother, Mr. W. I. Gay of California, Vernon Gay, Southport, Perley Gay, Hazelbrook and Mrs. R. W. Jones, Alexandria are also of the family by a later marriage. Three half-sisters, Beatrice, Eva and Helena reside in Massachusetts.

Although Mr. Gay was a busy man, he did not neglect that important phase of his sojourn here. The latter years of his life, he became more engrossed in the things that pertain to the future life. His letters to some of the family, were a clear indication of the truth in Holy Writ—"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the council of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners; but his delight is in the law of the Lord, and, in that law doth he meditate day and night."

The following clipping was taken from the Paradise Press, and gives an intimate account of the passing, and burial of Mr. Gay:

Funeral services were held at the Paradise Community church Thursday with the Rev. B. V. Edworthy officiating. Burial was in the Paradise cemetery.
Pallbearers were Henry Bertram, Harvey Secord, A. St. Clair, B. Vermeers, Robert Vermeers, and Jack Warren, all conductor associates of Mr. Gay.
Mr. Gay made his home for the past 11 years with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Steele and treated their children and grandchildren as his own. Tiny tots around town were often seen "just visiting" or receiving a treat from the man who was as big in kind deeds as he was in stature.

Police Guards Block Attempt On Japanese Premier's Life

TOKYO, (Reuters)—Strengthened police guards have been thrown around Premier Shigeru Yoshida's home to block a possible assassination attempt on the eve of his world tour. Arrangements for the trip went ahead amid a chorus of press and parliament criticism.

Police say a young carpenter caught outside his house has confessed that he planned to kill Yoshida because there was "no way of knowing what promises he might make once he was abroad."

Suspicion about the trip drew an angry charge that Yoshida is "fooling the nation" from an opposition parliament member in parliament today.

Yoshida told the House his trip is "still undecided" and only "tentatively planned."

A left-wing socialist shouted furiously: "Everybody knows you are leaving this Friday. You are fooling the nation."

Yoshida is expected to spend a total of six weeks visiting the United States, Britain, Canada, France, West Germany, Italy, India, Pakistan and Thailand. Press reports say one goal will be to obtain a large loan from the U. S.

We and Our Neighbors

Of Moving Pictures

The other evening I saw an old favorite, "Rose Marie" on the new greatly enlarged moving picture screen, the Cinemascope. You may recall that the setting is in the Canadian Rockies and the chief characters are the Royal Mounted Police and French Canadians.

In this cinemascope version the magnificent scenery assumes almost equal importance with the characters, and they themselves are out of all proportion to their role in the picture. Anne Blyth is an adorable young person, but the effect of her small figure, blown up to eight feet or more, weeping tears the size of apples against a background of great mountains and boiling rapids, over a lover who is even now galloping to join her, is simply laughable.

On the other hand, "Julius Caesar" still the most popular drama on Broadway, gained in power through the new technique, not that the play isn't gripping in any medium. The enlarged screen seems right for the sweep and scope of passions and events, told by a Shakespeare.

Another place for cinemascope is in the screening of music. It was a thrilling experience to see as well as hear the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra render the overture to "Poet and Peasant."

I have viewed unusually fine pictures on the ordinary screen. There were a number of exceptionally good English pictures that will probably come to the Island. Please don't miss any with Alec Guinness in the leading role. His characterization in "Last Holiday" and "The Captain's Paradise" was unforgettable.

A few days ago I saw "Pickwick" based on course on "Pickwick Papers" by Charles Dickens. Did you know that there is a small magazine called the "Dickensian" published in London for the last fifty years, devoted entirely to articles on every detail of Dickens' life and work? Price 2 shillings and sixpence.

"Well, in the moving picture, "Pickwick" there they were on the screen all the characters dressed and looking like the one in the illustrations in serial form. Pickwick himself, encased in tight-fitting, showed every curve of his short plump figure, and the dandified Sam Weller, the foppish Jingle and the ladies in their bustles and furbelows. I confess they did not excite me. As caricatures they were fun, but I kept wondering if under their obvious exaggerations, they bore any resemblance to the real men and women of Dickens' time. The goodness and badness of the characters partook so much of the goodness of a good child and the badness of a naughty one. The gooey, false relationships that existed between the men and women interfered most with my enjoyment. There seems to be a historic basis to this characterization. Whatever the problems and ills of our generation, men and women have reached a clearer understanding and truer appreciation of each other. I believe the best moving pictures of the present show men and women who can live in friendship as well as love with one another.

I am almost sorry I brought this up. Go to see "Pickwick" when it comes by all means. It is really a delightful movie and not meant to be the subject of a sermon!
