NEUTRAL

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX In Grit That pale word "Neutral" sits becomingly On lips of weaklings. But the men whose brains find fuel in their blood, and men whose minds hold sympathetic converse with their hearts, Such men are never neutral. That word stands Unsexed and impotent in realms of speech. When mighty problems face a startled world, a neutral man is neutral. Right or wrong, His thoughts go forth, assertive, unafraid To stand by his convictions, and to do Their part in shaping issues to an end. Silence may guard the door of useless words At dictate of Discretion; but to stand Without opinions in a world which needs Constructive thinking is a coward's part.

Alcohol On Trial

Is it right to build churches to save men and at the same time license hotels that destroy them? Is it right to license a man to sell that which will make a man drunk and then punish the man for being drunk? Is it right to license a man to make paupers and then tax sober men to take care of them? Is it right to license hotels to teach vice and then tax people for schools to teach virtue? Is it right to derive a revenue out of a traffic which no decent man defends? Is it right to teach your boy not to drink, and then vote to license a place where he may be taught to drink? Is it right to teach your boy to restrain his passions and then vote to license a place where his worst passions will be inflamed? Is it right to take care of your own boy and vote to license a place that will ruin your neighbour's boy? Is it right to preach justice and charity and then vote to license a thing which robs widows and orphans of their bread? —Round Table.

EDUCATIONAL WORK IN WORLD WAR ONE

The idea of using spare time for educational training, while in military service in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, just grew like "Topsy" during the First Great World War. The Chaplain's Service and the Y. M. C. A., in serving the social and religious needs of the Canadian soldiers, had initiated lectures, among their many activities, as well as reading rooms with writing facilities, almost as soon as war was declared in 1914.

There were many young men in the services who had enlisted from schools, colleges and universities, who were eager to continue educational studies or attend lectures. They received help and encouragement from the chaplains and the secretaries of the Y. M. C. A. branches, that during the first years of the war are not recorded. Educational work for young men has always been a part of the Y. M. C. A. services. This naturally grew out of its three-fold motto: "Spirit, Mind and Body."

Survey By Dr. H. M. Tory

The intellectual needs of the men had been discussed by the leaders of both the Chaplain's Service and the Y. M. C. A., not only in England but in France, where the Y. M. C. A. Executive Committee not only took the first formal action, but proposed, early in 1917, that the educational possibilities be studied by a competent Canadian authority, brought overseas to investigate and advise. He also suggested the name of Dr. H. M. Tory, President of the University of Alberta. This was accepted by the Overseas Committee and the National Council of the Y. M. C. A. and an invitation was wired to Dr. Tory, who accepted and reached England by the end of July 1917.

When Major Birks was in Canada during the 1917 campaign, he made a proposal that was endorsed by the Prime Minister and the Government officials at Ottawa, that educational classes in Agriculture and other subjects might be started in Y. M. C. A. huts overseas. Dr. Tory was asked to investigate the whole opportunity for this work in the Army in both England and France. He spent six weeks studying the Y. M. C. A. educational work and its possibilities in the camps in England and throughout the Canadian Corps area in France, where he held meetings with groups of soldiers.

Dr. Tory's visit to the Canadian Corps in France was followed by increased interest in educational work, and classes were organized and lectures given throughout the

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

(Continued from page 2) quently I am in a position to be much more helpful by personal mail than I can be through a column reply. Whether or not the failure of your marriage was due to a too close relationship between you and your mother is not a consideration in the present problem. However, since you had the advice of competent persons, I assume that the step taken was the only recourse under existing circumstances. I'm sure you are sufficiently aware of the ways of the world to know that you will always have to contend with busybodies who will put their own interpretations on your actions. No one is free from this annoyance and its severity increases in proportion to the gravity of the problem involved. A broken marriage is a situation of particular interest to scandal-mongers and there's nothing you can do about them but ignore their gossip.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 16 and going to a prom in a few weeks. After these affairs everyone goes night clubbing. I wonder if you'd tell me what to order at these places. I don't drink, of course, but hate to order ginger ale or some other soft drink and be called sissy. I like the boy I'm going with and wouldn't want him to make fun of me.

ANSWER: By all means, Kay, and I can't be too emphatic about this, stick to your ginger ale. Even though some thoughtless friend may call you a sissy, your honesty in doing what you know is right will win approval. Furthermore, it is strictly against the law for many places to serve you anything but soft drinks. You are young and you're going to a prom, and only by an exhibition of good conduct can you prove your right to be out on such an important date. "To thine own self be true" is wonderful advice or you to follow; don't compromise with your principles, or do anything you think is wrong simply for the sake of an impression made on your friends.

DEAR MISS DIX: My daughter, an only child, has announced her engagement to a man whose first wife has just started divorce proceedings. I feel that he is still a married man and has no right to give my daughter a ring. Because of my disapproval of the whole matter, my daughter has left home in anger.

ANSWER: The man in question should be horsewhipped, and your daughter, by her rebellious and childish conduct, proves worthy of punishment befitting a spoiled child. She should be forcibly brought home and kept in isolation for a while. Of course this drastic treatment isn't very feasible and, if the girl is of age, not possible. She is certainly in for tragedy, but if her stubbornness continues there's little you can do to help. If the man's present conduct is brought to the attention of his first wife, she may be able to use legal weapons to cancel the engagement but, as she is probably very happy to be rid of such a wretch, there's not too much hope for help from her.

Miss Nissen cannot reply personally to readers but will answer problems of general interest through this column.

Garden Topics

(Continued from page 2) weeding will bring the situation well under control. But this means pulling the weeds out by the roots or cutting them off below the soil's surface with a cultivator or hoe. This first and thorough job is carried out after the newly seeded flowers and vegetables are nicely up, say with their second or third set leaves well started. Once that first clean-up has been carried out, a little routine cultivation will take care of the garden for the rest of the season.

Spread them Out: Still Time For a Show. four divisions. In three of the divisions the work was organized and carried on by the Y. M. C. A. and the Chaplain Services; but the Third Division, educational work was developed by a military organization, under the name of the University of Vimy Ridge, with Captain (Rev. Dr.) E. H. Oliver as its organizer and officer in charge. The Corps Commander later approved of an educational scheme for the whole corps. The classes under the Y. M. C. A. in the three divisions were gradually turned over, and the two enterprises were brought together under the name of the University of Vimy Ridge. The Y. M. C. A. loaned their secretaries, supplies and equipment, and provided the necessary funds until the whole educational effort was later consolidated with the Khaki University of Canada.

Educational activities flourished in the Canadian Corps during the winter of 1917-18, but had to be temporarily abandoned when the German offensives developed in the spring of 1918. The Director, Captain Oliver, then stated: "The University of Vimy Ridge still exists, but our books are packed and stored. As soon as the little business of fighting is over, we will carry on again."

Early Educational Work

Dr. Tory then returned to Canada to secure leave of absence from the University of Alberta, and to consult with and secure the co-operation of the universities of Canada. These formed an Advisory Board, with Sir Robert Falconer, President of Toronto University, as Chairman. The scheme received cordial approval of the Dominion Government as an undertaking of national significance.
