

Couple Exchange Vows In Summerside U. Church

Lighted tapers and potted ferns created the setting for the five o'clock wedding in Summerside Trinity United Church on Thursday, February 19, when Lillian Thelma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Millar of Ellerslie, became the bride of William Reginald Bryan, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bryan of O'Leary. Rev. C.R. Webber performed the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Eric-Sheen was in charge of the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a turquoise knitted suit with white feather hat and brown accessories. Her corsage was of pink sweetheart roses.

Miss Evelyn Morrison who attended the bride was gowned in Nile green with white accessories and a corsage of white feathered mums.

Mr. Bertram Bryan was his brother's groomsman and Mr. G.E. Mist was usher.

Mrs. Millar chose for her daughter's wedding a blue floral jersey dress with white accessories and a corsage of white feathered mums. The groom's mother was attired in navy with white accessories and a corsage of white feathered mums. The maternal grandmother was gowned in navy-silk with pink accessories and a corsage of pink mums.

A reception for the immediate families and friends was held at Birch Hill Lodge, where the bride's table, with its attractive arrangement of white and yellow mums was centered with a three tier wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom.

For a honeymoon trip throughout New Brunswick, the bride donned a muskrat fur jacket, gift of the groom.

On return Mr. and Mrs. Bryan will reside in Summerside, where the groom is Assistant Manager of Holman's Foodland and the bride is on the staff of the Island Telephone Company.

A programme consisting of finding the names of wedding a sick relationship that is numbing your sense of reality—because that kind of placental surrender to irrational dominance simply compounds the initial tragedy, without profiting anybody.

To sum up: reading, resolving, and praying can be powerful aids—but they aren't the Rx for you, just now. You need positive first-hand psychiatric support, in searching your way to clarity. M.H.

Tarragon Piquant Herb With A Variety Of Uses

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN

At the Hotel Exposition in New York City's Coliseum, the Chef disappeared. I saw him, finally, at the end of a long aisle, talking earnestly with a young woman in a big booth featuring broiler-fryer chickens. She was cooking something in an electric fry-pan, chatting with the Chef as she cooked.

PRIZE-WINNING DISH

"Ah, Madame!" he exclaimed as I arrived booth-side, "this young lady is preparing a very fine dish, Chicken Tarragon. She won first prize for it in the recent Delmarva cooking contest. May I present Mrs. Barbara Marks of Wantaugh, Long Island?"

"How did you happen to make a bee-line to this booth, Chef?" I asked.

FAMILIAR SCENT

"I followed the nose, Madame, which revealed to me the unmistakable fragrance of tarragon, a favorite French herb used in preparing this dish."

"This chicken tarragon is done," announced Mrs. Marks. "Won't you and the Chef taste?"

We did, we were delighted, and asked Mrs. Marks for her recipe. Mrs. Marks' chicken tarragon: Section 1 ready-to-cook 3-lb. broiler-fryer chicken into eight portions. Mix together 1 tsp. seasoned salt, 1/2 tsp. paprika. Season the chicken with this.

In a skillet that can go-to-table, melt 1/4 c. butter. Slow-brown chicken on both sides. Dust with 1 tsp. crumbled, dried tarragon. Add 1 peeled, thin-sliced medium onion and 1/2 lb. sliced fresh or 1 c. sliced canned mushrooms. Cover. Simmer 25 min. or until fork-tender. Serves 4 generous-sized portions.

"Since I won the chicken cooking contest," smiled Mrs. Marks, "I've been besieged by friends and neighbors who want to know where to buy tarragon. It seems hard to find. I always get mine at a herb store."

"Specialty food stores carry tarragon, so do some supermarkets," said the Chef. "In France this herb is considered indispensable. We mince and sprinkle tarragon on scrambled eggs, game, broiled meats and fish. We use it with mushrooms, add it to mayonnaise and French dressing for salads, sometimes to Bearnaise sauce, table mustard and, of course, herb vinegars."

You will find it well worth while to experiment with tarragon. Use the dried leaves now and, later, get some tarragon plants for your garden. The flavor is delightful.

Tomorrow's Dinner: French onion soup; chicken tarragon, mushrooms; buttered rice; mixed vegetables; pumpkin omelet; coffee, tea, milk. Measurements are level; recipe for 4 to 6.

MARY HAYWORTH

Hubby Collects Grievances After Failure In Career

Dear Mary Haworth: A glance at my history would reveal Irish-English ancestry, a happy childhood, parents still living. I married at 29, and had four children in 10 years. The eldest is now married (with children too) and our youngest starts high school next year.

My husband also is of Irish stock—high strung, impatient, a perfectionist. Ten years ago he had a nervous breakdown, and although not hospitalized, he was convalescent for a year. I weathered the anxiety, money stress, etc., because it didn't affect our personal relationship.

For nearly 20 years we had a good marriage and unusual compatibility, then things changed. John failed in an attempt to switch careers in his mid-forties; and just then our eldest rushed into marriage. John suffered another emotional letdown; his tastes deteriorated; he became obsessively concerned about his health; has fixed ideas; collects grievances. Moreover, he is extremely hostile to me. For a long time he scarcely spoke to me; but now has leveled off to a strained tolerance.

SEEMS DOOMED I have a part-time job which I love; and lots of loyal friends, many of long standing. I'm not expecting John to get any better. He seems stalemated in this dreadful hostile existence. And he flatly refuses specialist attention.

We've had separate rooms for several years; and I've gone from fearing he wouldn't ever love me again, to fear that he might. He's such a complete stranger it would seem like adultery! His way of looking over, around and through me; also his way of twisting or deflecting any topic I introduce, all reduce me to emotional zero. What can I read to help re-organize myself? Or what resolutions can I make to keep my feet on the ground? I feel cold and empty. I pray constantly and my faith is strong. Only hope lags. Can you help me a little? K.P.

PSYCHIATRIC HELP Dear K.P.: In your long letter here condensed, you say you've counseled with pastors and doctors, and don't mind airing your quandary. But why haven't you seen a psychiatrist or psychologist? The situation as described calls for the best psychiatric insight, to get at the reason why you put up with this nightmare routine.

If your husband won't seek treatment, you should—as preventive medicine, to insure your health against the wear-and-tear of his aggressively sick hostility which is beginning to depress you. Also, because a sound switch towards self-respecting detachment on your part, as regard his non-cooperativeness, would automatically evoke a change for the better in him, I think. Unless, of course he is psychotic, in which case he should be hospitalized, whether or not he admits the need.

Your cheerio-type of tolerance of the situation is synthetic, off pitch, as if you are kidding yourself about something. Perhaps the falsetto sound means that you don't want to stand alone, on your own feet, as it were, in facing the actuality of your husband's "recession." By having him around in guise of partner and family head; perhaps you are clutching at the illusion of domestic security.

FRESH PERSPECTIVE When his sickness starts clouding your thinking too, so that you have begun to feel fogged and helpless, it is high time to study your own performance with specialist help, to get fresh perspective on what to do. It is unwise to coast along in
