U.S. District Judge Robert P. Anderson took the wraps off a long-secret charge against John Christopher Doyle, chairman of the board of Canadian Javelin Limited, in St. John's, Nfld., and New York City and three others.
The indictment names 42 persons it says were victimized in the scheme. Nineteen persons are identified as Connecticut residents.
The grand jury also charged there were other victims "too numerous to mention" but U.S. Attorney Robert C. Zampino said the United States Securities and Exchange Commission was unable to give any figures on other stock purchasers.
Canadian Javelin Limited has 1,568,358 shares outstanding and approximately 18,000 shareholders, the majority in the United States, according to a spokesman for the firm.
Canadian Javelin is listed on the American Stock Exchange and currently sells for about $14 a share, the spokesman said.

SAYS CHARGES OLD
The company itself was not indicted. In a prepared statement, P. J. Desantis, treasurer of the firm, said "the charges were old and believed to be terminated" by a civil consent decree in 1958 in which the non-U.S. operation voluntarily participated.
The grand jury indictment was originally returned in New Haven July 2, 1962, but it was ordered kept secret by the court.
Zampino told Judge Anderson Thursday that there was no longer any reason to keep the indictment secret and the government West Presbyterian Church, Minister: Rev. Peter J. Darch, BA, BD, Assistant to minister: Mr. J. Donald Ross. Hours of worship: Victoria West 11 a.m. (Ross); Lot 14 11 a.m. (Darch); Tyne Valley 8 p.m. (Darch).
The action taken today by the U.S. government against Mr. Doyle has come to my attention. The government of Newfoundland gave its consent and co-operation to the program agreed upon and in which Canadian Javelin Limited has been engaged since 1958 pursuant to our understanding that no such action would be taken.

"This agreement has now been broken unilaterally. The (actions) referred to in the indictment all occurred prior to July 1958. They were made known to this government and to all other interested persons during 1958 and 1959. This government continues to have the fullest confidence in the development of Canadian Javelin's property, in Mr. Doyle, and in Mr. Doyle's sincere dedication to the task of bringing these properties to full development. We will continue to co-operate with Canadian Javelin in all respects."

BRING IN WATER
A $500,000 irrigation and hydro complex is being built on South Africa to develop large areas of the country's dry lands.
The fourth defendant is Arthur I. Korn, head of a New York brokerage house.
Doyle's lawyer, Arthur H. Christy, said Doyle has been available at all times.
The 11-count indictment included the following charges against the defendants:
They engaged in widespread public advertising "highly profitable and rarely, almost immediate, successful commercial production, transporting and marketing of millions of tons of valuable iron ore, when in fact, Canadian Javelin Limited was in no position to so produce, transport or market such iron ore."
They recommended, offered and sold stock in an induced advisers, brokers and dealers to do the same "on the basis of misleading and untrue literature, projects and reports including that the shares would re-sell at from $35 to more than $155 per share."
They manipulated transactions in shares of the company "creating... apparent active trading in such shares and raising the price of such shares from a low of about $3 per share to a high of about $30 per share."
The grand jury also charged that the defendants conspired to defraud the United States by obstructing the functions of the SEC in the sale of the stock of Canadian Javelin.
In St. John's, Nfld., Premier Joseph Smallwood said in a statement:
