sure who has never known anything but financial dependence, but he is impossible for the woman who has had her own pocket-book and spent her own money as she pleased. Especially if she happens to be open-handed herself.

A tight hand goes with a tight heart and tight sympathies, and these have no place in marriage. The very first requisite of a good husband is generosity. A wife wants to feel that her husband gives to her freely and that his only regret is that he hasn't more to give, that he would like to hand her the world on a silver salver if he could.

Better pass up your tightwad. He is a poor bet.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a young married man. Have a pretty wife and love her dearly. Nice baby, comfortable home, everything all right, except that I also have a mother-in-law who persists in living with us, although she has a living husband and four sons, all married. She spends her time finding fault with me and pointing out my weaknesses to my wife. She ruins my home and makes life miserable. What shall I do?

DISAPPOINTED NED ANSWER: Ask her to leave. It is no part of your obligation as a husband to live with your mother-in-law, and you are foolish to do so.

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to readers, but will answer problems of general interest through her column.

Religion And Life

By Very Rev. George C. Pidgeon, D.D., L.L.D. First Moderator of the United Church of Canada (Copyright)

The newspapers have just carried a story of an avalanche sweeping over a road in the far west and carrying a snowplow and its driver into the turbulent waters of the Fraser River. There is no more impressive sight conceivable than the mountains of the far west in their snow-clad grandeur. But those masses of snow hang on a thread; anything may start them. When they start, everything in their way is borne downward with them, adding to their volume and momentum—trees, boulders and soil until the rock is swept bare to its base.

The following story came out of the far north in the long ago. Two men were travelling along a mountainside when such an avalanche started. Nothing could have saved them, except a miracle greater than anything recorded in Holy Writ, if it had not been that a section of the bed-rock of the mountain jutted out precipitously above them. On this the avalanche split and while the solid torrent thundered by irresistibly on either side, in the shelter of the rock they were safe.

Now it is a plain statement of fact that this is precisely what Christ has done for men. The world's evil came to a head in what was done to the Son of God. No one but a divine being could have withstood it; the One who brought the world into existence met the onset of the destructive factor in that world and was unmoved by it. The Sinless One met the full force of sin without sinning; not by a hair's breadth did He swerve from the course of righteousness and love which expressed the love in the Father's heart for the sinful sons of men. Everyone who casts in his lot with Christ by a living faith shares in the benefits of that victory. Paul's statement has been confirmed by the experience of millions down the ages: "The Word of the Cross is to them that perish foolishness, but to us who are being saved, it is the power of God" (1 Corinthians 1:18). Such hymns as "Rock of Ages" owe their appeal to the fact that they express a universal human experience—the sinner who believes is saved.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

WINIFRED E. WILSON

UNUSUAL MIGRATIONS

All migrations seem wonderful to us, considering that birds are gone from home for several months yet manage to find their way back to the identical beam, bush, or tree where the eggs were hatched the previous summer. But some migrations are quite odd, while others are positively mysterious. A few species of water birds surprise us in their ability to walk. Wood Ducks, which act differently from other Ducks by nesting in trees as much as a mile or more from water, frequently cover the distance between these two points on foot instead of flying. Sora Rails run almost better than they swim, and sometimes amuse us by seeming to run through the air. Actual migration by walking is, however, most unusual. And so we find it very strange that Ptarmigans of the far north, which often make long, seasonal migrations, are accustomed to do nearly all their travelling on foot.

How young Golden Plovers ever manage to join the older birds at their winter quarters has long been a subject of discussion for bird lovers. This species nests in the Arctic and migrates to the pampas of Argentina. The adults leave the north before the children are able to travel, go south via Labrador, and down over the Atlantic Ocean from Nova Scotia to Guiana. The young Plovers start from the breeding grounds weeks later, fly over the interior of North America, across the Gulf of Mexico, through Central America, and obliquely through South America to join their parents. By this flyway the adults had made the trip north before the babies were born.

Settled Vast Issues

We noted in our last study that Jesus went up to Jerusalem to bring to a head the issues between Him and the religious leaders of His time. The point now to be kept in mind is that by contending against those who were setting issues of ultimate importance—universal and eternal in their significance. The greed of the High Priest's family had turned the court of the temple into an Oriental mart with all its exactions and contentions; He cleansed the temple. Greed for gain, the self-interest and self-aggrandisement which drives men to their mad search for wealth by exploiting their fellows has always been a curse of humanity. In every age the many have robbed of their rights in the interests of the few.

New Testament students have often failed to catch the significance of Jesus' head-on-collision with the Zealots; that fanatical sect which was agitating for war to the knife against Rome. What we call the "Sermon on the Mount" was really a series of teachings given all through Galilee pleading for love to the limit in all the dealings of man with man, and doing it in the teeth of the Zealots' campaign of hate and violence. They charged Jesus before Pilate with being an enemy of Caesar. They crucified Him precisely because He was not an enemy of Caesar. Look down the pages of history and see what nationalism, race hatreds and tribal strife have done and are doing to embitter human relationships and provoke wars and there behold the significance of Jesus' action. By His triumphal entry into Jerusalem riding on an ass, an action symbolizing peace. He offered Himself to His nation as King of Peace and they chose Barabbas the champion of violence, in preference to the King of Love.

As against the Pharisees Jesus stood for mercy instead of sacrifice, for turning sinners against their sins by love instead of destroying them in their sin by harsh judgement, and those Pharisees in their loyalty to their law joined in the hue and cry of His execution. The severity of good men against their weaker brethren has condemned multitudes to lives of hopeless transgression.

Love As Law Of Life

Over against these evils Christ stood for love as the essence of divinity and the only law of life. He maintained that love against the worst that the world could do to Him. Accepting Christ as Lord means putting yourself on His side in the human conflict. No one can enter His Kingdom without submitting to His law of life. The wickedness that slew Him represents very real evils now in action in our world; Canada can be Christian only through genuine foling Europe, they fly down the west coast of Africa. Here there is a fork: while some Terns go down to the very tip of South Africa and then continue to their holiday resort in Antarctica, others recross the Atlantic, fly down the eastern coast of South America, and on to Antarctica. This course is absolutely unique. Birds that nest only a few degrees from the North Pole and migrate to the most southerly point of the Terns' winter resort must travel at least 25,000 miles each year. No wonder we are intrigued. Has Canada many Ducks?
