The truly wise are very slow in feeling sure how much they know.

—Old Mother Nature.

In all the Green Forest there was that evening no more peaceful and quiet scene than at the pond of Paddy the Beaver. In the Black Shadows that covered the end of the pond, Paddy and Mrs. Paddy floated side by side. On the opposite shore where the moonlight lay, Lightfoot the Deer was standing with his front feet in the water. Now and then he put his head down to drink. Near him was an old log. Back of this, lying flat to keep out of sight, was Reddy Fox. The two Beavers had watched Reddy creeping nearer and nearer to Lightfoot. It looked very much as if he was planning to attack Lightfoot, yet this was hard to believe. You see, Reddy is not very big, not even as big as he looks, for the fur of his coat is long. It was hard to believe that he would take such a chance, such an utterly foolish chance, of getting hurt himself by attacking Lightfoot the Deer.

Paddy had been for giving his danger signal, but Mr. Paddy whispered not to. She wanted to see what was going to happen.

A splash in the water caused Paddy and Mrs. Paddy to turn their heads. There, moving out from the shore opposite where Lightfoot stood, was a head just above the water. "Look!" whispered Paddy just as if Mrs. Paddy wasn't looking. "It's Buster Bear!"

It was Buster and he was swimming straight out.

Paddy was right. It was Buster and he was swimming straight out. If he kept on he would come ashore right where Lightfoot now was. They looked over to see if Lightfoot had yet seen Buster Bear. Just as they looked Lightfoot threw up his head with a was clear that he hadn't seen Lightfoot before. He hadn't been swimming to try to catch Lightfoot, but merely to get on the other side of the pond. You know, Buster is quite at home in the water. He often swims across sharp snort. They knew then that he saw Buster.

When Lightfoot snorted Buster Bear stopped swimming. It a river or a pond.

Paddy and Mrs. Paddy were disappointed. Now nothing exciting would happen. Lightfoot would go away and so would Reddy Fox. Buster might go or might stay, but there would be nothing exciting. They would never know why Reddy Fox had crept up on Lightfoot the Deer as if planning to attack him.

Lightfoot still stood with his head held high looking out on the water at Buster Bear. He wasn't in any hurry to leave. He would wait to be sure that Buster intended to come all the way.

Paddy the Beaver was tempted. He was tempted to lift that broad, thick, flat tail of his and bring it down on the water hard, to make a crack like that of a rifle. It wouldn't really frighten the others, but it would startle them. It would make them jump and it would make them suspicious. They would think that he had seen another enemy and was giving his danger signal. It was hard, so he was about to do it that Reddy Fox played a joke.

GATT Members See Risk In European Common Market

GENEVA (Reuters) — Canada and other member nations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade has expressed concern over the possible effects on world trade of the six-nation European common market.

The market, scheduled to come into effect Jan. 1, was the principal topic of discussions Tuesday as GATT members delivered general policy statements. South Africa, Ghana and Japan joined Canada in seeking assurance the market would not be harmful to their trade.

Canadian Trade Minister Churchill said it "appears possible" customs duties imposed by the common-market, made up of the Netherlands, Belgium, West Germany, France, Luxembourg and Italy, will be higher than those imposed by the individual nations at present.

Churchill also sought assurance that the market would not impose restrictions on imports from outside countries. He said he did not want Canada's access to the markets of the six countries for agricultural products impaired by "high tariffs, guaranteed prices, preferential long - term marketing agreements and the use of quantitative restrictions against outside countries."

MAY BE CONCERNED

Churchill said Canada would be concerned if the customs union "were to divide us and to weaken the structure of trade relationships which has been built up since the war under the auspices of the general agreement."

The minister criticized United States disposal of wheat and other grains as "a particular problem of concern to Canada and many other countries."

Ichiro Kono, Japanese minister of state for economic planning, said his government fears the common market will become another preferential trade area which may "cause undue damage to the interests of third countries."

BACKS DEATH PENALTY

PRETORIA, South Africa (Reuters) — Justice Minister Charles Swart said Wednesday the government intends to empower the courts to pass the death sentence in cases of armed robbery where firearms or other dangerous weapons are used. Convicted African criminals who are Union subjects will be banished permanently from the cities and sent to Opening lead—king of hearts.

South adopted the best tactics in going directly to the slam without further investigation. With 19 high card points plus a guaranteed trump fit opposite a jump response that represented 13 to 15 points, a slam contract seemed clearly indicated.

Declarer won the ace of hearts, drew two rounds of trumps, and cashed four diamonds, discarding the jack of hearts. The eight of hearts was ruffed and dummy was entered with a trump.

The situation was ripe for an endplay when a low club was led from dummy. Declarer intended to finesse the eight which would put West on lead and in a hopeless position. However, East upset the applecart when he played his nine on the low club lead and South ended going down one.

The effort was good but not good enough. There was a much better play available which South missed. West had marked himself by the opening lead with the queen of hearts. Declarer failed to take advantage of this knowledge.

South's plays were all correct up to the point where he discarded the jack of hearts on the fourth round of diamonds. He should have discarded the eight of clubs instead. This would have created a foolproof endplay position.

A heart is now led from dummy and the jack is lost to West's queen. West has no escape. He must either lead a club up to declarer's A-Q or play a heart which is ruffed in dummy as South disposes of his queen of clubs.

In choosing which loser to discard on the fourth diamond, South cannot properly decide until he has visualized what the end position will be after he has made his choice.

The heart discard was bound to lead to an imperfect endplay situation, the result of which could not be guaranteed.

The club discard, retaining the jack of hearts as the throw-in card, left nothing to chance. It was sure to succeed regardless of the location of the king of clubs.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X E is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Children's Work Board Meets

The annual meeting of the Children's Work Board of the Maritime Religious Education Council was held in St. John's United Church, Moncton, on Oct. 24th.

The president, Mrs. Allison Fraser of Saint John, presided, and members of the Board from Halifax, Sasckville, McAdam, St. John and Moncton were present.

Various matters of business were taken up, including plans for the next meeting, which will be held following the workshop, probably the latter part of February or early March.

The report of the General Secretary, Mrs. Sabean, was heard, also that of the President of the Children's Work Board. Mrs. Fraser, who, much to the regret of the members, is retiring for reasons of health.

Greetings were brought from the former president, Mrs. Gordon MacDonald of Charlottetown.

It was brought to the attention of the meeting that Junior Camps are growing in popularity, and that during the past summer five such camps were held with a total of four hundred campers.

Plans for future camps were made, especially one for the training of counsellors and directors for these camps.

Mrs. Miller of McAdam reported for the Nominating Committee. Mrs. R.L. Gibbons of Halifax was elected Chairman.

BUSINESS SPOTLIGHT

Taxation Will Be Reviewed At Tax Foundation Meeting

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

A wide range of taxation and associated matters will come under review at the annual tax conference of the Canadian Tax Foundation in Toronto Nov. 11 and 12.

Speakers will include Dr. J. R. Petrie, Montreal consulting economist, on "The credit squeeze—a critical appraisal of monetary policy," Prof. Malcolm G. Taylor of the University of Toronto on "Financing health insurance—what lies ahead?" H. Carl Goldenberg, Montreal, on "municipal finance and taxation," and G. O. Grant, Metropolitan Toronto commissioner of roads, on "Urban roads—a universal transportation problem."

Grattan O'Leary, associate editor of the Ottawa Journal, will address the annual banquet

WILL DISCUSS TAXES

Panel discussions will include such topics as: Tax cases in the news; provincial profit allocation rules what's to do about self-employed pension plans? forestry tenures and taxes; foreign tax havens for Canadian business; mining taxation, the tariff 1967 tax planning for the executive; and death-tax legislation.

The foundation is a non-profit organization established by the Canadian Bar Association and the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accounts to undertake research in Canada taxation fields

The newsprint bulletin (Oct. 23) of the American Newspaper Publishers Association says reports indicate that the anti-trust division of the United States department of justice is conducting a study of the newsprint industry so as to make a report to Congress early in 1958.

The bulletin adds that information sought by the department is being gathered by the FBI.

The current monthly review of the Bank of Nova Scotia—a study of Canada's atlantic fisheries—says:

"It now is widely recognized that extensive as the fish resources of the North Atlantic are, they are by no means inexhaustible.

"While some species, notably herring, could probably be taken in much larger quantities without danger of depleting the stocks, a good many other are probably being fished at close to the optimum rate.

"In the light of the rapid increase in the world's population, the wise conservation of this valuable and renewable food source gains added urgency."

OUTLINES CHANGES

The review outlines changes brought by mechanization and new techniques in the catching, processing, and distribution stages.

It says, however, new methods are far from being fully applied, and adds:

"The problem of the subsistence farm, too small and too poor to take advantage of mechanized labor-saving techniques, has its counterpart in the small fishing enterprise using primitive equipment and hand methods, and often processing the fish as well as catching it.

"This problem, which is a social as well as ane conomic one, will not be easy to solve."

The review comments that increased dependence on the U.S market and recurrent threats of American protective measures, are sources of anxiety.
