Creighan-Stroud Wedding
Solemnized In Halifax, N.S.

Standards of pink gladioli decorated Saint Thomas Aquinas Church, Halifax, when Edith Monica Stroud and Paul Hubert Creighan were united in marriage by Rev. Brian Heron officiating at the ceremony. The organist was Ghies-Jourdey and Diana Roma was the soloist.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William C. Stroud, Halifax, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Creighan, Charlottetown.

The bride was given a marriage by her uncle, Sergeant Gerald Higgins. Her gown was an originally designed floor-length model of white imported re-embroidered lace over bridal satin, featuring fitted, sleeveless bodice and sheath skirt. A full length train of nylon organza with scattered appliques fell from her shoulders. Her chapel-length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a wedding ring headpiece of bridal satin accented by green-matching lace, which also trimmed the hemline of her gown. She carried a cascade of pink, stephanotis and pink sweethearts roses.

Joan MacIntosh, Dartmouth, was maid of honor, and Eleanor Dunswothy, Halifax, and Charlotte Creighan, Charlottetown, sisters of the groom, were bridesmaids. They wore matching floor-length gowns of terylene voile over taffeta, in an abstract floral print of peacock, green, and pink, with fitted, sleeveless bodices and bell skirts. Their headpieces were wedding rings of gown-matching fabric. Junior bridesmaids were Kathleen Higgins, Halifax, and Catherine Conrad, Pointe Claire, Quebec. They wore gowns of peacock terylene georgette over taffeta, with round necklines, puffed sleeves, and

HOUSEHOLD
HINTS

Try oven-steamed fish. Seal tightly in tin foil and place in hot oven, 450 degrees F., allowing 10 minutes per inch thickness of fresh fish. Double the time for frozen fish.

If your hands retain an offensive bleach odor after bleaching clothes, use your perspiration deodorant on them, followed by a dash of your favorite cologne or hand lotion.

To remove wallpaper without steaming, use a paint roller and warm soapy water. Combined pressure and sudsy moisture does it.

Protect ceiling light fixtures while painting by swathing them in plastic dry-cleaners' bags.

Carry matching accessories, and carry a nosegay of aqua and yellow carnations.

Mrs. Sherman McCaull and Sherry MacNeill were bridesmaids. They wore gowns identical to that worn by the matron of honor.

Kimberley Byron, niece of the bride, and Gail Fraser, niece of the groom were flower girls. They wore identically styled gowns, similar to those of the bridesmaids, in a pale yellow. They carried baskets of shasta daisies.

Alan Wallace attended the groom as best man. The ushers were Douglas Reid, brother of the bride, and Eric Adams, brother of the groom.

The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a blue three-piece ensemble of nylon and acetate, with white hat, matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother wore a three-piece linen suit in light aqua with white hat and accessories. She wore a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception for 35 guests was held at the Epworth Hall.

The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake. The toast to the bride was made by Allan Wallace to which the groom responded. Congratulatory telegrams were read by Eric Adams.

Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Adams left on a honeymoon trip through the Maritimes and Maine. For travelling the bride chose a pink two-piece suit, with white hat, and accessories and her corsage was of white carnations.

The young couple are residing in Summerside.

Heat Shimmers On Fields
Where Haying Continues

"Did I by any chance happen to hear a woman remark that there is not the labor of once to the haying? Not so much sweat loss, that is?" one of the grandsons quipped this afternoon with a teasing smile.

"Well, whoever said that surely never moved any number of bales. There is labor to that! They don't come light yet this year."

It was no light chore for the strong active chap. The cooling drink he had come by for, would indeed be refreshing. Drinks for a haying crew have changed considerably up the years. The spring of pump water with the handful of fine oatmeal added, the black currant drink, the raspberry cordial — all those have, by and large, given way to the fuzziy ades, or other commercial mixings. Though as he offered smiling, as he put down his glass, "There's nothing better to quench a thirst — if that's all you ask of it — than a long cool drink of the good old Adam's Ale."

"There isn't the actual labor to the haying now. Think of all the machinery involved!" he said. But now explain to those who have "come after" who live and move in this day and age of the farming, the precise meaning of toil?

The heat shimmered above the fields, and the hills were their filmy blue scarves. Scampie came up from wading in the stream, there where the cows, like the visiting heron, come to stand, these times in the cooling flow. Still a bit damp, he sought relief in the cellar. The white k-Fite-n-and-her-much-admired "Tomson's" napped-in-the-shade of the shrubbery in the lawn-border.

MARY HAWORTH

Rejection By In-Laws
Makes Wife Miserable

Dear Mary Haworth: It seems that I have been caught in a terrible web of unhappiness and heartache.

I was reared in a poor and humble but close and loving family. I married a divorced man about 19 years ago. Since then I have suffered agonies caused by my in-laws.

My husband respects me and treats me like a queen. I have tried to be nice to his relatives, as I have been reared. But the brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law never actually accepted me.

They were very fond of his first wife and it is well known all over our city that they like her better than me. I have tried every way I know to win their liking but I have failed.

My mother-in-law seemed to like me as long as I was giving her gifts, but when I couldn't keep this up she too turned her back on me and began slandering me.

It's so hurtful when you live in the same city and your in-laws have nothing to do with you; never visit, never call, never invite you to their homes.

If my husband didn't act as if he cares for me I don't know I would do. I have searched myself to see if the cause could be in me. My friends enjoy their in-laws; I wish I could. Please, advise me, B.R.

Dear B.R.: In my view, you have suffered unnecessarily, and without real warrant, in relation to your female in-laws' poisonously prejudiced incivility to you.

I designate the females as the primary troublemakers for the reason that male in-laws don't gang-up to ostracize female in-laws, as a rule, unless their womenfolk maneuver them into it.

I believe that you have naïvely handicapped yourself in respect to your in-laws, by assuming sensitively, with undue humility, that they are intelligent, competent, fair-minded judges of human quality.

But the truth of the matter on that score, I gather, is that they (the younger women, at least) are a petty-minded crew, small bore snobs, with a kind of "poor white trash" concept of self-important social status. The kind of people, in short, who get
