

Give And Take Budget Expected By British

By JOSEPH MACSWEEEN
LONDON (CP)—Resid Maudling, chancellor of the exchequer, presents what is expected to be a give-and-take budget to the House of Commons today.

The next-to-last scene in the traditional ritual of bringing down a British budget was played Monday night when Maudling, 47, went to Windsor Castle to give the Queen a preview of his proposals.

In his last budget, Maudling spoke of great benefits that could be obtained by even a one-per-cent increase in savings. Some sources predict he will initiate a more attractive issue of savings certificates.

Earlier Monday Maudling briefed his senior cabinet colleagues at a meeting at 10 Downing Street presided over by Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home, who attended despite a severe cold.

The cabinet gave speedy approval to the election-year budget in which Maudling is expected to increase some indirect taxes and perhaps sweeten the deal by cutting personal income tax a mile.

Maudling's review before the cabinet was apparently concise but hardly as brief as it was when he took just 2 1/2 minutes.

Independent economists have estimated Maudling—presenting his second budget—will need to increase tax revenue by between £100,000,000 and £200,000,000 to check inflationary trends and reduce the rate of expansion to four per cent from six.

Maudling is expected to turn to indirect taxes for increased revenue, raising the levy on such things as cigarettes, liquor, gasoline and car licences, or by cutting personal income tax.

When pressed further, Count William MacNeil, who is a member of the finance committee, replied emphatically, "I never say anything like that, no one is being paid for it" (referring to the finance committee).

Count Arthur Gormley reported that the new incinerator was working well and Count Frank Zarem moved that the tender of Square "K" Construction Co. of $15,965 for the operation of the incinerator be accepted. Count Zarem said that four tenders had been received. The highest was in the vicinity of $22,000.

PARKING LOT
In his report of the police committee, Count MacNeil said, "we've got to demand from the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Foundation some concrete plans for their parking lot on Grafton St. It's about time they made their next move."

Mayor Gaudet said, "The situation is recreational, but we have a firm commitment to us and

More Trade With Canada Is Aim Of U.S. Group Head

By HAROLD MORRISON
WASHINGTON (CP)—Walter F. Carey, newly installed president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, says he believes the United States should move toward closer trade relations with Canada.

The 57-year-old Carey, who heads a big trucking business in Michigan, told interviewers Monday that he will give Canada - U.S. trade matters high priority during his tenure of office.

"I am for that type of international trade that will benefit the economies of all countries and personally favor cheaper trade with Canada," he said.

He shunned aside questions dealing with the Canadian program to increase home production of automobiles and parts through tariff rebates, saying that while he has heard rumors of U.S. complaints, he was not qualified to make a comment on the issue.

But he said he hopes to confer with the Canadian chamber president, Howard T. Mitchell, at the U.S. chamber's annual meeting here April 26-29 and plans to attend the Canadian chamber of meeting next fall.

SEALER BEGINS SECOND VOYAGE
ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The veteran sealer Algerine with 30 men aboard sailed out of port here Saturday for her second trip to the ice fields this year. Capt. Job Kean brought the ship in with 12,500 seal pelts a week ago after she ran short of fuel. She had been at the ice fields along the east coasts of Labrador and Newfoundland for nearly a month.

Another sealer, Cinderella from Carbonear, Nfld., sailed for the icefields over the weekend.

Car Overturns Driver Unhurt

O'LEARY — Frankie Smallman, Knutsford, Sunday evening injury early Sunday evening when the 1953 Ford which he was driving overturned in a cutting at Knutsford.

Mr. Smallman was meeting another car in the cutting and when he pulled over he hit a soil shoulder and was forced one side of the cutting. He lost control when he came down and the car shot across the road and up the other side of the cutting rolling over completely and coming to rest on its four wheels.

The front end of the car was flattened and the roof was pushed down to the steering wheel on the driver's side. The front windshield was smashed as were two side windows.

The Alberton Detachment of the RCMP was notified. Mr. Smallman escaped with a bad shelling up. The vehicle belonged to his father, Arnold Smallman.

FURY IS MOUNTING

Canadians, British Head Off All-Out Greek, Turkish Battle

NICOSIA (AP) — Canadian and British United Nations troops headed off an all-out battle Monday between Greek and Turkish Cypriots as Cyprus's Kremlin pass. But fury was mounting on both sides and, in Turkey, Premier Ismet Inonu said Greek-Turk relations were heading in a dark direction.

Greek-Cypriots threatened a major attack during the day as Cypriots holding positions on a hill overlooking a Greek-Cypriot recent factory in the shadow of the Kyrenia Mountains.

Amid the rabat of automatic weapons, the UN peace force troops moved in and at least effected a stalemate as night fell and shooting eased off.

At the start of the incident, seven dozen Turkish-Cypriots took positions during the night on a 300-foot-high ridge overlooking the Greek factory. At dawn, there was an exchange of shots between the Turks on the hill and the Greek troops in the town of Pano and Kalo Dikomo. The Turks also fired down upon a Greek farm a few hundred yards below.

By noon Monday the Greeks and the UN troops exchanged fire and served an ultimatum that unless the Turks were removed from the hill the Greeks would attack and drive them out.

POSITIONS SET UP
British paratroopers took up positions below the hill in the factory grounds. Two Canadian armored cars were posted at the road.

A UN truce team suggested the Turks evacuate the hill and that UN troops take over. But the Turks refused and at dusk a stalemate was called with the Greeks still threatening to attack the Turks on the hill.

In the crazy peaks above the factory and around Kyrenia Pass Turkish and Greek-Cypriots continued sporadic firing for the third day. So far the casualties in three days of fighting have totaled one Turk killed and two Greeks wounded.

The Canadians who are charged with patrolling the Kyrenia range sent two truce teams into the mountains to try to get an effective cease-fire. But automatic weapons fired down from the mountain heights on and off during most of the day.

An estimated 500 rounds were fired at the Turkish village of Temblos on the north side of the Kyrenia Mountains in the morning.

ROUTINE

that the town planning advisory committee would like to see members of the Council attend some of the committee's meetings so they would be informed of the committee's reasons for decisions.

"This city," said Count Zarem, "must set aside a large tract of land for use as an industrial or commercial area." "Parkdale and its surrounds, other industry facilities second to none."

Count J.P. Nicholson said that his idea for that area was to make it Zone No. 11 "to give the town planning committee time to come up with another idea for the area, after it saw that the plan they had presented to the council wasn't fully acceptable."

Count Allison Gillis inquired as to whether or not there was a reporter or press agent on the civic payroll and Mayor Gaudet, Count J.E. Hyndman, chairman of the finance committee, and City Controller John Butler all replied "no."

When pressed further, Count William MacNeil, who is a member of the finance committee, replied emphatically, "I never say anything like that, no one is being paid for it" (referring to the finance committee).

Count Arthur Gormley reported that the new incinerator was working well and Count Frank Zarem moved that the tender of Square "K" Construction Co. of $15,965 for the operation of the incinerator be accepted. WEAPONS FOR DEFENCE
In New York, UN Secretary-General U Thant reported UN forces on Cyprus were under orders to use weapons only in self-defence. But even then only a minimum of force is to be used.

This has called on Canada, Britain, Sweden, Ireland and Finland to furnish civilian police contingents of 40 to 50 men each to help on Cyprus. In Helsinki, the Finnish foreign ministry announced it had turned down Thant's request. But a UN spokesman here said Austria had volunteered 31 policemen. Britain and Canada also were said to have rejected the request.

Diplomatic sources at UN headquarters in New York said Thant wants UN police on the island to act as intermediaries between UN military forces and Cypriot police, either Greek or Turkish.

Headlight Case Gets Dismissed

Kenneth Alexander MacKenzie, Charlottetown, had a charge of failing to dim his headlights on an oncoming vehicle dismissed when he appeared before Judge B.H. H. QC in Queens County magistrate's court yesterday.

Joseph Alexander Pineau, North Rustico, charged with breaking and entering the Peoples Shop Store, was remanded until April 22 because of the absence of crown prosecutor, Alan Scamatis.

A man was fined $20 and costs or 30 days for possession of liquor in a place other than his residence.
