HALIFAX (CP) — The weather office says the Maritimes were still beset by a strong circulation of unseasonably cool air Tuesday. Under cloudy skies maximum temperatures were confined to the 40s. Records for Oct. 5 were set at Greenwood, N.S., Truro and Summerside, P.E.I.

The storm producing these conditions will move only slowly away to the northeast while weakening. As a result cloudy skies with snowflurries and showers will continue today. However, some clearing will occur late in the day over most of the district. Temperatures will still be extremely cool.

Regional forecasts: Northern Nova Scotia, Eastern Shore, Prince Edward Island: Cloudy with a few snowflurries or showers ending this afternoon, skies clearing this evening. Continuing extremely cool. Westerly winds 20 gusting to 40, diminishing this evening to northwest 15. Low-high at New Glasgow and Goshen 33 and 45, Charlottetown 33 and 42. Outlook for Thursday: Variable cloudiness. Not quite so cool.

High tide today at Charlottetown 7.35 a.m. and 9.45 p.m. At Rustico at 2.38 a.m. Summerside eighteen minutes later than Charlottetown. Sun rises today at 7.14 a.m. and sets at 6.48 p.m. All times ADT.

attention should be paid to claims that Dosco's steel operations would provide little competition because of inefficiency. PROPOSE INQUIRY He proposed the Nova Scotia government establish a "public inquiry similar to a royal commission" to study the impact of the Becancour mill on the provincial steel industry.

A. R. Harrington, president and general manager of Nova Scotia Light and Power Co. Ltd., told the same meeting that government help provided to economic development through deficit financing "has a very spurious value. While this sort of help brings immediate aid to a particular region or industry, it also undermines the foundation of the entire economy."

Mr. Harrington said governments could help economic development through proper monetary, tariff and taxation policy and careful application of direct financial assistance to ease disparity in provincial fields.

"There is a role for government as a stimulator to help industry locate so as to build a strong nation, but we should be aware of becoming soft and seeking help when we can do the job better ourselves from our own efforts."

SALARY FOR

(Continued from page one) year. Mr. Smallwood said he could foresee the day when Memorial would have 10,000 students with 500 faculty members.

"This university will be the real pride of all Canada and all North America and the reason is it is the only university in the Western hemisphere with free tuition and salaries for students to boot."

Mr. Smallwood had called the special gathering of the students in the Memorial gymnasium especially to make his announcement.

Rex Murphy, president of the Memorial Council of Students, said he "applauds" the premier's announcement. "We approve of it and rejoice in it."

We feel it is in total accord with the universal accessibility policies of the Canadian Union of Students."

STUDY JOBLESS

Earlier, delegates studied ways of dealing with high unemployment rates in the Atlantic region.

Spokesmen for Halifax, Fredericton and Saint John, N.B., said their areas should be included in assistance from the federal government's designated area industrial incentive program.

The cities were excluded from the program, approved by Parliament earlier this year, but the spokesmen said aid to major industrial areas would help the whole region.

No MPs In Nation Now Ottawa Official States

OTTAWA BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN — Election stories which refer to "the sitting member" or to "the incumbent" are incorrect, parliamentary officials explain. From the date Prime Minister Pearson dissolved parliament and called the Nov. 8 election, Canada ceased to have any MPs. It is impossible to be a member of a body that doesn't exist, officials point out. Correct designation of people who were MPs is "member of the last parliament" or "John Smith, member for ABC riding in the last house." While members of the last house are now ordinary citizens, most of them busy engaged in campaigning for re-election, they do retain certain rights and privileges. The most important is their pay which is continued until Nov. 7. They receive $1,000 a month, making up the basic $12,000 a year indemnity, plus another $6,000 in tax free expenses paid on a quarterly basis. In the 1940's when MPs received only $4,000 a year, their pay was pro-rated on a daily basis during a normal session and it frequently stopped before the session ended. There have been cases where MPs sat for as long as three months without receiving any remuneration because the $4,000 limit had been reached.

EASIER TO BUDGET

When the indemnity was doubled to $8,000 it was decided to pay it in 12 installments so MPs could more easily budget themselves and live within their income.

The 265 members elected Nov. 8 will start receiving their indemnity as of that date. Their election must first be confirmed in a special edition of The Canada Gazette about two weeks after election day. As soon as they are gazetted, they are put on the payroll retroactive to Nov. 8.

They also retain their railway and airline passes and can continue to use their parliamentary offices. Their private secretaries were kept on until Sept. 30 but will not be re-hired until the new parliament meets. Former Conservative cabinet ministers are permitted to retain their secretaries through the campaign period.

The one privilege the former MPs do lose is their mailing frank. This was cancelled 10 days after Prime Minister Pearson's proclamation dissolving Parliament and calling the election.
