A SUGGESTION

Chapter 38

There is no need to go into too many details of Dora's life for the first few months after Gladys had returned.

"I should think," she wrote, "that having had her way and married M. she would be satisfied and like me. But she seems to dislike me more and more. I cannot understand why."

Yet she did deep in her mind, understanding why. But the reasons were unpleasant and she was conventionally brought up, that she tried to deceive herself by not admitting she knew.

There were two reasons. First of all, Gladys knew that her husband had wintered very much for Dora the winter and Spring before. So there was a foolish but natural jealousy on that account. She was forever on the watch for some remark he might make that would show he still regarded his genuine pleasure at seeing Dora and talking to her the one night she went there for dinner, roused in her a perfect frenzy of jealousy.

But she dared not show it to him. She had kept it down within herself. And as something had to come out, the feeling became dislike of Dora. The other reason was that she wanted from Morton the same enthusiastic sort of devotion she was used to from the other boys. She did not get it for Morton was the sort who said little, even if he felt much. He was a capable of an enormous amount of quiet, steady devotion, a dependable, everlasting but unobtrusive love. This was the sort he began to feel towards Dora months before. He had yielded to force, not to love.

Her attraction was her abundant vitality. But it made him submissive, not protective. And she felt this and wanted more and more intensely the sort of love she knew she could not get. Dora suffered as a result of all these complicated feelings. For Gladys was so sure of her success with men that she never doubted but that for Dora she would have had all Morton's devotion. Once she went as far as to ask, "Weren't you in love with her in the Spring?" To which he truthfully answered, "Yes, a little, she's so appealing."

To her mouth, Gladys confided, "I suppose I do neglect Dora. But she's that meek and sort of harmless kind that is really awfully dangerous."

"But you're not afraid Morton?"

PARMER McLELLAN FARM WORK BOOTS $4.50

The Quaker Way

Down in Pennsylvania, the home of the Quakers, there is a lady named Hester Price. She knew that the Quaker method of putting up preserves and relishes was just a little better than the usual way, so with the aid of her friends, she began preserving for export. Some of the good things that have reached us are:

- Sweet Cucumber Rings .55, Colonial Chutney .40, Yellow Tomato Jam .75, Red Currant Jelly .40, Crab Apple Jelly .40, Prune Marmalade .50, Strawberry Jam .60, Sweet Orange Jam .60, Quince Marmalade .60, Grape Jelly .75

Big generous bottles, with a flavor all their own.

Everything That's Good to Eat

"Oh, no, but he's so sympathetic! He feels sorry for her." "I'm sure I don't know why! Aunt Maude exclaimed resentfully. "She has a good home, no more work than the daughter of any family like ours would have, friends—and even a salary. That's more than most daughters get."

Aunt Maude blantly overlooked the fact that a daughter is provided for entirely and that Dora from her $18 a month salary, had to dress herself and pay all her expenses except food and lodging. "I'm making over Gladys' clothes that she discarded when she got her trousseau," she wrote once. "How I hate them! It isn't because I know that everyone will remember there was a piece of braid on Gladys' dress, when they see a slightly different color in the material, or that her sleeves were full and I've narrowed them. They know I'm poor and I don't care. Only I feel as though my hands were on me when I have on her things, and the weight of them depresses me. She might as well be there to choke me."

Which showed how bitterness was growing into the sweetest of souls, and how loneliness can have only a harmful effect. "I must get away," she wrote once. But she never knew how. Her father began restlessly talking of tramping the South again, shipping to Brazil perhaps and trying his luck in South America in the winter. It was too far afield to take.

"I get a job and save and send for you," he said. But she knew that would never happen. "Anyway, it will be better in town," she thought as the cool days came and harvesting was almost over. "At least, there will be people to see on the streets. No one comes here now."

But harvesting over, Aunt Maude and Uncle Peter moved to town and left her with her father to look after the farm. That was Gladys' suggestion. Aunt Maude suspected now that Dora was dangerous as all meek people were dangerous, though she'd never thought about it! And Gladys triumphed again. "He'll be all right in a year when we settle down, he'll forget it and will have a baby. That will interest him," Gladys thought. Aunt Maude was already at work on the smallest of knitted saucers.

Then Dora, alone on the farm, received a letter from Gloria. "I meant to write," it said, "but my nurse and cook left and Frankie has been ill, so I've been more than busy. How are you, dear child? You sound lovely!" Dora had an inspiration. She sat down and wrote. "Please send Frankie to me for the winter. I'll make him well, the air is good here, and it will relieve you if I care for him and I'd so love to have him! He would be company and we are alone on the farm."

Tomorrow—A Telegram

Registry Office, Charlottetown. ($5,500.)

Mr. McArthur: Comparing the estimates for the Summerside in Charlottetown and Summerside, we find the engrossing clerk paid $2,700 as against $300 paid to the clerk at Summerside. This is out of all proportion to the receipts. I don't know that it is necessary to have so many clerks in this office. We get along in Summerside with one clerk at $300.

Registry Office in Charlottetown do for King's and Queen's counties? Mr. Stewart: Yes.

Mr. McArthur: I maintain that the expenditure is out of all proportion to the necessities. The item passed.

Registry Office, Summerside. ($2,325.)

Mr. Stewart: I believe there has been a change in this department during the last year, in the Registrar of Deeds. My hon. friend the Attorney-General, made a visit up there and a number of matamorphaes took place. (Laughter.) I suppose my hon. friend does not want to give any explanation on that.

The item passed. (The item for telegrams ($50) passed without discussion.)

Ferries, Queen's County ($13,235.)

Mr. Metherell: Is there any way of obtaining the receipts that come from the fees collected on the Hillsboro and Rocky Point ferry?

Mr. McArthur: Some of the hon. members here are allowed to speak beside the point for an hour at a time, and when I ask a question it is given very quick shift. I ask a question, and before I get an answer—the train is gone! I am not satisfied with the Registry Office items, and I am not satisfied with this item for the steamer Hillsboro. I think the question raised by the hon. member for First Prince (Mr. Metherell) is a good one, and I would like to see this matter thoroughly gone into.

Hon. Mr. Crosby: We cannot get the receipts because the receipts are part of the contract. We pay the contractor so much money for the ferry service, and he collects the rest of his money in receipts. We know they are smaller than they were two or three years ago.

Mr. Stewart: How does the expenditure for ferries compare with last year?

Mr. Metherell: I have been given to understand by men who live here that the amount earned by the Hillsboro ferry is almost nil and this appears a large item ($12,000) to be paid out of the provincial treasury. They should be able to give to this House definite information regarding what she is earning. The expenditure on the roads and bridges have been cut down when they were, though you would have thought that we should get an increase that way.

Mr. LePage: There has been no more service given than has always been given on this ferry service. Of late years the prices of everything went up, and since the automobile roads have been built to the other sections of the country the fees from the ferry have fallen off. There are not the people going to the summer resorts that there was.

Mr. Higgs: This boat served a large number of people near Charlottetown. They must use it to go to West River Bridge, and they are entitled to the service. A few

Provincial Legislature

Hon. Mr. Lea: The women were paid to scrub the offices, and that is where the soap went.

Mr. Stewart: Quite a large amount! My hon. friend seems to have usurped the position of the Public Works Commissioner since he undertakes to answer for him. He got off so easily himself I suppose he thinks he is competent to answer for both departments.

Hon. Mr. Crosby: The janitor's duties are what they have always been; and there has always been scrub-women.

Mr. Stewart: They were not paid nearly as large an amount.

Hon. Mr. Crosby: They charge more now than they used to. The item passed.

Public Works Department ($10,550)

Mr. Stewart: How many stenographers are you employing now? Has there been an increase?

Hon. Mr. Crosby: Though we are doing double the work we are doing it with the same staff.

Mr. Stewart: Here is the Chief Engineer's salary—$12,000. I will not object to that. I will not keep this House up until 2 o'clock in the morning fighting and trying to get that salary cut out—though I remember when my hon. friends did this very thing. Now he hear the hon. Commissioner of Public Works giving all the credit for whatever is being done to that gentleman, and very properly so. But when did they mean what they said—when they tried to cut his salary out, or now, when they praise him up and say they can't get along without him? In 1915 he was going to be driven out the moment they came into power! They acquired a very good change of heart.

Mr. D. Crosby: I was not in the House then, I did not condemn the engineer. If there were hon. gentlemen who criticized the amount paid him, I am just as pleased as the Leader of the Opposition that they have had a change of heart.

Mr. Stewart: It was the Premier! Hon. Mr. Crosby: Well, I am pleased that he has had a change of heart.

Mr. Dewar: I voted against dismissing that man—it wasn't to reduce him at all, but to dismiss him altogether that they wanted to do. I will not accuse the hon. gentleman at "playing politics" though that abuse has been levelled at me.

There is a large expenditure on other large ferris and I am satisfied that that expenditure is not warranted. There are two government boats that will have to be rebuilt in short time, and the receipts from them will be very small—not all in proportion to the expenditure and the service they give. respect to the Hillsboro ferry my hon. friend knows that that ferry in better roads I believe that the people generally would be very much better served. Some government will have to take the bull by the horns and cut out this extra agent service. The item passed. (To be continued.)
