

Her Husband

It is amusing and sometimes disgusting to hear some women talk of relatives and friends as not being congenial. A wife who makes such a declaration about her husband shows not only poor taste, but a lack of discretion and good sense that is ominous for the future.

"My husband is a real good provider, stiddy as a clock, and all that but, in some things we ain't a bit congenial," remarking a garrulous woman to a friend.

"Upon what do you disagree?" inquired the friend.

"Well mostly about our reading."

"How so?"

"Well, the fact is, I'm too literary for John."

"Indeed?"

"Yes; John ain't a bit literary. Now, I always did run to literaryness. And I just believe I could write."

"Did you ever try?"

"Yes; I've wrote two or three poems. They rhyme right straight through. But John he just laughs at me. He says a woman with four children and only a poor carpenter for her husband ain't got time to be literary. There isn't the first literary streak in that man. Now, I'm the greatest reader."

"Does your husband dislike books?"

"Oh, he likes to read the papers and says he thinks it's his duty as a voter to keep informed in politics; and he reads about the labor questions, and he reads some old histories and a book called Macaulay's Essays that he's forever reading. But then, when it comes to being literary, John ain't there."

"What do you read?"

"Oh, I read every scrap of poetry in the newspapers I can pick up, and I often have four novels on hand at a time. I'm reading one now called Millicent, the Mad, Mad, Maid of the Mist, and I take four splendid story papers and borrow two more. I suppose I'd be happier if I wasn't so literary, but I can't help it."

"Probably not."

"And, of course, John can't appreciate my tastes and my kind of reading. He ain't a bit congenial. And I sometimes think it would have been better for John if he'd married a woman less literary than me. It's dreadful to be so literary when your husband ain't a bit that way."

"Yes—dreadful for the husband."

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN

On the Loss of MANHOOD.

A LECTURE on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatrophia, induced by Self-Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without dangerous surgical operations, blisters, instruments, rings or cordials; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
