THE LITTLE HILL BEYANT.

Musha! in thirty six Didn't I come over here, From the land we culls an' kicks, Where a pound uv flour was dear. I see me hardy soos, Their homes around me plant, But me heart is far away On a little hill beyant.

Musha, man, listen to me, Weren't we ground and driv', Sorra a soul could sue me, Fer I hada't enough to live. Now I've three hundred acres. Sue me! nobody can't! But me heart is far away On a little hill beyant.

On a little green-topped hill, Where the tender shamrocks grow, Where the subbeams drink their fill And the blue sky bendeth low, M' mother's bones are there, 'Neath Erin's three-leaved plant; No hill is halt so fair As that little hill beyant.

No heathen urn or shaft Is planted on her grave, But the symbol often laughed To scorn stands calm and brave, An' the aged priest comes oit To pluck old Erin's plant, An' the vesper bell sounds soft On the little hill beyant.

Whisht! yer grandad's dreamin', Musha, his fair forgot, That all the cows is streamin' Into the meadow lot. Wake him, someone!—wake him, Musha!—no one cant. He's home to-night in Erin On the little hill beyant!

DEADLY PHILIPPINE VOLCANO.

Five Hundred People Killed and Several Towns Destroyed.

A special to the Chicago Chronicle from Tacoma, Washington, says: "Five hundred reported killed up to July 1st is record of the terrible outbreak of the great volcano of Mayon, on the island of Luzon, one of the Philippine group. All night of June 24th the volcano threw up ashes and lava in immense quantities and flames were thrown upwards considerably over 100 feet above the crater. The next day 56 bodies were recovered at a considerable distance, and the most recent despatches to Hong Kong up to July 8th stated not less than 500 were known to be killed. It was probable, said the despatches, that the loss of life would reach into the thousands, depending on the length of eruption. On that date lava streams and ashes had reached the cities of Bacay, Malihet and Libog and their destruction was certain. Fifteen smaller towns between these and the volcano had been destroyed and scores of the agricultural population had been overwhelmed while attempting to escape.

MESSAGE TO MEN

Proving that You are Healthy and True Philanthropist by SMITH EXLAT

If any man who is weak, nervous and debilitated, or who is suffering from any of the various troubles resulting from youthful folly, excesses or overwork, will take heart and write to me, I will send him confidentially and free of charge the plan pursued by which I was completely restored to perfect health and manhood, after years of suffering from Nervous Debility, loss of Vigor and Organic Weakness.

I have nothing to sell, and therefore want no money, but as I know through my own experience how to sympathize with such sufferers, I am glad to be able to assist any fellow-beings to a cure. I am well aware of the prevalence of quackery, for I myself was deceived and imposed upon until I nearly lost faith in mankind but I rejoice to say that I am now perfectly well and happy once more and am desirous therefore to make this certain means of cure known to all. If you will write to me you can rely upon being cured and the proud satisfaction of having been of great service to one in need will be sufficient reward for my trouble. Absolute secrecy assured. Send 5c silver to cover postage and address Mr. G. Strong, North Rockwood, Mich. 135 p&w.

GEO. D. SCOTT Agent

SOME OF THE LUCKY ONES.

Gold, gold, gold! The air is full of flying rumors of the marvellous gold finds in the Klondike. It is impossible to resist the fascination of these stories; the extra ordinary lights and shades of the picture; the awful hardships and the splendid harvests; the terrific gamble of the game which stakes everything against the turn up of the spade. And there is an aspect of the question larger than the success or failure of individual miners. If this influx of gold continues, the effect upon the industrial and political situation of the country and the world will be enormous. It is not only the miners, but you and I and all the other stay at homes, who will share the boom. This is the real significance of the affair. It is of national importance, and Harper's Weekly has done well to despatch a special correspondent to the scene to furnish it with articles and illustrations. Meanwhile it publishes this week some of the earliest pictures to arrive, and two very full letters from writers in San Francisco and Tacoma who have obtained their information directly from returning miners. The following selection from this week's Harper's Weekly presents a vivid picture:

"One returning prospector, J. O. Hestwood, of Seattle, told, to my mind, the most remarkable story of all these prospectors. He had mined on the Yukon for three years. The first year he contracted the scurvy from living exclusively on salt pork and beans, and was brought out of the territory almost in a dying condition. With spirit unimpaired he returned the next season, but his claims panned out only a meagre living. Then he returned to California and delivered a series of lectures through the State on the resources and the wonders of Alaska, illustrated with stereopticon views. In this way he made enough money to furnish him an outfit, and he was at Glacier Creek near the Klondike when the news of the discovery came. He promptly packed up his belongings, and was among the first to reach the new camp. He took up a claim, but the prospects did not please him, and as others were disappointed in sinking their first shafts, he abandoned the camp and started down the river. His boat broke down, and he was compelled to return on foot to the new mining district. By this time pans of dirt ranging from $500 down to $125 had been found in several claims, and he at once proceeded to develop his property. He worked throughout the season, hiring a couple of men to help him.

"I have said that all the miners who have made this wonderful find, or profited by it, are tenderhearted. A few incidents which occurred at the dock when the steamer landed, or shortly after, will show how thoroughly this is true. Nils Anderson, of Seattle, borrowed $300 of an acquaintance in the summer of 1895 to go to the Yukon. He left a wife not very well provided for to provide for herself and several small children. This she did successfully, and paid the interest on the $300 besides. She was at the wharf to see the steamer arrive, knowing nothing of the good fortune awaiting her except from rumor, which said that the returning gold-hunters had "struck it rich." She certainly had reason to hope this was true, and that her husband had had some share of good fortune. One of the first to come down the plank after the ship had been made fast made fast was Anderson. He carried a stout and very heavy bag in either hand, and just behind him was a friend with two more. These bags and Mrs. Anderson was put into a waiting hack, and the party drove home. The bags contained something over $112,000.

"Another of the Argonauts, also a Swede, carried his dust, as many did, to the express office. He wanted to send it to the government at San Francisco." Asked if he knew how much he had, he said, "I think I have twenty thousand five hundred dollar." When his sack was put on the scale the clerk told him he had nearer $42,500, and his eye brightened at the news. When asked if he would take a receipt for the value, or by weight, he said he would take it by weight."

HOW TO BE HAPPY.

Keep your temper. Gain a little knowledge every day. Make few promises and speak the truth. Give full measure and weigh with a just balance. Consent to common custom, but not to common folly. Be cautious of believing ill, but more cautious of reporting it. Have courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones. Think of heaven with hearty purpose, and strong hope to get there. Do good to all, that thou mayst keep thy friends and gain thy enemies. Count your resources. Find out what you are not fit for and give up wishing for it.
