the squeezes, the endplays, and others.

Probably the easiest in this category to learn is the one known as the elimination play. This is a method of play adopted by a defender whereby he can bring about a favourable position so that when a defender is put into the lead at an appropriate time declarer is bound to gain a trick.

The way the play operates can be shown in this deal. East takes the diamond lead and returns a diamond. Declarer wins, enters dummy with a club, and leads a low trump. Assume East takes the ace and returns a club.

Declarer wins, cashes the king of spades, and learns East has another trump trick coming. Declarer is apparently down. He has lost a diamond and a spade and he has another diamond and spade to lose.

Enter the elimination play. The trump loser is inevitable, so the trick is to get around the diamond loser. This requires an end position to be arranged where East is forced to give South a ruff and a discard.

To establish this position the hearts and clubs must be eliminated from both the North and South hands. The execution is not difficult. A low heart is led to dummy and the last club is ruffed. The A-K of hearts are cashed. East may ruff the last one if he wishes but if he does he will have to return a club which will permit South to shake the diamond loser as dummy trump in the club.

This idea doesn't appeal to East, so he doesn't ruff the third round of hearts. But the wheels grind on South plays a trump and East is now forced to lead a club. The diamond loser is eliminated.

Maritime Grievances Highlight Of Campaign

By DAL WARRINGTON

HALIFAX (CP) — Maritimers can hardly be blamed for feeling a bit like poor relations when they mark their federal election ballots Monday.

For two months these points have been dinned in their ears by politicians of all parties: "People 'down east' aren't enjoying their share of the national boom."

2. Ottawa is or should be doing something about it.

Liberal, Progressive Conservative, CCF and Social Credit campaigners have done more talking on this subject than on all other issues combined.

STARTED BY REPORT

The Gordon commissioners started the fuss when they brought up the possibility of some Maritime provinces moving to prosper parts of Canada if all attempts to bolster the Atlantic economy failed. Finance Minister Harris added fuel with his budget announcement of federal power plants to provide cheaper power for Nova Scotia.

Conservative Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia and Liberal Premier St. Laurent of New Brunswick looked the gift horse in the mouth and said they'd need to know more about it before accepting.

Things have changed much since then. Although thousands of words have been said on the subject.

Works Minister Winters says Ottawa is ready to spend up to $200,000,000 on the scheme. He says the federal government will

WANT TO KNOW COST

John Diefenbaker, national Conservative leader, says the proposal isn't worth anything until the cost of the power is known. The Liberals say only engineers can determine that and it'll take time. It won't be known before the election.

Premier Flemming says the plan is "just an election promise" that will never be carried out.

Prime Minister St. Laurent says he's sure the plants can give the Maritime provinces a cheaper power supply than the area will have to do without. Aid for the coal mines was secondary.

This prompted Premier Stanfield to say Mr. St. Laurent is "in favor of leaving coal in the ground. . . A Liberal vote is a vote against the coal mine."

Mr. Winters, Nova Scotia's cabinet representative, says the proposed plants could take up to 1,000,000 tons of Nova Scotia coal a year.

NOBEL PRIZE FOR IKE?

OSLO (AP) — President Eisenhower Thursday suggested a candidate for the Nobel Peace Prize "as a reward for his persistent work for world peace."

The proposal was made by Finn Moe, Socialist chairman of the parliamentary committee for foreign affairs, at a committee meeting.

Function Of Universities Is Misunderstood By Public

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer
OTTAWA (CP) — A Montreal public relations expert told Canadian university heads today they've forgotten that their institutions are supposed to be citadels of higher education.

Small wonder, said Leonard L. Knott, past president of the Canadian Public Relations Society, that universities are not understood by the public.

He challenged his listeners at the annual meeting of the National Conference of Canadian Universities to abandon the "ivy curtain," decide where they stand and then, with help of the best public relations advice available, let the public know about it.

The universities, said Mr. Knott, have been deluded by industry and commerce into abandoning their rightful field — learning — to become the handmaidens of machines and commercial statistics. And by neglecting public relations, universities had "merely sought through publicity to win public sympathy and financial help for a situation which shouldn't even exist."

UNIVERSITIES REPLY

"Let us not confuse the training of the technical specialists with higher education. Let our universities remain the centres of truth and freedom of thought and experimentation and ideas."

The universities replied through J. Alex Edmond, assistant president of the Association of Canadian Universities.

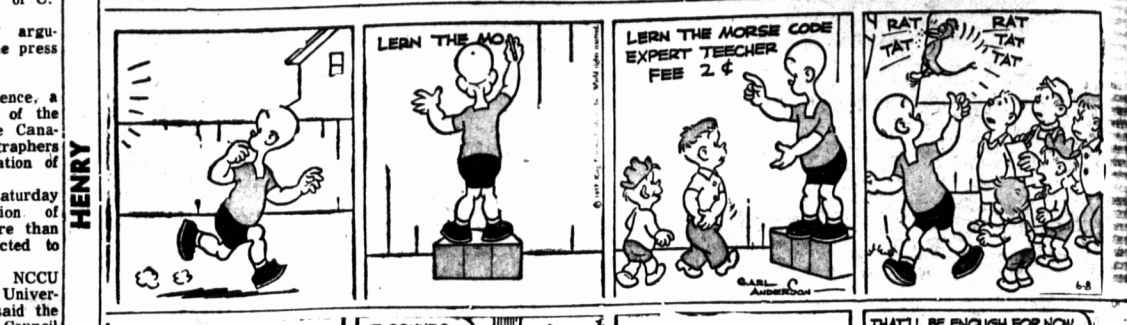

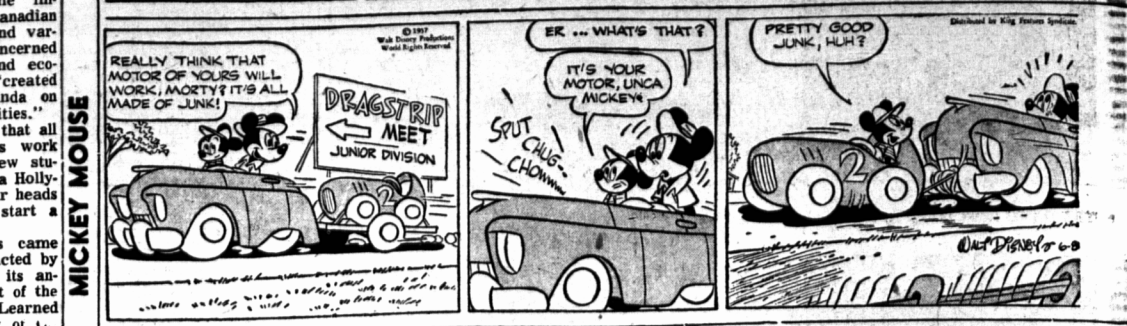

Study Tribes In The Desert

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — Jeep-loads of scientists have driven into the blazing western desert to find the answer to a mystery that has puzzled scientists for a century.

The Bindaboos live near "Lake Mackay," a vast dry salt bed. There are no streams, no lakes and no oases in this area, as far as is known. It's rainfall in the last 12 months was 1 1/2 inches.

The leader of the expedition, Dr. Donald F. Thompson, associate professor of anthropology at Melbourne University, thinks the Bindaboos live on an unknown vegetable.

The costly expedition is sponsored by Melbourne University and the Royal Geographical Society of London.

BEDTIME STORIES

The Clever Ones

There always is a way to master that which threatens a disaster. —Old Mother Nature.

Sunshine the Yellow Warbler and Mrs. Sunshine were two happy little feathered folk. As they flitted about they were like living rays of sunshine. They were building a nest in a lovely flowering bush near Farmer Brown's house. They were happy. That nest was in its way as dainty as the blossoms about it. Nowhere else could a daintier nest be found.

Came a day when the nest was completed. Two days later there were two eggs, pretty little eggs in that dainty little nest. They were as dainty as the nest itself. That morning the two little home-builders left together to get their breakfast. When they returned there were three eggs in that nest, and one was larger than the others.

"Sally Sly has been here!" cried little Mrs. Sunshine in great distress.

"Sally Sly has been here!" cried little Mrs. Sunshine in great distress. "I haven't seen her around and I'd hoped she wouldn't be around. What are we going to do?"

"I suppose we can take care of her baby with our own," said Sunshine.

"I suppose we can, but we won't,"
