

From the Belleisle Intelligencer.

Grits ever fair, but never true. A sland'rous grasping, greedy crew, Will smile to you, and smile again, But villains still, are all the same.

The country's scourge, its direst foe, The poor man's tyrants here below, O give them not the power again To starve the country while they reign.

Their reign is o'er, their work is done, Their jobs and contracts how they run Men of honor will fill their place, The men of truth, the men of grace.

Hark! who is he, who comes with power To counteract the evil hour? It is Sir John, and his true band, With peace and plenty to the land.

Don't Fret.

Some people are fretting from early morning to dewy eve. It does no good either to themselves or others. Such persons simply make themselves and those around them uncomfortable. There is a great deal in the cultivation of an agreeable temper with respect to trivial events. A certain degree of indifference is essential to comfort. We may safely say of many things, "Well, it will not make much difference, after all," when, if we gave way to a natural feeling of disappointment and irritation—perhaps indignation—they would keep us awake. There are few things about which a sensible, reflecting person need be unhappy or over-concerned. People make themselves unnecessarily uncomfortable, and their own voluntary discomfort extends to others.

How to Have a Loving Wife.

A correspondent sends the following to the Phrenological Journal.

If you would have a loving wife, be as gentle in your words after as before marriage; treat her quite as well when a matron as when a miss; don't make her the maid of all work, and ask her why she looks less tidy than when you first knew her; don't buy cheap, tough beef, and scold because it does not come to the table "porterhouse;" don't grumble about squalling babies if you cannot afford to keep up a nursery, and remember that baby may take after his papa in his disposition; don't smoke and chew tobacco and thus shatter your nerves, spoil your temper and make your breath a nuisance, and complain that your wife declines to kiss you; go home joyous and cheerful to your supper, and tell your wife the good news you have heard, and not silently put on your hat and go out to the club or lodge, and let her afterwards learn that you spent the evening at the opera or at a fancy ball with Mrs. Dash. Love your wife; be patient; remember you are not perfect, but try to be; let whiskey, tobacco and vulgar company alone; live a decent, Christian life, and your wife will be loving and true—if you did not marry a heartless beauty, without sense or worth; if you did, who is to blame if you suffer the consequences?

Trust.

Life would be impracticable unless it were the primary rule to believe what is told us. There is not a single relation in a full life in which we are not compelled to depend upon the word of another—in their honor, their chastity their affection, their faithfulness. To what kind of condition would life be reduced if we apply to these matters "the universal duty of questioning all that we believe?" In some, at all events of these relations, it may be observed, it is in the nature of the case impossible that we should have "sufficient evidence" for our belief. It is an unquestionable fact that many a man who has been trusted, and who has for years borne an unexceptionable character, has proved faithless; and it is quite impossible I can be sure upon the grounds of evidence respecting any particular man that he is capable of this baseness. But the first condition of a genuine and honest friendship is to believe this, to refuse to entertain a doubt of it, and, if need be, to uphold a friend's honor until he is absolutely proved dishonorable. With respect to trust exercised in commercial relations, it might perhaps be said that it is a mere application of the principle of probabilities. As a matter of experience, if customers are trusted, the majority of them will fulfil their engagements: it may be doubted whether tradesmen really do act in practice on this mere calculation of probabilities; at all events the principle does not apply to the other relations of life just referred to. It would be an insult to a friend to say you trusted and loved him because you thought it more probable he was true than that he was false. He expects from you, as the primary condition of true friendship, that you believe firmly concerning him that of which you cannot possibly have certain evidence.

The Greatest Medical Discovery since the Creation of Man, or since the Commencement of the Christian Era.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS are acknowledged by all who have used them, to act quicker than any other plaster they ever before tried, and that one of these plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different: the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

Physicians in all ages have thoroughly tested and well know the effect of Capsicum; and it has always been more or less used as a medical agent for an outward application; but it is only of very recent date that its advantages in porous plasters have been discovered.

Being, however, convinced of the wonderful cures effected by DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS, and their superiority over all other plasters, they now actually prescribe them, in their practice, for such diseases as rheumatism, pain in the side and back, and all such cases as have required the use of plasters or liniments. After you have tried other plasters and liniments, and they have failed, and you want a certain cure, ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER. You can hardly believe your own convictions of its wonderful effects. Although powerful and quick in its action, you can rely on its safety for the most delicate person to wear, as it is free from lead and other poisonous material commonly used in the manufacture of ordinary plasters. One trial is a sufficient guarantee of its merits, and one plaster will call hundreds to your friends.

Ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER, and take no other; or, on receipt of 25 cents for one, $1 for five, or $2 for a dozen, they will be mailed, post paid, to any address in the United States or Canada.
