The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass

Opening lead—jack of hearts.

It is not generally recognized that when partnership bidding goes one diamond, two clubs, the only signoff bid available to the opening bidder is two diamonds. Any other call represents values above a minimum hand.

South's rebid of two spades, known as a reverse bid, identified a hand containing at least 17 points, and at the same time announced greater length in diamonds than in spades. North's jump to four spades was therefore normal procedure.

The jack of hearts held the opening lead and the next two hearts went to East. The outcome of the hand rested at this point with East. A routine diamond return would have permitted South to make the balance of the tricks with the aid of a trump finesse.

East, however, saw no future in a diamond lead. Declarer was bound to have the ace of diamonds among his assets, as well as the A-K of spades, if his bids were to be given credence. South's two spade bid was significant. The message it sent to North that South had a good hand was equally available to East.

To return a diamond, therefore, would be only marking time against a subsequent point in the play where East's queen of spades would be gobbled up via finesse.

East saw one legitimate hope to defeat the contract. West might have the nine of spades. If he didn't, the hand was lost anyway. So East led the thirteenth heart.

Declarer was done in. He could do nothing to prevent East from making a trump trick. South discarded a diamond, and West cooperated with East's plan by trumping the heart with the nine, dummy overruffing with the ten. The Q-8-7 of spades, straddling dummy's jack, guaranteed the setting trick.

It was a fine bit of work by East. The futility of the diamond return was apparent. East didn't relish the role of a sitting duck waiting to be picked off. There was not really anything to lose by leading the last heart. There was a chance the heart lead would be successful. He couldn't have been more right.

BEDTIME STORIES

Eat Or Sleep

In food for all is world peace bound:
No substitute has yet been found.
— Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit, Jimmy Skunk and Bobby Coon had met one evening at the dge of the Green Forest. It was just by chance they had met there. All there were out looking for something to eat, although two of them were so fat they really didn't need much. Peter Rabbit wasn't fat. Peter never is fat. He probably never will be fat. He runs about too much to get fat. Of course this is as Old Mother Nature meant it to be.

"Perhaps if you got fat you could sleep as we do," said Bobby Coon to Peter.

"I don't want to sleep as you fellows do," replied Peter. "So, I don't want to get fat. If I got fat, I couldn't run and dodge as I can now. Then Reddy Fox or Hooty the Owl might catch me. I don't see any sense in getting fat."

Now what Peter said was true. Because he could find food all winter, he didn't need to get fat now. Bobby Coon did need to. So did Jimmy Skunk. In this matter, they were like Johnny Chuck. Johnny goes to bed for the winter so fat that he looks as if he might burst his coat. As you know, he sleeps all winter. If he didn't, he would starve to death. In winter, there just isn't any food for Johnny Chuck. So Old Mother Nature puts him into a deep sleep. Then he doesn't need food and the fat under his coat helps to keep him warm.

"I don't want to sleep as you fellows do," replied Peter.

It is the same way in part with Jimmy Skunk and Bobby Coon. They do not have to get as fat as Johnny Chuck does because if they should have to go looking for food in winter there might be some they could get. So it is that they do not go to bed as early as Johnny Chuck does and they do sometimes wake up in the winter and go out and hunt around for a little while. Their need for sleep in order to live through the winter is not as great as Johnny Chuck's. As for Peter Rabbit, unless the winter is very, very, bad, he can always get something to eat. He can always get bark from bushes and young trees, even when the snow is deep.

"When will you go to bed for the winter?" asked Peter.

"When there isn't food enough to keep me fat," replied Bobby Coon.

Jimmy Skunk bobbed his head. "That's right," said he. "If there was plenty of food all the time, I wouldn't go to sleep the way I do now. I would only go to sleep when I felt sleepy, just as I do in summer. I'm glad I can sleep when I can't eat."

"I'd rather eat," said Peter.

"You would," said Bobby Coon. "But I would rather sleep. I would rather be curled up fast asleep with some of the rest of my family to keep me warm, and so not know anything about Jack Frost and Rough Brother North Wind and snow and ice."

"That's it," said Jimmy Skunk.

"I wouldn't like that," said Peter.

"What wouldn't you like?" asked Jimmy Skunk.

"I wouldn't like sleeping with a lot of others. I'd want to be alone," said Peter.

"But you don't sleep the way we do. We keep each other warm," explained Bobby Coon.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
