A Country Garden

self sent one expedition to India and another ill-fated one to western America to collect special varieties for the Duke who never tired of exotic plants.

Then there was the fabulous system of decorative waterworks with cascades and fountains and reflecting pools, climaxed by the Great Fountain with its 267-foot jet of water, designed to dwarf the greatest fountains in Europe.

Meanwhile, Paxton was busy in other spheres. There are those lovely volumes of Paxton's Magazine of Botany, with fine, colorful illustrations of rare plants as well as articles very reminiscent of the titles in the Gardener's Chronicle, which Paxton founded in 1841 and which is still so widely read by gardeners today.

Then there was his brief excursion into Fleet Street, when he founded the Daily News with the curious but short-lived distinction of Charles Dickens as editor. Paxton was on the committee for the transfer of the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew to be under the Commissioner of Woods and Forests in 1840.

The giant water-lily, Victoria Regia, so familiar to all who have visited Botany, did not always thrive as well, as now with its profusion of flowers and leaves. It was the ingenuity of Paxton at Chatsworth that coaxed this temperamental giant into repeating the staggering performance so far seen only in the rivers of New Guinea.

So fast did this lily grow that twice it outgrew its tank and Paxton was forced to arrange new quarters for it. At last he built a wonderful lily-house of steel and glass (delicate in design yet strong and practical) with superb facilities for drainage and ventilation. The inspiration for this design came to Paxton, strangely enough, from an examination of the ribbing of one of the leaves which had proved strong enough to bear the weight of his seven-year-old daughter. "Nature was the engineer," said Paxton. "Nature provided the leaf with longitudinal and transverse girders and supports that I, borrowing from it, have adopted in this building."

It was not so very long after this that Paxton was urged to compete for the design of the building for the 1861 Exhibition. In nine short days he conceived and worked out his plan. Thus was conceived the vast structure, the vast structure of steel and glass, 1861 feet long, covering eighteen acres, with a high central transept to preserve a few elms that had become so important in all the preliminary wrangling prior to the submission of Paxton's design.

Queen Victoria opened the Exhibition and it was a success financially and popularly. Sir Joseph Paxton, gardener and honored friend of the Sixth Duke of Devonshire started life in obscurity as a simple garden boy, but with that greatest of gifts—a love and understanding of nature, which he used very good advantage.

FUNERAL AT MURRAY HARBOR — The funeral of the late Peter Brehaut, Guernsey Cove, passed away April 23, was held yesterday from the Murray Harbor United Church with Rev. Wallace D. MacPherson officiating. Hymns sung were "Abide With Me" and "The Lord's My Shepherd". The pall bearers were James Brehaut, Harold Beck, Percy Harris, Windsor Beck, Earl Nicolle, Lloyd Hawkins. Interment was in the Murray Harbor cemetery. The late Mr. Brehaut, a well known farmer of that area, lived a quiet and full life, marred only by the death of his beloved wife, nee Elizabeth Ferguson, who predeceased him several years ago. He was a life long and faithful and active member of the United Church of Murray Harbor. Surviving him are four sons: Roy, Winnipeg; Cecil, Quebec; Lebert, Welland, Ontario; and Leonard at home.

Arctic Clergyman Expresses Views

WINNIPEG (CP) — An Arctic clergyman said Monday some Canadian islands in the Arctic, now occupied by U. S. weather-station personnel, may eventually become American because no Canadian has ever lived there.

Rt. Rev. D. B. Marsh of Toronto, Anglican Bishop of the Arctic, said in an interview that after some years the Americans might simply announce that some island is no longer a Canadian possession since no Canadian had ever occupied it.

Bishop Marsh said that of 12 clergymen in his 2,750,000-square-mile diocese only three are Canadians. The remainder are from the British West Indies and the British Isles.

He said the pioneer work of his church in the Arctic is in danger of being lost. The central Arctic has been without an Anglican missionary since the departure of the late Canon John Turner in the historic air rescue in 1947. Canon Turner, wounded accidentally by a rifle bullet, was flown 1,700 miles from Baffin Island to Winnipeg but later died in hospital.

Special committee counsel Ray Jenkins demanded to know why the secretary went "traipsing off" after McCarthy in this manner "if you were not afraid of him?" Stevens said it was solely to continue his co-operation with committees of Congress.

Stevens agreed under questioning he proposed to McCarthy last November that the Ft. Monmouth hearings be "suspended" and the investigation turned over to the army. Stevens said he did this because he felt McCarthy's investigating, while it "speeded up" the suspention of some employees on security grounds, did considerable harm. He said it whipped up an "exaggerated" public opinion that there still were spies at the New Jersey radar laboratories.

Stevens accused sub-committee counsel Roy Cohn of persistent "perversion of the rules" to wangle favors for Schine. And he said he became convinced Cohn was doing so "with the knowledge and consent of Senator McCarthy."

The army secretary told of flying to New York to smooth out a difference with McCarthy over a press conference in which Stevens had said he had no knowledge of the current espionage at Ft. Monmouth.

Crime Conviction Figures Released

OTTAWA (CP)—Convictions for indictable offences appear to have levelled off in 1952 while summary convictions soared to an all-time high, the bureau of statistics reported Monday.

Persons convicted of indictable offences—those crimes which usually are tried in superior courts—numbered 41,591. This was only a three-per-cent rise over the 40,289 the previous year which was the lowest since 1942.

The 1952 figure was substantially below the 42,624 convictions for indictable offences in 1950 and slightly under the 41,632 in 1948 and the 41,661 in 1949. Summary convictions—those resulting from trials before magistrates—jumped to 1,565,707 in 1952 compared with 1,308,466 the previous year and 1,183,991 in 1950.

May her soul rest in peace.

Card Of Thanks

The family of the late Mrs. Mary MacPhee wish to thank all kind friends and neighbors who sent Mass cards, Spiritual bouquets, letters and messages of sympathy. We wish to thank in a special manner Rev. Monsignor Murphy and his assistant Fr. Edwin Steel for their many acts of kindness during the illness and death of our beloved sister. Our appreciation is also tendered to the Matron, Mrs. Mooney, Souris Hospital, and her efficient staff of nurses, and all the kind people of Souris, who helped in every way, their kindness and thoughtfulness at such a time, helped to ease the sorrow and loss of a loved one.
