Alberta Seen Logical Site For Prairie Steel Industry

By WALTER KREVENCHUK
EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta is the most logical site for a basic steel industry on the Prairies because of its abundant supply of low-cost fuels and vast iron ore deposits in the northwest portion of the province.
This is the opinion of two federal government scientific officials and three members of the Alberta Research Council.
T. J. Hayes and R. B. Elver of the mineral resources division of the department of mines and technical surveys, in a paper presented to the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, said that Edmonton would be the most practical location for an integrated steel facility.
They based their selection on the concentration of oil and gas industries in Alberta and Northeastern British Columbia.

Conrad P. Gravenor, Gerald J. Govett and Tyson Riggs of the research council, in a paper presented at the same meeting, outlined a new process for obtaining high-quality iron products from low-grade ore. This could solve the problem of developing a Northwest Alberta Clear Hills district, estimated to contain in excess of 200,000,000 tons of low-grade ore. Tests on the Clear Hills ore had indicated it would be difficult to concentrate by conventional means.
Mr. Gravenor, who read the research paper, said it was reasoned that the best opportunity for an integrated iron and steel industry in Western Canada at the present time would be not dependent upon high-grade ore, nor extensive pretreatment of the ore. In the Clear Hills case, low-cost ore can be handled and the only pretreatment required is crushing, as the ore can be crushed in the hand, crushing costs would be low.
He said that a variety of fuels can be used in the acid process but it is best suited to those areas where natural gas or low-cost fuel is available in quantity. This condition exists in the Clear Hills.

Real Couette Blames Yanks For Party Loss

ROLYN Que (CP) — Real Couette, deputy leader of the Social Credit party Monday night blamed "the infamous propaganda of American big finance" for his party's losses in Quebec.
The told reporters gathered in his garage in this centre 210 miles northwest of Ottawa: "American finance won its victory by making use of Quebec Premier Jean Lesage during the campaign and in using underhanded means in newspaper advertisements."
However, Mr. Couette added that his party would support a minority Liberal government on the condition that such a government "replaced the austerity program with one of prosperity."
"Coalition, no Co-operation is all right—with anybody, as long as they come out with definite and precise legislation that will start the economy of our country," he said.
Mr. Couette denounced the Liberal party as a bunch of hypocrites and liars. They are lying to the people," he said.
He claimed he was informed that Liberal organizers offered halves of five dollar bills to voters in two Quebec regional agencies, the other half to be given following election of the Liberal candidate.
