MARY HAWORTH

Friend's Father's Actions Disgust Sub-Teen's Mother

Dear Mary Haworth: We can't talk to the wife, who seldom seems sober. Perhaps she has always cautioned our children against accepting rides, trifles, etc., from strangers. But what to do when the menace is or was a trusted family friend?

Our daughter, 12, I'll call her Gee, is in the first year of junior high. She has been staying overnight occasionally with one of her closest friends, Kay, until a year ago.

Kay, 11, lives in the next block in our "good address" suburban neighborhood. Her father went out of his way to do favors, large and small, for all his children's friends, he has sons and daughters, as do we. We considered him the perfect parent. The mother drinks.

The gist of the sordid matter is that a year ago, Gee came to me, shut my bedroom door and confided her reasons for refusing to stay overnight at Kay's anymore.

I tried not to let my face mirror the shock and revision I felt, and the sense of betrayal by a "trusted friend," namely, Kay's father. In the guise of routine lights-out visits to the children's rooms at bedtime, I theoretically to quiet the m down, he had been quietly misbehaving himself with Gee.

I assured Gee that he wasn't himself, perhaps had been drinking, etc. (she said he usually smelled of beer). At the first opportunity, I spoke to my husband, who couldn't, wouldn't, believe it. As it happens, another couple close friends and close-mouthed: he is a doctor, she a nurse—did believe.

Since then Gee still plays with Kay; here, during the daylight hours. We love the child and don't want to hurt her. But recently Kay is saying that if Gee can't ever visit her overnight, then Kay can't stay overnight here, or play with Gee any more because her daddy says so.

My husband, still disbelieving, isn't going to discuss it with Kay's father and, obviously I

Evidently it is more important, to your husband's way of thinking, to send in well socialized Kay's father, mindful of his man-animalism, to be in the power structure that empowers him today, to try, individually, to do something corrective about the menace to girl-children implicit in the fellow "obscurely" balance sex behavior behind the scenes, as reported and experienced by Gee.

As matters stand, a year having elapsed since Gee's version of events was confided to you, it is now too late on the basis of past history to carry the issue forthrightly to Kay's parents.

The only remedial thing you can do is continue faithfully to reinforce Gee's sound resolution to never again stay overnight at Kay's house.

If that decision of Gee's, sustained by you, means that her friendship with Kay is to be broken off at Kay's father's insistence, I would consider it a great worthwhile sacrifice, in essential commendable defense of your daughter's well being.

Moreover, if you stand your ground in this respect, with serene integrity and eloquent silence (no faked excuses) as to your reasons, it may do as much to impel the man to reform as outspoken acquiescence would.

SAFETY AWARD PRESENTED

Three Canadian women's groups received Carol Lane Safety Awards at the 11th Annual Convention of the Canadian Highway Safety Council in Winnipeg, May 4th. These organizations were honored for their outstanding contribution to safety in their communities. Mrs. A. Craswell representing Hunter River Women's Institute accepts the first award of a bronze statuette and $250.00 from Miss Carol Lane, Women's Travel Director for Shell Canada Limited, sponsors of the Awards. Administration of the program is handled by the Canadian Highway Safety Council and the National Safety League.

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Children Lifted Heaps To A Little Wheelbarrow

The cooks at Alderlea tidied the yards today; raking up into heaps the serene remaining leaves of Autumn's fall, and the twigs blown from the trees in the high winds of the months since.

"Wouldn't it perhaps be better not to have trees at all about?" Alex queried.

What no lawn - trees? No paper-white birches, nor golden willows to be attractive in every season and especially so through the bareness of winter? No laurel willow, nor hinden to spread their rich fragrance? No oak nor maple to reflect their beauty in the eye of the beholder, nor poplar with its bewitching stirrings in the summer's leaves? No trees for a rope - swing for generations of the name to enjoy or to be a nesting place for the robins? No leaf to catch the light-kiss of the summer winds and the gentle damp of a healing rain?

"It wouldn't be home without trees, now would it?" we queried.

"No, of course not," he said. We cooks commenced the tidying. And the children came to join us, to assist in lifting the heaps to the little wheelbarrow, and to laugh and chatter over the charm of the work. James too came from the barns toward evening to share in this annual "reeding up" which comes with the springtime of the year.

To the delight of the children and with James' permission, we made of the rakings a bonfire on the red road of the lane, watching out for its hazards. Seldom do Alex and Peter have a chance to enjoy a fire in the open only the odd time when we picnic at a summer - shore.

"Don't dance around it, Alex! Peter begged once. "And don't chant!" it sounds sad.

"But that's the way the Indians do on TV, remember? They dance around their ceremonial fire and chant."

"Then" Peter proposed, "let's not be Indians! Let's just sit here and watch the fire burn... I like the scent-off-it, don't you?"

"Oh... some" Alex agreed.

"It's a clean scent," we said, "one that belongs to the spring-time."

They sat a while there on the laneway, Scamper with them, looking into the devouring flames, with the purpling shadows of evening gentling the hills behind them, and filling the valley of the stream dusky in a quiet drift below.

"There's been a sound of frogs in April, Ellen—at least not around here" James in the old armchair offers, reflecting that this is the last night of the month.

No, in a favorable omen no greenish flute was played in the neighborhood. And it comes to mind, the groundhog saw his shadow on Candlemas Day as, by rights, he should, and Good Friday's wind was pleasant!

"And now, Ellen," James suggests rising from his seat, "I think we should carry down a pail or so of water to damp that bonfire—just to make sure that it's out."

It is a perfect idea. So that sleep may come unbroken to our pillows.

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good - night.....

Souris Council CWL Elects New Slate Of Officers

The annual meeting of Souris Council of the CWL was held in the parish hall on Sunday afternoon with a large attendance, including two honorary members. Monsignor J. A. Sullivan opened the meeting with the League prayer. The president Mrs. Raymond Campbell, gave a brief report of the year's work. The minutes of the last annual meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Francis McIntosh and Mrs. Joseph Campbell gave the treasurer's report, which showed a favourable bank balance.

The president then called on the units for their reports, all of which showed a very successful year both financially and spiritually.

Converters of the various committees gave their reports: Mrs. Warren Cheverie, reporting for social action, gave an inspiring report of the work which was done by her committee during the year which consisted of organizing a fire fund, boxes of food given to the needy at Christmas, visiting the shut-ins; also treats for the retarded children as well as classroom supplies, and many other acts of charity.

Mrs. James Paquet reported that the ways and means committee had a very successful year. Funds were raised by bingo, card parties, and banquets, which were held throughout the year. All other converts gave interesting reports which showed the work done during the year.

Monsignor Sullivan praised the ladies for the work which they had done, and stressed the importance of every catholic woman belonging to the catholic Women's League.

Mrs. St. Clair Paquet, chairman of the nominating committee brought in the following slate of officers for the coming year: president, Mrs. Fred Perry; 1st vice, president, Mrs. James Paquet; 2nd vice president, Mrs. Leonard Walsh; 3rd vice president, Mrs. Andrew Meaurio; secretary, Mrs. Daniel MacDonald and treasurer, Seta Lutez.

Monsignor Sullivan installed the new officers by reciting the act of consecration. A vote of thanks was extended to the outgoing executive by Mrs. Adrian McInnis. Mother Superior spoke briefly, thanking the women for catechism and school prizes, etc.

Refreshments were then served to all present.

8 peeled medium white potatoes, halved

Saute pork until golden in olive - oil. Add salt, pepper, freeze - dried shallots and onion. Sauté until onion looks translucent. Add garlic powder and bay leaf. Continue to saute until onion becomes golden. Stir occasionally.

Stir in flour; continue to saute until light brown. Add wine or grape juice and lemon juice. Boil 5 min.; stir in mixed vegetables and olives. Top with potatoes and cover. Simmer 35 min. or bake at 350 degrees F., until vegetables and pork are fork - tender.

Kensington P.C. Hospital Aid Supplies Four Machines

On the strength of a motion passed at a previous meeting, the members of the Kensington P.C. Hospital Ladies Aid heard at the April meeting that three more portable blood pressure machines had been bought for the hospital. A letter from the business manager, J. Hogan, thanked the Kensington group, and stated that the machines had been delivered and were in operation. This makes a total of four of the machines bought for the hospital by the Kensington Aid and completes this project.

The members discussed plans for a pot luck supper to be held some time in the future. The final meeting for the current season will be held on Monday, May 31.

The April meeting was held at the home of the president, Mrs. R. W. Aid.

Interesting Talk Heard By CWL

James Murphy, principal of Kensington Regional High School addressed the Catholic Women's League Council at their regular monthly meeting. He spoke on the influence of the church, the home and the school in the life of a teenager, and said "each have a part in forming the character of young people". Mr. Murphy was introduced by the education convener, Mrs. L.G. Ramsay and thanked by the president, Mrs. Tom Turner.

The meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. Stewart Darr, was well attended. Rev. Dr. L. P. Callaghan, Director of the Council, spoke briefly and congratulated Mr. Murphy on his fine talk.

After routine business, refreshments were served by Mrs. Darr and her committee. The meeting adjourned with the act of consecration to the Blessed Virgin.

Up-Dated Date Cupcakes Fine As Guests' Dessert

EVER since homemaking began, women have been searching for quicker, easier cooking methods. This constant reaching out has sparked today's influx of convenience foods.

But many of the time - saving older methods are just as quick, and produce foods that have that indescribably "home-made touch."

Once The Rage

Early in this century cakes made by the "one - bowl" method were the rage - for instance, the following quick and easy Date Cupcakes.

Make them small, cool and serve with tea, or as an accompaniment to a simple fruit dessert or fruit ice. Or enjoy them warm topped with lemon sauce, or with whipped cream cheese and a garnish of additional pitted dates or chopped nuts as a guest - dessert at luncheon or dinner.

Measurements level; recipes for 6

DATE CUPCAKES (one - bowl method)

1/4 c. room - soft butter or margarine

1/2 c. brownulated sugar or 1/4 c. soft brown sugar

2 eggs (medium size)

1/2 c. milk or water

1 c. shredded pitted dates (pasteurized)

1/4 c. sifted flour

3 tsp. baking powder

1/4 tsp. salt

1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon

1/4 tsp. each ground nutmeg and clove

Combine all ingredients in 2-qt. bowl and beat thoroughly by hand (about 150 strokes). Transfer to oiled 2 1/2" cupcake pans; dust each with 1 tsp. granulated sugar. Bake 25 min. in moderate oven, 375 degrees F., or until a pick when inserted, comes out clean.

Makes about 1 doz.

TOMORROW'S DINNER

Grapefruit Cocktail

Fresh Pork Ragout with Vegetables and Black Olives

Molded Jellied Stewed Rhubarb with Ding Peaches and Date Cupcakes

Coffee or Tea Milk

FRESH PORK RAGOUT WITH VEGETABLES AND BLACK OLIVES

(A one-dish entree ready in an hour)

Sewing Class Holds Party At York

The 4-H sewing class, under the supervision of their leaders, Mrs. Elmer Brown, Mrs. Irving MacDonald and Mrs. Laken Lewis, staged a supper party in York hall recently. All the girls who had taken the sewing course from its beginning were invited to attend and to bring a partner. The tables were set up attractively decorated by six of the girls, Gloria Costache, Ina M. MacDonald, Jean MacDonald, Eleanor Jewell, Donna MacDonald, and Hazel MacDonald.

After supper, the evening was spent in games which all enjoyed. A square dance by the older members brought the pleasant evening to a close.
