

PREMIER KEEPS CLOSE WATCH ON COUNT

Intently watching the P.E.I. election returns on television at his home, Premier Walter R. Shaw keeps close tabulation while his wife anxiously watches over him with an expression of dismay. The 78-year-old Mr. Shaw retained his seat in the legislature, but his Progressive Conservative party elected only 14 members to the 16 by Liberals led by Alex Campbell of Summerside. Two seats are deferred.

Surveyor I Course Is Set For Sharp Moon Landing

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Surveyor I was speeding with astonishing accuracy Monday toward its target on the moon and, despite antenna problems, was given a good chance of landing gently and returning close-up TV photos of the lunar surface.

The three-legged, 2,194-pound U.S. craft was launched at 10:41 a.m. EDT Monday from Cape Kennedy, Fla. One of its guidance antennas apparently failed to extend, cutting chances of success.

But five hours later the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which controls the flight, announced: 1. Surveyor landed on the sun and the bright star Canopus, which guide it. 2. Ever without a mid-course manoeuvre it would land 250 miles southwest of its target on a broad lunar plain.

feat with a 200-pound spacecraft, Luna IX, Feb. 3. A steering rocket was to be fired late Monday night to aim Surveyor closer to its planned landing area in the dry Sea of Sigmund, one of the targets for manned Apollo moonships later in this decade. There it is supposed to take pictures, test soil firmness and calculate the temperature.

Only trouble so far was with one of two low-power antennas over which earth commands are received by Surveyor and which it would transmit its first pictures of the lunar surface.

Radioed data indicated the antenna may not have extended properly, but Jet Propulsion Laboratory officials said they could control Surveyor with the other, similar, low-power antenna. The troublesome antenna was receiving signals even though presumably not extended, officials said, "a helpful indication."

Government Regulations Tighten Narcotics Control

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government moved to tighten control over narcotics and other drugs Monday with new regulations applying to doctors and the drug industry.

Doctors who dispense narcotics and controlled drugs will be required to make the same reports to federal drug officers as pharmacists have been making for years.

The drug industry will be brought under a new central drug index by Oct. 1, providing the first complete and continuing record of drug manufacturers and their products.

The new index results partly from 18 months of discussions with the industry.

It also is the product of a 1964 recommendation of the Commons Food and Drugs Committee which pointed out a loophole in the law.

The committee noted that a company producing a new drug must comply with existing safety and testing regulations.

But a company producing or selling a drug not classed as new "can do so without permission or even knowledge of the Food and Drug Directorate," the committee said.

FEELS CHECK ADEQUATE
The committee considered recommending licensing but finally concluded that registration through a federal index was just as effective as licensing and more in keeping with the free enterprise system.

What the committee was worried about was a loophole which made it possible for anyone to buy the raw materials for already approved drugs outside the country, import them and go into the drug-making business "without federal authorities knowing anything about it."

Drug manufacturers now must inform the federal Food and Drug Directorate by Oct. 1 of their name, address, the names under which all their drugs are sold, the use and purpose of the drug and a quantitative list of the ingredients of it.

The index thus established will be kept up to date by requiring the manufacturers to notify the directorate when a drug is withdrawn from the market or when its composition, dosage or use is changed. Notification must be made within 30 days.

Liberal Party Elects 16, PCs 14 In Close Vote

Coalition Might Be Explored

Liberal Alex Campbell was queried at Summerside late last night on what his reaction would be to a suggestion that a coalition government be formed in case of a tie after all the votes are counted from Monday's election.

A Guardian reporter talked to him only briefly at Athena Regional High School where he was in the midst of a victory celebration, attended by some 1,000 persons.

Mr. Campbell's first reaction was: "I don't think the coalition party ran in this election, did it?" Then he thought for a moment and continued: "If it would save another election it would be worthwhile exploring."

The Liberal leader was queried after it was reported Premier Shaw had hinted earlier in the night that a coalition might be the solution to a tie vote.

Asked later about the coalition possibility Premier Shaw threw cold water on the suggestion.

He said: "I'm too independent for that."

LIBERAL LEADER GETS THE NEWS

P.E.I. Liberal leader Alex Campbell, the young Summerside lawyer who Monday was successful in outpolling the island's Progressive Conservative government receives the news that his party had captured 16 of the 30 seats at stake. His wife joins him hearing the good word. At age 33, Mr. Campbell may become the youngest premier in Island and possibly Canadian history.

Peace Talks Are Rmored

NEW YORK (AP)—Newsweek magazine reports North Viet Nam has moved to start peace talks by using Romanian intermediaries.

The magazine cites unnamed Communist diplomats in Washington as the source of its information and says "U.S. officials have no independent corroboration... but regard it as probable."

Newsweek says: "The move reportedly came when Gen. Emil Bodnaras, Bucharest's deputy premier, visited Hanoi recently. He was told by Red boss Le Duang that North Viet Nam would not come to the peace table on its knees" but was interested in exploring a peaceful settlement.

"Hanoi thought the Romanians' ideal go-between. Soviet Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev heartily approved the Bodnaras talks and advised the Romanians on how to discuss the subject with Peking's Chou En-lai during his expected visit to Bucharest."

Unofficial Returns Show Cliff-Hanger

By DON MACLEOD
Farmer said, "It's certainly not over yet."

Four provincial cabinet ministers went down to defeat yesterday in the Prince Edward Island general election which saw the Liberal party, headed by 33-year-old Summerside lawyer Alex Campbell pick up 16 of the 30 contested seats.

The Progressive Conservative government, trying for an unprecedented third straight term, failed to win a majority in a cliff-hanger election.

At press time this morning, unofficial returns showed that the Liberals had won 16 seats to the 14 picked up by the Conservatives.

A by-election has been scheduled for the First District of Kings in which polling was deferred to July 11 because of the death last week of Liberal candidate W.A. Acorn.

Premier Shaw said he wanted to express his thanks to electors in First, Queens who returned him and former House Speaker Frank Myers in yesterday's voting. "No matter what the final outcome is," he said, "we shall continue to give the best service we can to our district and in addition promote those policies which we feel are in the best interests of the province."

An cabinet meeting, according to the premier, is likely to be held today to assess the future course of the Conservative party which apparently has been pushed out of the mainstream of Island politics by yesterday's vote.

Light to moderate turnouts were reported in urban polls through the morning and early afternoon. Sunny skies and temperatures in the high 60s may have cut into the rural vote as farmers took advantage of fine weather to work in the fields.

The election was a straight two-party fight between the government of Premier Shaw, 78, and the Liberal opposition, under freshman leader Alex B. Campbell.

About 54,450 voters were eligible. Polls opened at 9 a.m. and closed at 6 p.m. ADT.

The island is divided into 16 two-member ridings. Each riding elects a councillor and an assemblyman, making a total of 32 seats in the legislature. However, only 30 seats were at stake Monday because of the death last Wednesday of a Liberal candidate in Kings 1st. The two seats in that riding will be decided in a by-election July 11.

The Conservatives held 17 seats in the last 30-member legislature. The Liberals held 13. Redistribution this year added two new seats in the Charlotte town area.

MARKS TWO FIRSTS
The election made P.E.I. history in at least two ways—it was the first time official voters' lists were used and the first time all eligible voters were entitled to vote for both assemblymen and councillors.

GAIN THREE SEATS

The Liberals made a net gain of three seats from the Conservatives who held 17 at dissolution of the last Legislature. The Liberals held 13 in the last House.

If Mr. Campbell forms the government after July 11, he will become the youngest premier in Canadian history. The distinction is now held by Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick, who became premier at the age of 33.

Premier Walter R. Shaw, Canada's oldest premier, said last night he was "disappointed" over the defeat of the four cabinet ministers Philip Matheson, Agriculture Minister Andrew MacRae, Industry and Natural Resources Minister Lloyd MacPhail and Dr. Hubert MacNeill, minister of welfare.

Premier Shaw said "there are no better men in this province than those four. I would have been less disappointed if I had lost myself."

PREMIER SURPRISED

Premier Shaw who listened to the election returns at Stratton, his home in St. Catharines, said he was "surprised" at the defeat of his cabinet ministers. "Those men," he said, "were in departments which involved tremendous development in the province. Our agriculture department was one of the finest departments in Canada from the point of administration. Dr. MacNeill and Mr. Matheson were men who were conducting tremendous developments in their departments. The people, however, have spoken and I am not criticizing them. Still, I feel that a serious mistake has been made."

Mr. Campbell, 32-year-old son of a former Liberal premier, said he is pleased by the strong party showing—a net gain of three seats from the Tories—but he said the election was "definitely in doubt."

Parliament At A Glance

MONDAY, May 30, 1966
The government approved lighter control over drugs, requiring doctors who handle controlled drugs to make detailed reports of their dispensary sales.

The drug industry also will be brought under a central index, providing a complete record of manufacturers and their products.

The Commons continued debate on the government reorganization bill defeating 66 to 42 a New Democrat amendment that would have left the RCMP under the justice department instead of the proposed new solicitor-general's department.

The NDP then moved another amendment to rename the proposed registrar-general's department the department of consumer affairs.

That was voted down 28 to 8 and another Ndp amendment that would have handed the registrar-general power to review prices as ruled out of order.

TUESDAY, May 31
The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to continue debate on the reorganization bill. The senate meets at 8 p.m.

Island Results Stir Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal and Conservative MPs alike were talking about a Liberal upset victory in the Prince Edward Island provincial election Monday night, even though the official result remained in doubt.

The 30 seats at stake Monday split 16-14 for the Liberals. Two seats remain to be decided in a deferred vote July 11 but both were held by Liberals in the last provincial legislature.

Liberals gathered around a radio in the lobby beside the Commons chamber let out whoops when the final result was reported.

But later some of them said they were a little surprised at what they termed an obvious upset of the Conservative government. Premier Walter Shaw's government won 19 seats last time.

"Nobody's quite sure what happened," remarked Russell MacEwan, Conservative member for Picou, N.S.

U.S. President Deplores Suicides

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP)—President Johnson says political suicides in South Viet Nam "only obscure the progress being made (there) toward a constitutional government."

Johnson, speaking at Arlington National Cemetery Monday, described as tragic the present turmoil in which several Buddhists have committed suicide in protest against U.S. support of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's military government.

"This unnecessary loss of life only obscures the progress being made toward a constitutional government," he said. "It only clouds the sacrifice of thousands of lives already made for the cause of independence and political hope in South Viet Nam."

He said, however, that he believes South Viet Nam is moving toward a government that will increasingly reflect the true will of its people.

"That will come if the South Vietnamese keep their internal quarrels and differences within bounds and concentrate on taking together their first steps toward a constitutional government."

Four Bottling Firms Charged

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Four major bottling companies here were charged Monday with conducting illegal lotteries through soft drink bottle top contests.

Charged were London Bottling Co. Ltd., dealers for Pepsi Cola; Coca-Cola Ltd.; Vernor's Bottling Co. London Ltd., dealers of Nesbitt's soft drinks, and National Dry Ltd., dealers for Royal Crown Cola.

Police charge that the contests, which offer prizes ranging from luxury trips, cars, and motorbikes to cash prizes, and free bottles of soft drinks, violate the Criminal Code.

The companies are to appear before Magistrate Donald B. Menzies June 29.

Among those winning gold medals was C. M. Jephcott of Toronto with "early issues of British North America."
