RARE CHANCE

The property occupied by J. J. Gay and son situated in the village of Pownal, 7 miles from Charlottetown, is offered for sale. The proprietors have carried on a large market garden nursery, and seed business for thirty years, and the purchaser will no doubt retain a large share of the local trade. The premises comprise a large dwelling house, a one-acre orchard, a barn, shed, and about 10 acres of the most fertile land on the Island. This land has been manured year after year, for so long that as an old man said the other day: "It is all a bed of manure and could be hauled for top dressing." This would be an ideal spot for a country merchant, or it would be admirable for a summer resort. The situation is one of the most beautiful on the Island. Good bathing, fishing, boating, shooting and within easy distance: churches, post office, school, telephone and shops all at the door. For terms and further particulars, apply to You Clara Gay, J. J. Gay & son or to JOHN T. MELLISH, Solicitor Charlottetown.

CZARS IN ENGLAND.

A Lapse in Their Visits Between the Years 1844 and 1896.

Queen Victoria was only 35 years old, although already the mother of two children, when last she received the visit of a Czar. The news that the terrible Nicholas was coming, and that only two days hence, produced an extraordinary fluttering in the same dove-note of Windsor. For nearly twenty years this Emperor of Russia had been the most striking figure among the princes of Europe. The accounts of him still fascinate the imagination. Taller by half a head than most of his own picked guard, a powerful and well-rounded form, and straight as a pine, no other man of our century has so looked the part of an autocrat. His face, particularly in profile, was as exceptional in its regularity of beauty as Napoleon's, albeit of a wholly different order. This face had a strange peculiarity. The eyelashes were curiously undeveloped, and of so pale a color that his big, bold, piercing eyes had the effect of no relief whatever. They frightened people who met their gaze. Still more did the tale that were told of him, of his colossal ambitions, his wild outbursts of savagery, his iron-handed grip upon the lives and thoughts and very souls of uncounted millions of subjects, impress the popular fancy of his time. It had been given out that he was to visit England some time in 1845, but now suddenly at the close of May, 1844, word came that he was to appear in London in two days' time. He liked to descend upon people in this abrupt and unexpected way; it was in keeping with his own conception of his character, and produced just the impression of irresponsible omnipotence which it pleased him to create, in small matters not less than in large affairs.

The girlish Queen and those about her were greatly excited by this unlooked-for apparition. Victoria filled her diary with wonder-struck exclamations each day of his stay, and wrote long letters to her relative, King Leopold of Belgium, detailing her emotions during the eventful ten days. "He is certainly a very striking man," she wrote; "still very handsome; his profile is beautiful, and his manners most dignified and graceful; extremely civil, quite alarmingly so, as he is so full of attentions and politeness. But the expression of the eyes is severe, and unlike anything I ever saw before. He gives Albert and myself the impression of a man who is not happy, and on whom the burden of his immense power and position weighs heavily and painfully. He seldom smiles, and when he does the expression is not a happy one." Again, in her journal, the Queen writes, a day or two later: "I don't know why, but I can't help pitying him. I think his immense power weighs heavily on his head."

I have been interested in recalling this impression of grave unhappiness which the first Nicholas produced upon the Queen. The strongest and most robust of men, with a giant's will and nerve of steel, he still found his burden too great. Now, fifty-two years later, the Queen welcomes as a guest the great-grandson of that splendid, somber first Nicholas, whom she "couldn't help pitying." How infinitely greater must be the impulse to pity the second Nicholas, himself a frail, timid little fellow, and bowed under a weight of responsibility which from any point of view is manifold heavier than that which was carried by his ancestor in 1844!

India in Africa.

Nothing is more remarkable than the emergence of India as the dominating military factor of the southern half of the Eastern hemisphere. For some time past, Sir H. H. Johnstone has recruited his bodyguard in Nyassaland from the Sikhs of northern India. The construction of the East African railway has been placed in the hands of Indian contractors, who will execute it by Indian labor, protected by Indian troops. Suakin is now garrisoned by 4,000 Sepoys, and nothing is more probable than that the relief of Bulawayo will ultimately be effected by an Indian army landed at Beira. Mr. Rhodes dreaded this in the days when he regarded the Cape as his natural base. It is possible that he may take a different view of matters now. The fact that the whole of East Africa will be more or less under the military and industrial dominion of India lends great importance to the discussion which is raging as to whether or not the Indian exchequer should be saddled with the cost of the Suakin garrison. A paper has been published giving the opinions of the Anglo-Indian authorities on this subject, but there is very little doubt as to how the question ought to be decided. Africa ought to pay its own way. If it can call upon India for trained troops in case of need, it ought to pay for them. India is not a country that can afford to pay the cost of expeditions to other continents.—From "The Progress of the World," in August Review of Reviews
