See Newsprint In Tight Supply Three More Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokesman for publishers of more than 800 daily newspapers told a congressional committee Monday the supply of newsprint is likely to remain tight until supply and demand balance in 1960. "There is a fair chance," said Cranston Williams, general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association (ANPA), that "the Canadian and U.S. newsprint industry will be forced to operate again, for the 10th year in succession, above rated capacity. "Possibly, as in other years, a statistical figure can be conjured up showing some small tonnage of newsprint which could have been shipped but wasn't. I doubt, however, that any mill in North America will suffer greatly from lack of demand this year. "Williams testified before the House of Representatives inter-state committee, which is conducting a continuing study of the newsprint situation. "Both in 1955 and 1956, Williams said, there were shortages of newsprint. Publishers' and other users' stocks were "badly, if not dangerously, depleted in 1955," he said, and required 235,000 tons to be built up to "a fair safe level." NO CARRYOVER STOCKS There were no carryover surplus stocks last year to be added to 1957 available supplies, he said. Williams said increases in advertising linage and in newspaper circulation created a greater demand for newsprint in 1955 and 1956. He said publishers' estimates of 1957 newsprint requirements are 7,286,000 tons, while total North American requirements are estimated at 7,871,000 tons — 271,000 tons more than 1956 consumption. Supplies expected during the year include 6,756,000 tons from Canada and 1,921,000 tons from the United States, leaving 806,000 tons for overseas export. Williams said he would "not be surprised" to see an overseas demand for 1,000,000 tons. By 1960, Williams said, estimates are that from 975,000 to 1,395,000 tons of new capacity will be added to North American production, while an ANPA study indicates total demand by that time of 9,500,000 tons. ASKS WIDTH REDUCTION He suggested Congress consider reducing from 15 inches to 14 inches the width of a newsprint roll that may be imported into the United States without payment of import duties. The present 15-inch limitation, he said, handicaps publishers who have reduced paper sizes to less than 15 inches in an effort to conserve newsprint. Howard Murphy of Baltimore, representing the National Newspaper Publishers Association, an organization of Negro weeklies, urged that Congress consider subsidizing small weeklies. Continuing increases in publication costs due largely to increases in newsprint prices, Murphy said, have posted extreme financial difficulties in the vicinities and "are a vital part of our way of life here in America." Since Congress cannot regulate prices of Canadian newsprint, Murphy said, it should consider providing relief in some form of subsidy with no censorship string attached.

Church Union Move Dropped

TORONTO (CP)—A motion suggesting that the United Church of Canada approach the Presbyterian Church in Canada to discuss union was withdrawn Monday after it came under heavy fire by older ministers at the Toronto conference of the United Church.

Rev. D. E. C. MacLean, who made the motion, subsequently withdrew it. He said "there is very little in our church not in common with the continuing Presbyterians."

He said every effort should be made to complete the 1925 union of Presbyterians and Methodists. Although the conference talked down Mr. MacLean's proposal it did vote to continue to work towards union with the Anglican Church of Canada.

Dr. A. A. Scott, former moderator of the conference, said: "It's not that we are opposed (to union with the Presbyterians) but we didn't feel it was on the horizon at present."

Program Of Can. Hospital Accreditation Is Approved

SASKATOON (CP)—Support for the establishment of an all-Canadian program of hospital accreditation was approved Monday night by the 14th biennial meeting of the Canadian Hospital Association following more than two hours of spirited discussion.

Rev. John G. Fullerton of Toronto, who presided over the session, called the decision "a historical occasion in the history of Canadian hospitals."

Hospitals receive accreditation, if, after being surveyed by qualified inspectors, they are found to be maintaining an accepted standard of operation and patient care. In the delegation-by-delegation vote, the Manitoba and Alberta Associated Hospitals and Catholic Hospital Conferences were the only ones to oppose the motion. The motion calls for the establishment of a Canadian commission for accreditation on Jan. 1, 1959.

SET TARGET DATE This is the same date on which the national hospital insurance plan is scheduled to come into force whereby the federal government and participating provinces would share the cost of hospital care.

Canadian hospitals now may receive accreditation only through a joint United States-Canadian commission on accreditation. The difficulty, in the opinion of many members of the CHA, is that Canada had only one seat on the joint commission. That is held by the Canadian Medical Association.
