CRESCENT CARNIVAL FRANCES PARKISON KEYES (Continued) "Keep on forgetting that I'm married. Then, by and by, we can decide what to do about it. Anna has left me. Celeste, of her own free will. I'll tell you all about it after I've talked with your mother. Give me one more kiss, darling, and then go into the music room and sing while I'm upstairs. I'll listen for you." When Breck reached the head of the stairs, he hesitated for a minute. He wanted to cling to every remnant of the rapture which Celeste's embrace had given him. While he hesitated he heard Celeste singing the song she had learned on the plantation, the only song that he had ever known her to sing in English, except spirituals. "I'm a-thinkin' of you, honey, 'Thinkin' 'ca'se I love you so, An' my heart keeps thumpin' An' my a-thumpin' As I hoo-down row after row." The words came to him clearly through the silent house and he stopped to listen to them. Then he heard Mrs. Fontaine calling him. "I am waiting for you, my dear boy. Here, at the left." That would be the large upstairs sitting room, adjoining her bedroom. Breck went toward it slowly, and saw that Mrs. Fontaine had also come forward to meet him, and even before he bent his head to kiss her, he noticed how shockingly she had changed and aged. The careful control of her speech was obviously studied and regulated. "I am thankful that you have come. But what caused this delay? I told Emile that he was to bring you upstairs at once." "Yes, but Celeste had told him that she would like to speak to me for a moment first. I'm sorry if I've displeased you, Aunt Estelle, but tell me why you wanted to see me. Has something happened to Anna?" "Nothing has happened to her. That is, she is neither dead nor injured." "I didn't think for a moment that she was. Rufus telephoned, just before you did. He said she had taken the car out yesterday afternoon and that she hadn't come back." Mrs. Fontaine sat down on a fragile French sofa, and motioned Breck to a seat facing her. "Suppose you tell me just what she has done with herself, Aunt Estelle. We'll understand each other better if you do tell me that, first of all, won't we?" "No. I think there are one or two things I must say to you first." "Perhaps I understand part of what you have to tell me, better than you think I do, already. Anna saw the first night we came to dinner. She told me about it, because she admired it so much. I found the original sketch for the mirror among my father's papers." "Then you did know. You've known ever since Anna told you about the mirror." "That he loved you? Yes, of course. Why didn't you marry him?" "I was afraid, Breck. He made violent love to me. I'd heard—mysterious things about him, you see, and this violence frightened me most of all." "I see. You were so frightened by the passion of a man you did love, that it didn't occur to you that a man you didn't love might make a hell on earth for you, if you were married to him!" He spoke with unconcealed scorn. As he did so, Marie Celeste's voice rang clearly through the house again, softening his taunt.

CHAPTER XIX "I've scorned myself for a good many years, Breck," Mrs. Fontaine said sadly. "I've had to live with the knowledge that I cheated your father and myself, but I faithfully kept every vow I made, Breck, and I believe that he did, too. Therefore, it should not be necessary for me to remind you that you are also a man of honor. And you are not free to marry Celeste or even to speak of love to her, as I am afraid you have done already." "I understand the way you feel, but I don't consider that I've done anything dishonorable in telling Celeste that I love her or telling you that I want to marry her. When Anna left Splendida she left for good, and she told me she wanted a divorce." "I think you may find Anna more reasonable after this, Breck, and more docile. I'm very sure that you will." "But, good God, I don't want Anna any more! I want Celeste. And she wants me. What's the use of all this beating about the bush?" "You will understand better, Breck, when you know what has happened to Anna. When she went out yesterday afternoon, she went to Olivier's house, Breck." "You mean that Anna and Olivier are in love with each other? Why, it's absurd! She's years older than he is, almost as old as I am." "I did not say they were in love with each other. Olivier is entirely indifferent to Anna. In fact, he took an instinctive dislike to her the first day he saw her, and this dislike has deepened into something very close to aversion. But she was drawn to him as instantaneously as he was repelled by her. I noticed this immediately." (To be continued)

IN MEMORIAM Gateway To Heaven In sad and loving memory of our dear husband and father, CHARLES FREDERICK LARTER who passed away March 25th, 1950. One year ago we had to part With one we loved with all our heart. We miss his face and kindly ways With him we spent our happy days. Many a day his name is spoken, And many an hour he is in our thoughts. A link in our family chain is broken, He has gone from our home, but not from our hearts. He was worth the name of a father. He fought life's battle square No matter when we needed him We always found him there. He never failed to do his best, His heart was true and tender. He worked so hard for those he loved, And left us to remember. There wasn't a thing too big or too small, That he wouldn't try to do for us all. For all of us he did his best, So God gave him eternal rest. Sadly Missed, and Fondly Remembered by Wife and Sons, Heath, Alec and Leighton.

IN MEMORIAM In fond and loving memory of our dear Husband and Dad, MR. GEORGE F. THORNE who passed away March 23rd, 1947. Lovingly Remembered by Wife and Family.

IN MEMORIAM In loving memory of my dear Mother, Mrs. Christine MacPherson, Dundee, who passed away March 25th, 1947. Deep in our hearts lies a memory Of a loved one gone on before. Oh what a glad reunion, When we meet to part no more. Sadly Missed by Daughter, Mrs. Wm. Gillis, Braintree, Mass.

IN MEMORIAM In loving memory of my dear Mother, Mrs. George Anstie, who passed away March 24th, 1950. I miss her because I loved her She was dearer than silver and gold. No treasure on earth can replace her Remembrance, will never grow old. One year ago we parted, Never will her memory fade Loving thoughts will always linger Around the spot where she is laid. Lovingly Remembered by Daughter Helen.

IN MEMORIAM In loving memory of our dear Mother and Grandmother, Mrs. Christine MacPherson, Dundee, who passed away March 25th, 1947. Her memory is as dear to-day As in the hour she passed away. Lovingly Remembered by Daughter Amelia and Family.

IN MEMORIAM In loving memory of my dear Mother, Mrs. George Anstie, who passed away March 24th, 1950. She had no one's last farewell She said good-bye to none. Her spirit fled, before we knew That she from us had gone. Into sweet rest she has entered No more to sorrow or weep But safe in the arms of Jesus My dear Mother is fast asleep. Lovingly Remembered by Her Oldest Son, James.

IN MEMORIAM In loving memory of Leonard T. Berrigan, D. F. C. A. F. C. Killed in Action while flying over Berlin, March 24—25th, 1944. Fond memories never die As years roll on and days go by A little token true and tender Just to show we still remember. Fondly Remembered by Mother, Sisters and Brothers.

IN MEMORIAM In fond and loving memory of my dear Mother, Mrs. Margaret Garland who died March 25th, 1950. Fondly Remembered and Sadly Missed by Her Daughter Mary, Mrs. Walter Farmer.

IN MEMORIAM In fond memory of a loving husband and dear father, James H. Champion Departed this life March 24, 1947. Sadly missed by wife and daughters, Laura and Charlotte.

IN MEMORIAM Christ the Son of God is risen, He who chose for man to die; He, our only mediator With The Father — our Creator! Man's redemption sure, On High. Ageless is that Easter Story Handed down through countless years; Words of love that knows no ending, Love, all else on earth transcending! Bulwark strong, through all our fears. He it is who paid the ransom For our sins, upon the Cross; Saviour, Gateway to salvation For all men of every nation! Christ, who sits the gold from dross. Priceless is that sacred message Time and change can not bedim; Our great hope — "The Man of Sorrow" Hope, for that Great Dawn — tomorrow! All would perish — but for Him. Christ The Lord, death's thrall-dom vanquished, Great His triumph o'er the grave! In that victory — wondrous glory, All on earth shall know the story! For Eternal Life He gave. Joyful, let your heart en throne Him, He is all in all to man, Brother, who will never fail you! Friend, when all the worst assaults you! Ever, through our mortal span. —John Robert Lamont Campbell
