ADVERTISING RATES

For small advertisements which are ordered for only one or two weeks the charge is 1 cents per inch for the first insertion, and 0 cents for each continuation. Rate cards are furnished on application at the office. Special contract prices at a reduced rate are quoted for advertisements four inches in size or larger, which are to run for three months or longer.

No special notices inserted unless paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line, and under no circumstances will such paid notices appear in the local column.

Special discounts made on all advertisements connected with Church Fairs, Bazaars, Picnics, etc. No notices will be inserted with the same unless the regular rate of 10 cents per line is paid.

That THE EXAMINER is considered by our Merchants and Manufacturers to be the leading newspaper in P. E. Island, and consequently the most valuable advertising medium through which to make their announcements public, is abundantly proved by the fact that in order to accommodate our advertisers we have been compelled to enlarge the paper to its present size.

THE MAKERS OF BOOKS

STORIES THAT ARE INTERESTING AND SOME OF THEM FUNNY.

An Excellent Yarn About Harry Furniss—Lord Tennyson's Mail—The Oddities of Bulwer—Mrs. Browning and Her Discriminating Dog Flush.

Mrs. Browning wore her thick, brown hair in ringlets, which hung down on each side of her cheeks; she struck me then as being all eyes and hair, not unlike a spaniel dog. Could that frail, little lady, attired in a simple gray dress and straw bonnet, and the cheerful gentleman, in a brown overcoat, be great poets? They had brought with them their little son, Penini; he had long, flowing, fair, curly hair, and wore white drawers, edged with embroidery. These peculiarities impressed me, for I thought he looked like a girl. The trio were followed by a beautiful brown dog, with golden eyes.

I approached her feeling very shy. What was this great woman going to speak about to a little girl like me? But I was soon put at my ease; she kissed me, and, turning to Penini, placed his little hand in mine, saying: "You must be friends, you and Pen. He is my Florentine boy," stroking his head lovingly. "Has he not got beautiful hair—so golden—that is because he was born in Italy, where the sun is always golden."

The ten things were brought in. On the tray was a big plum cake. The dog wagged his tail, and then Mrs. Browning said to me: "Flush is a dear old dog; I love him. When I was so ill about a year ago, Flush never left my side, day or night. Every time I put my hand out of the bed I could always feel his curly head and cold nose."

Flush now looked up in his mistress' face with intense devotion in his wistful eyes. We gave Flush some slices of bread and butter, which he accepted, but, instead of eating them, he disappeared underneath a big, yellow satin divan. When I presented him with a piece of plum cake he swallowed it there and then with much gusto.

I remember that Mrs. Barrett Browning whispered to me that if I looked under that divan I would find the bread and butter hidden there. She said that Flush was far too polite a dog to refuse anything offered to him, but from personal observation, she knew that he could not eat bread and butter when he saw any chance of getting plum cake. Penini and I crept on all fours, and looked under the divan, and there we found the slice of bread and butter.—Temple Bar.

Bulwer's Oddities.

Bulwer's appearance was decidedly what is generally understood by "aristocratic," or what the French call "distingue." Tall, slim, with finely cut features, prominent among which was a long aquiline nose, with an abundant crop of curly brown hair and a full beard, the first impression he produced, aided by a careful toilet, was one of ease and elegance. At a dinner table, where he liked to speak, and, if possible, to speak alone, he was certainly useful as well as ornamental, with his large blue ribbon and star of the Order of the Bath. There was a certain naivete, strange as that word may sound, when applied to so conformed a man of the world in his vain and very apparent struggle against the irresistible encroachments of age. He did not give in with that philosophical resignation which might have been expected of one so clever, and, in some respects, so wise. He fought against it tooth and nail. Lord Lytton's hair seemed dyed, and his face looked as if art had been called in to rejuvenate it. A quack in Paris had pretended to cure his growing deafness, a constant source of legitimate grief to him. He was radiant one autumn on his return to town because he thought he was cured, but not for long. The copious use of snuff was no doubt part of the attempted cure, of which the most palpable results were large dark red or blue pocket handkerchiefs, quite out of harmony with his otherwise elegant toilet. His expressions of regret at his impaired digestive organs had something ludicrous about it; he would point with a sigh to a rosy-cheeked American apple and say: "To think that there are people who can eat that!"—From Rudolph Lehman's Recollections.

Lord Tennyson's Mail.

Here is a curious freak of Lord Tennyson's imagination, based on fact: "Look at this pile, which, on my return from abroad, I find heaped on my table. I ought to have thanked you before for your generous lines—but look at the pile—some three feet high—and let that apologize for my silence—and believe me, tho' penny-post-maddened, yours ever, A. Tennyson." The words followed the drawing by Alfred Tennyson of a kind of pyramid in sections specifying the nature of the letters on his table: "Anonymous insolent letters," "letters from America, Australia, from monomaniacs, etc.," "letters asking explanation of particular passages," "begging letters of all kinds," "subscriptions asked for church building, schools, Baptist chapels, Wesleyans, etc.," "newspapers—gracious or malignant" "printed circulars of poems asked for subscription" "presentation copies of poems," "printed proof sheets of poems," "MS. poems," "letters for autographs," form the two sides of this curious and unique sketch.

People who pester a man of letters do not think of the vast aggregate made up of many single applications of various sorts. Each post used to bring to the house fifty or sixty letters. Mrs. Tennyson and Hallam Tennyson were far too much occupied with the task of wading through these piles of unsolicited correspondence.

A Story of Harry Furniss.

Here is a funny story, though he did not tell it to me himself, that went the round of the New York clubs when Furniss visited the States two years ago. Be it known that American journalists and American flaneurs affect to read Punch as a production absolutely devoid of humor, and inasmuch as it is a paper written "by gentlemen for gentlemen," it probably fails to secure general appreciation in journalistic America, though in certain circles it is as popular in the great Republic as it is here. Two men were quarrelling violently in a club smoking-room.

"I tell you I saw a man sitting here an hour ago laughing over a copy of London Punch."

"Impossible!" replied his companion. "I don't believe there is a man in America who could laugh over London Punch."

The discussion waxed furious, and at last bets were made on the subject. Suddenly a thought struck the second man.

"What was the fellow like you saw reading Punch?"

"A little, sandy-bearded man, with a rather bald head and a big moustache."

"Ah!" replied his interlocutor, "now I see. Why that was Harry Furniss himself."—Strand Magazine.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

EXPLORING LINGUISTIC BYWAYS.

An English Philologist Superintending the Get-Up of an Enormous Dictionary.

The most common method of preserving the linguistic peculiarities of race or clan, next to calling upon "the oldest inhabitant," have consisted in the chance references of wandering novelists, and, in the case of some peculiarly far-reaching dialect, standard writings, or an occasional classic. The plan of a distinctively dialect dictionary is of quite modern origin. The first idea of such a work was a repository for the best, the purest, the simplest and most approved forms of the language, the pyrotechnical expletive of the rude and the twittering phrases of society being alike ignored. Dr. Joseph Wright, a deputy professor of comparative philology at Oxford, and a leading member of the English Dialect Society, has taken upon him the work of editing what is to be called an "English Dialect Dictionary," says the Boston Journal. The work is intended to be very thorough. The society was organized in 1873, and since that time occasional volumes, some seventy in all, chiefly glossaries of the macaronics of various districts, have been issued. In spite of this, and the collections of the society, the undertaking is still a very arduous one, and will not be completed, it is thought, for ten or twelve years. Taking into account the years of work already given by the society in various ways, the work will represent, when completed, at least thirty years of research and compilation.

The material that accumulates in such a work is voluminous almost beyond belief. A recent English writer tells of a visit to Professor Wright's dictionary den, where he saw over a ton of paper slips, each slip being devoted to a word and its description. It cost $8,000 to arrange these in alphabetical order. There are already 200 pounds on the letter "S" alone. Much of the district work is done by committees and secretaries. Each individual of the committee reads some work, and the secretary notes the results. Of course there is much of the dialect that has never yet been seen on a printed page, and is almost extinct. Such as this the compiler is particularly anxious to save. As each word is taken up it is located geographically, and also negatively, where the absence of it is peculiar, and the shades of meaning, derivation, examples and authority will be noted. The compilation of such a work is a much more laborious undertaking than that of preparing an ordinary English dictionary, when reference would be had to hundreds of standard books and previously published lexicons. With Professor Wright's work, the most valuable words are found only in the very byways and hedges of the literary field. And not the least of the task is the final decision, whether the source of information is trustworthy, or suggests the case of a schoolmaster who offered sixpence each for any uncommon dialect specimen, and received so many it was feared the boys were inventive neologists rather than truthful students.

The scope of the undertaking is immense. It will include all the patois, the vernacular and colloquialisms of scores of districts, whose present inhabitants are not always of the race found there 200 years ago, which is the age limit under which the work is being made up. Natives have been found willing and anxious to aid in the work. Citizens by adoption apparently care but little. The information already obtained counts over a million of the half-sheet slips, designed to save the final labor of the editor. The reading of one set of works by a competent man added 10,000 to this number. As soon as enough subscribers have been secured, the publication will begin, in semi-annual parts, to be followed by a general supplement, taking up all unfinished matter.

A Few Thoughts on Light.

Man has invented artificial light; he inferred it from natural light. He has in the same way invented artificial truth, inferring them from supreme truths.

The sun appears every day illuminating space to show us the heavens.

In Madrid the gas is lighted every night that we may see the earth.

Man is to God what a box of matches is to the sun.

Human pride can also write its Genesis. It can begin like this:

"One day a man said: 'Fiat lux,' and there were matches."

Henceforward a blaze of light which illumines us perfectly.

The light invented by men is worth more than the light created by God; let us see how:

A thousand sunbeams cost nothing; one box of matches costs a half penny.—Scribner's Humor of Spain.

A Female Executioner.

Since the death of Seyffert, the Vienna executioner, the authorities have received scores of applications for his place, of which the most curious is that of a pretty woman, who sends her photograph with the following letter:

"I am eighteen years old and possess great physical strength. My sex and above all my beauty fit me for the employment I solicit. The fact is that the last person on whom the condemned man fixes his gaze is the executioner, and nine times out of ten is repulsively homely. How much more consoling it would be for a criminal, before entering into eternity to have the knot adjusted by the soft hands of a woman, whose bewitching glances would cause him to forget for an instant the terrors of a moral agony worse than death!"

Instinct Stronger Than Reason.

A man on a Lake Huron steamer had the only specimen of black rattlesnake I have ever met with. It was about the size of an ordinary garter snake and as vicious as satan. It was confined in a strong box covered with thick plate glass. When anyone would touch the glass with his finger the snake would strike the under side opposite the finger as quickly as a stroke of lightning. The experimenter would always jerk away as suddenly. There was not a man on board, however muscular and free from nervousness, who could keep his finger to the glass when the snake would strike, although knowing that it could not possibly touch him. Strong men would try it again and again, certain of their ability to endure the test, but with the same result.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Neat Answer.

Two friends, a weaver and a tailor, became in time enemies, so much so that the tailor spoke much evil of the weaver behind his back, though the weaver always spoke well of the tailor. Upon a lady asking the weaver why he always spoke so well of the tailor, who spoke so ill of him, he replied: "Madam, we are both liars."

Cool and Collected.

Two thieves were breaking into a door when the master of the house, hearing them, looked out of the window and said: "Friends, come a little later; we are not yet in bed."

of never forgetting is acquired by learning to remember the right thing at the right time. For instance, should you have any uneasiness at the stomach at any time, think of Adams' TUTTI FRUTTI. It gives immediate and permanent relief.

See that no imitation is palmed off on you.

MANDOLIN.

MR. VINNICOMBE will take a limited number of pupils for this beautiful instrument. Hodge's system of instruction will be used. Students, advanced, will be formed into a Mandolin Club, to enable them to play en semble.

Orders from the country or city for Piano and Organ Tuning will receive prompt attention. Address P. O. Box 98.
