Political Science Professor Says Coalition Is Possible

By MICHAEL GILLAN
OTTAWA (CP) - A political science professor at the University of Western Ontario says forming a coalition government to produce a strong administration from a minority Parliament should not be ruled out.

Prof. W. M. Dobell, writing in the Liberal party publication The Journal of Liberal Thought, concludes that the results of the past three general elections means that supporters of minor parties wanted to produce a minority Parliament.

He said it was clear from the statements of the leaders of the minor parties that they did not expect to head a government after Nov. 8, 1965.

"Most voters who supported these parties may be assumed to have been oblivious to the reservations of their leaders, but many knew they were voting for a party that would not form the government," he writes.

"An isolated minority government like that of 1957, in which 20 per cent of the electorate voted for third parties, may be classed as a minority government by accident."

"When 27 per cent of the electorate votes three times running for minor parties, and on the third occasion those parties claim that better government can be achieved by blocking the Liberals' sought-after majority, it is time to suspect that minority government was not only the result of the election but the specific intention of many of the minor-party supporters."

Development Bank Declines Making Suggested Changes

By DENNIS ORCHARD
OTTAWA (CP) - With implicit government support, the Industrial Development Bank has declined to make any of the major policy changes recommended by the House of Commons commission on banking and finance.

The commission's report in 1964 questioned the bank's continuing growth, its low interest rate and its interpretation of its 1944 mandate from Parliament. Since then the IDB has kept expanding, held its interest rate well below that of private lenders and altered not a whit its concept of when and how to help small businesses.

In 22 years this "lender of last resort" has pushed far into the gap in medium and long-term financing faced by small and medium-size businesses.

It reads in a broad sense IDB Act instructions restricting its help to companies that cannot get credit elsewhere on "reasonable terms and conditions."

Loans and investments are regarded as remarkable for an institution taking risks theoretically unacceptable to other lenders.

Its net income before provision for losses was $2,263,000 in 1965, a year in which new loans totalled $96,000,000 and loans outstanding at the end of June represent money in use by almost every kind of enterprise in Canada.

CREDIT EASIER
In 1961 Parliament lifted a restriction that had held the IDB to the manufacturing sector, and since then it has worked most prominently with warehousing, construction, service and retail concerns. Bank officials say IDB credit is easier not so much because of lower rates, but because of longer terms for repayment, flexible requirements for security, and the package plans it offers to provide money for several purposes at once.

This kind of business is reluctant to give up equity to others and the IDB rarely takes equity participation. Small business management lacks experience in financing and the IDB is a willing advisor.

IDB profits would not be attractive to a private lender, but the bank has had write-offs consistently below two per cent, outstanding totalled $254,300,000. The average size of 2,209 loans granted through 27 regional branches was $44,000. Half of the loans were for less than $25,000 and 37 for more than $200,000. Four of 10 helped buy land and buildings, three of 10 machinery and equipment and about one in 10 assisted various types of refinancing.

The bank's original $25,000,000 capitalization in Bank of Canada debentures kept it as a $100,000,000 lending institution until the 1961 amendments quadrupled this potential.

Filling the small-business gap was one of the Porter commission's reasons for recommending removal of the six per cent ceiling on chartered bank interest rates.

IDB sources say that if the bank rate is in fact freed after the changes now proposed in the Bank Act, IDB lending will probably not decline at all.

They say long-term credit of 10 to 15 years will not likely be handled by the banks and medium-term requirements represent a fast growing area where the risks will take time and experience for banks to assess.

than 50 per cent casualties. Over-all marine casualties were reported light.

Marine officers estimated enemy strength in that battle at possibly 450 men.

There were no immediate reports of enemy casualties.

Marine commanders reported, however, the overall enemy death toll so far in Operation Hastings—begin 10 days ago—had reached 611 by boat count. This was an increase of 34 over the count Saturday.

About 5,000 marines and thousands of South Vietnamese troops are participating in the operation.

The marines claim to have uncovered a major North Vietnamese infiltration route through the demilitarized zone which was drawn up in Geneva to separate the North and South Vietnams before the Viet Cong launched their full-scale guerrilla war in the South.

Mobs swarmed the streets, burning, looting and shooting. A Negro woman was shot to death, 21 persons were injured and 53 arrested that night.

Ohio Governor James A. Rhodes called out nearly 2,000 guardsmen on the mayor's request Tuesday afternoon but before the troops moved in there was another shooting death. Arrests went to work the next three nights, leaving damage estimated at between $250,000 and $500,000.

Separate shootings Friday and Saturday left two Negro men dead in each incident, white men were the suspected assailants.

FACTS about your UNITED FUND

WHY DO WE NEED A UNITED FUND?
Last week a number of questions concerning the United Fund were posed, which were to be answered in this corner.

The first such question which we should consider is: Why do we need a United Fund?

On the surface it might appear as if a United Fund is unnecessary. Why not let each organization go its own way, looking after itself, soliciting funds by itself and by its own means?

Is this the answer? There are few people who will agree that it is. It does not require a great feat of memory to look back just a few short years when the multiplicity of campaigns on P.E.I. had reached alarming proportions, with the same people being asked over and over again to do the canvassing.

As a result of this situation, the City Council asked the Board of Trade to investigate the possibility of combining all these fund-raising drives into one campaign.

This was done, and a steering committee, after asking the opinions of hundreds of Islanders, brought in the recommendation, based on their findings, that a United Fund be formed and that it should include all the province.

The reasoning behind a provincial United Fund was simply this: Since the agencies concerned offered their services to all areas of the province, it was only fitting that support for the Fund should be province-wide. Thus the need for a United Fund was established and it has been in full-time operation here since August, 1962.
