Governor Ford Gives Inspiring Address At Rotary

Stressing the theme that the individual is becoming more and more indebted to society, District Governor Edwin K. Ford, Halifax, told Rotarians at their weekly luncheon yesterday that in Rotary members are given an effective means of making a token payment to society.

Answering in the negative the question posed in the title of his address, "Are we socially solvent?" he stressed for any human being today to make anything but a token payment in return for the contribution made by society to individuals. There is little that the self-made man can take credit for personally.

Mental capacity and inherent traits are the gift of God. These may be developed, said the speaker, but even if a person takes credit for their development it is actually nothing to compare with what has been freely given. He recalled a conversation in which a friend of his was being praised as "self-made". Later he reflected that this particular gentleman had been born in a home where high morals were upheld. In childhood his environment had strengthened his character. Later he had made good use of his older friends in seeking wise advice, and he had the advantage of free entry to many forms of social and cultural improvement. "It is to be given language without which neither he nor the rest of the society could exist as it is today. "With all these advantages as free gifts to the individual, surely the self-made man has little enough to boast about, and all of us owe far more to society than we can ever repay."

Rotarian Ford said he had once heard an engineer say that people got the greatest satisfaction in life from going the second mile of unrequited service. In the pioneer days should disaster fall upon a single family, the other families in the community could easily by their combined efforts restore the destroyed home, but today no individual, family or group of families could do much in any emergency. Life is so complicated that only large organizations may make effective the desires of the individual. As members of churches, service clubs, and fraternal organizations and in community service the individual strives to "pay rent for his room on earth."

In most groups, "birds of a feather flock together." Rotary, in which only one individual of each classification is admitted, the individual is given an opportunity to serve beyond the bounds of his vocation and learns to appreciate interests far removed from his own particular sphere.

Guests yesterday included Rotarians Orrin MacGregor, Halifax; Rev. F. W. Patterson, Wolfville; and J. D. Davidson, Charlottetown. President George Walters presided.

In the evening a club assembly was held in which the District Governor dealt with the mechanics of Rotary and the work of Rotary International.

Nationalists Report Unrest In Red China

By SPENCER MOOSA
Associated Press News Analyst (For J. M. Roberts, Jr.)

TAIPEI, Formosa — Chinese Nationalists understandably are striving to give the impression that Communist China is in ferment against the regime of Communist leader Mao Tse-Tung.

More cautious independent quarters here regard such reports in the light of Nationalist China's obvious desire to paint a dark picture of conditions on the mainland.

But the accounts are nonetheless interesting.

One published here, detailed the alleged plans of turncoat commander Fu Tso-Ya's former Nationalist troops to stage an open revolt in the North China province of Hopeh and the Inner Mongolian Province of Suiyuan.

Other reports against the same background of Nationalist interest spoke of mass desertions in Chinese Communist armies on the mainland. These included the alleged defection to Nationalist guerrilla forces of 30,000 men under Red Gen. Tao Hsi-Yueh.

Reports in question also claimed the desertion of more than 1,000 Communist regulars from Gen. Chen Yi's Third Field Army. The defection was said to have occurred when the army reached Suchow in Northern Kiangsu Province, on the way to Manchuria.

Besides all this came insistent pro-Nationalist reports that Chinese Reds were planning to move their capital from Peiping to Sian if necessary. Sian, capital of Shensi province, is deep in China's interior, 560 miles southwest of Peiping.

The Communist Government was credited with ordering Red officials of all key Chinese cities to prepare for evacuation.
