

THOMAS J. FORD

Thomas J. Ford, science, the eldest son of Rachel and Hamilton T. Ford, was born on January 17, 1935, in St. Paul, Minnesota, but at the age of 12 his family moved to Franconia, New Hampshire, where he has since been a happy resident. He attended high school at Maryknoll Junior Seminary in Clark Summit, Pa. A change in plans brought him to St. Dunstan's in the Fall of 1953 as a Freshman, and since his entrance here, he has made a definite contribution to campus life. A capable member of the chapel choir, he was also appointed to the staff of Red and White in his Sophomore year as a contributing editor. In the last three years he has left a distinct imprint on this organization; he was appointed assistant editor in his Junior year, and this year as editor, he put his talents to full use. Imaginative and constantly trying to improve, he introduced several innovations in Red and White, elevated and renewed interest in the publication. His trademark, on the rare occasions when he was not in the lab, has been his camera and photo gadget bag. These were invariably slung over his shoulder whenever any college activities were on tap, and he will leave Saint Dunstan's with numerous snapshots to remind him of his full and varied life on the campus. Tom has been elected to the Class of '57 to deliver the valedictory. He aspires to a Bachelor of Science degree, and his future plans are centered around teaching.

NANCY GILLIS

Nancy Catherine Ann Gillis, Science, was born in Alberton, Prince Edward Island, on April 29, 1936; she arrived just in time to chase the April showers with her sunny smile. At an early age, Nancy started her quest for knowledge stopping first in Alberton school, then Tignish Convent where she completed her high school education and graduated in 1953. In the fall of that same year she entered Prince of Wales College in the Science Faculty. Her stay at P.W.C. lasted just two years for in 1955 she decided to doff the Blue and Red of the Welshmen and don the Red and White of the Saints to continue her quest for a Bachelor of Science degree. Though Nancy was late in joining the Class of '57, it was not long before she became an active and popular member of it. In the short time she has been here Nancy has been a member of the Red and White staff, President of the Sigma Delta Sorority, and has taken part in many campus activities. Her extra-curricular activities, however, do not overshadow her scholastic achievements; for Nancy has been at, or near, the top of her class in both her Junior and Senior years. Nancy's college record is one of which she may be justly proud. Her plans for the future are to continue in the field of Science, either teaching or applying her knowledge in a laboratory.

IAN GILLIES

Ian Holland Paul Gillies, Commerce, was born in August, 1936. He began his search for knowledge within the walls of Queen Square School, and having successfully completed Grade X, entered Prince of Wales College. In the autumn of 1953, S.D.U. threw open its portals to this unassuming gentleman who was later to prove himself a worthy applicant for a Degree. In extra-curricular activities Ian excelled in two particular phases, namely, dramatics and debating. In debating he contributed no small part to winning two Maritime Championships and one National title as a member of intercollegiate debating teams for four years. His keen interest in debating merited him the position of secretary-treasurer of the M.I.D.L. (S.D.U. branch) in his Junior year, and this year he was chosen President of the Maritime Intercollegiate Debating League. His clear, pleasant voice and devastating logic, all enlivened by a keen sense of humor, have earned for him the College debating "D" and the respect of all opponents. Ian plans to take up business in Halifax. With his good nature, common sense, cheerful and sincere personality, we trust that he is well equipped to succeed in his chosen career.

HENRY GAUDET

A gentleman, but not stilted; a Canadian without apologies, a scholar, but not academic; are but the seals on the document of life being compiled by Henry Urban GauDET, Arts. Since that document began on August 19, 1934 in Tignish, his early educational episodes took place there. In the fall of 1952, the scene of the narrative shifted to Saint Dunstan's when Henry entered Grade XII. Colorful chapters drafted along the lines of leadership in extra-curricular activities include: Vice-president of the Glee Club in 1953-54; the secretariat of the Club in the following year; and the position of secretary of the Students' Union in 1955-56. His senior year brought the responsibilities of dorm-keeper, and instructor of Latin for Grade XI, Footnotes to the narrative might include reference to Henry's valuable work as college organizer, his membership in the Glee Club and French Choir, and his uncanny skill with the pastebords. His services with the U.N.T.D. have qualified him for a commission in the Reserve Force, and in the final issue of the Red and White, he is featured as the chronicler editor. Henry now looks toward adding another seal to the documentary of his life, this time one of a sacramental nature.

Eden Will Spend 23 Days In Ottawa In May Convalescing

OTTAWA (CP) — Sir Anthony Eden will spend 23 days in Ottawa next month convalescing at Government House following his April 13 operation in a Boston hospital. The 59-year-old former British prime minister will stay at Government House as guest of Governor-General Massey, a close personal friend. Sir Anthony's wife, Lady Clarissa, will accompany him to Ottawa. The ailing British statesman will be discharged next Monday from Boston's New England Baptist Hospital. After resting for a week near Boston he will fly to Ottawa Monday, May 6. The visit will be Sir Anthony's first to Ottawa since Feb. 3-8, 1956 when he paid an official visit as prime minister. Sir Anthony arrived in Boston April 7 from New Zealand where he had been resting after resigning as prime minister. Six days later he was operated on for a bile duct obstruction, his fourth major surgery in four years. Sir Anthony will remain in Ottawa until May 28 and will return to Britain the next day. It is expected that trip will be by air. A spokesman at Government House said Sir Anthony will rest during his entire stay in the capital. No formal functions were being planned as Sir Anthony is under instructions to be very quiet during the entire rest period. During part of Sir Anthony's stay here, Mr. Massey will be away from the city fulfilling engagements previously arranged and which cannot be cancelled. The governor-general will return to Ottawa next Tuesday from his Port Hope, Ont., home. From May 10 to May 22, he will make visits to Northern Ontario, Northern Manitoba, Northern Saskatchewan and New Brunswick. Mr. Massey originally had invited Sir Anthony to rest at Government House before proceeding to Boston to undergo the operation. However, his doctors later advised that Sir Anthony should go direct to Boston.

Quake Is Felt In New England

PORTLAND, Me. (AP) — An earthquake described by seismologists as a "strong local" shock jarred four New England states Friday but caused no damage. Its effect was felt in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont. Seismologists disagreed as to where it centered exactly. Rev. Daniel Linehan, at Weston observatory in Weston, Mass., placed it about 10 to 20 miles off Yarmouth, Me. Professor L. Don Leet, at the Harvard College seismograph station in Harvard, Mass., said he believes the epicentre was "somewhere in a mountainous region of New Hampshire." Rattling of windows and the dancing of tea cups seemed to be general along the New England coast from Eastport, Me. to Cape Cod. The shock was felt as far inland as Williamstown, Mass., near the New York state line and throughout central New Hampshire. Reports of the tremor also came from St. Johnsbury, Vt., where there was a minor quake earlier in the week.

Diefenbaker Speaks At Party Meeting In Quebec

By ALAN DONNELLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer
QUEBEC (CP) — John Diefenbaker presented his Progressive Conservative party Saturday night as "the party of Confederation" and said national unity must be based on provincial autonomy and diversity. "The Conservative party made Confederation," he said. "It now has an appointment to preserve and maintain that Confederation unimpaired." The 61-year-old leader, who gained the party's top post at last December's leadership convention made the second major speech of his election campaign in the capital of the province which gave most of its convention support to his main opponent then, Donald Fleming. Mr. Diefenbaker said there is unity in the party among himself and the contenders for the leadership at that time, Mr. Fleming, member of Parliament for Toronto Eglinton, and Dave Fulton, member for Kamloops.

HAD DISAGREEMENTS
"We had disagreements. Those disagreements are no longer with us." His 55-minute speech, eight minutes of which were spoken in French, was delivered to nearly 1,000 persons in a community centre and broadcast on a local English language radio station, CJCC. From here he travelled east for a week-long swing through the three Maritime provinces which start today with a one-day campaign in Prince Edward Island. "We are counting for support on the province of Quebec and the province of Quebec can count on the Conservative party," he said in the French section of his speech here. Speaking in English, he emphasized the provincial-rights stand he has set out in earlier speeches and said his party will protect the constitutional rights of minorities and the provinces.

CREATED RIGHTS
The Conservative party, as founders of Confederation, created those rights, he said. "It is this party that will maintain them against the centralizing attacks by the Liberal government in Ottawa today." The federal system established by the constitution had not outlived its usefulness and never would. It assigned to the central government control over matters of common interest such as external affairs and trade, and permitted diversity among provinces in local affairs such as education, municipalities, personal rights and health and welfare. "The two languages, two cultures and two systems of law are of such importance to those who inherit them that unity in national affairs is only possible if it is based on autonomy and diversity in local affairs."

DILUTE RIGHTS
The Liberal government was concentrating taxing power in Ottawa and if that trend continued it would dilute provincial rights as effectively as if the constitution were amended. Mr. Diefenbaker called the Liberal party "the high tax party" and reiterated his promise that a Conservative government, if elected June 10, will call an immediate session of Parliament "to reduce such taxation as can be reduced."

"Don't you think you have over-taxed long enough by this government?" he asked.
PRIME MINISTER'S HOME
Mr. Diefenbaker, speaking in the home city of Prime Minister St. Laurent, referred only once to the prime minister. He said the supremacy of Parliament is vital to the preservation of the federal system. When provincial and individual rights were destroyed. In last year's Pipeline battle in the Commons, Mr. St. Laurent had said silent while Trade Minister Howe and other cabinet members "reduced Parliament to shambles." Closure, a debate-limiting device, had been used at the outset of the debate. "Was that Liberalism?" A Conservative government would abolish closure "so that Parliament will never again be strangled as it was one year ago." The Liberal government had reduced its Commons majority to the status of a rubber stamp. SEND STAMPS TO COMMONS
"It would be cheaper to buy a set of rubber stamps and send them to the House of Commons. They would be as spontaneous in their independence as those that have been sent in recent years." Leon Balcer, president of the party's national association who is seeking re-election in Trois-Rivieres, also spoke. He described Mr. Diefenbaker as "this Canadian Abraham Lincoln" who had fought for the freedom of the provinces as Lincoln had fought to free the slaves. Before the meeting, an estimated 500 persons paid $2 each for a buffet supper in the hall with Mr. Diefenbaker. On his arrival in Quebec earlier in the day, he called on Mr. Rev. Maurice Roy, Roman Catholic archbishop of Quebec, and chatted at city hall with Mayor Wilfrid Hamel, former cabinet minister in the provincial government of the late Premier Gaudet.

Hush-Hush Canadian Craft To Be Launched Monday In U. K.

By KEN METHERAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP) — A hush-hush Canadian hydrofoil research craft will be launched Monday at the Saunders-Roe (Angley) Ltd., works near Bangor, Wales. The 59-foot, 17-ton craft has been designed and built by Saunders-Roe under contract to the Canadian government and is expected to be used for research into high-speed water travel. Detailed evaluation tests will be carried out by the Canadian defence research board at its naval research establishment in Halifax. The boat is being named Bras d'Or in honor of Alexander Graham Bell, whose early experimental work with hydrofoils in conjunction with F. W. (Casey) Baldwin formed the basis of the present vessel's design. Bell and Baldwin carried out much of their experimental work on the Bras d'Or lakes in Nova Scotia. KNOWN AS R-103
The Bras d'Or, also known as the R-103, will be christened by Mrs. A. H. Zimmerman, wife of the chairman of the defence research board. The hull, of aluminum alloy construction, is fitted with three hydrofoil units of similar size—a forward pair mounted on each side of the hull and a rear unit mounted behind the transom. Much of the hydrofoil design is under a strict security blanket, but it is known that each unit contains several V-shaped blades and that of the hydrofoil system employed is of the "surface-piercing" type in which the upper blades leave the water as speed increases. Advantages claimed for the "ladder" system of surface-piercing.

ing hydrofoils are the achievement of large hull clearances at speed while retaining good structural properties for scaling to larger craft. INHERENTLY STABLE
The system is reported to be inherently stable, a property which would have obvious advantages for naval craft needing to combine high speed with a stable platform for either guns or guided missiles. The prototype of the Bras d'Or, the R-100 Massawippi, has been undergoing extensive trials at the Canadian naval research establishment. The R-100 has a length of 45 feet and the decision to build a larger research vehicle is believed to indicate that the experimental work is progressing satisfactorily. The Bras d'Or is powered by two Rolls-Royce marine engines. The hull is expected to leave the water at about 20 knots and at maximum speed—a highly-guarded secret—the hull should have a clearance of some 3 1/2 feet. This relatively large hull clearance is employed to enable the craft to proceed in rough water at high speed.

Reds Say U. S. Uses Pretext To Show Force

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) The Soviet Union Friday accused the United States of using what it called a non-existent Communist threat as a pretext for sending the 6th Fleet into the eastern Mediterranean. The charge was made by Soviet delegate Arkady A. Sobolev. He said "attempts are being made to exercise vindictive measures against the people of Jordan, which is refusing to accept the Eisenhower doctrine and join the aggressive Baghdad Pact." Sobolev brought up the Jordan crisis during Security Council debates on the Suez Canal question. He was called to order by the council president, Sir Pierson Dixon of Britain, but his remarks brought replies from both the United States and Iraq. U.S. delegate Henry Cabot Lodge said there is nothing in the Eisenhower doctrine that need bother any country unless it had aggressive plans. ASKED ABOUT FLEET
Sobolev asked Lodge what country had invited the 6th Fleet to the eastern Mediterranean. Lodge replied that the fleet was in international waters and had a right to be there. Shabandar of Iraq challenged a statement by Sobolev that the Communists had nothing to do with the situation in Jordan. "The troubles in Jordan," the Iraqi delegate said, "have indeed been caused by outside instigation. The troubles in Jordan have come from one source alone. That source is international communism and its instruments in Jordan." Dixon, speaking as British representative, referred to the "extraordinary" statement of Sobolev and the "distorted picture of past and present events" which he had drawn. Noting that Iraqi and U.S. delegates had effectively replied to the "phantasmagoria," he asked
