

Unlike Francis Bain's trip in 1890, our return was uneventful. Overall the trip was thought to be a rousing success ("a good time was had by all") and participants resolved to repeat the experience next year. In view of the precedent set by the early Natural History Society, perhaps a summer expedition should be undertaken by members of the present society to reenact the 1890 outing.

by Karen Lowther, Orchard Hill Park

