After intermission things got off to a lively start as the flapperettes a troupe of ten girls danced their way back to the roaring twenties.

The wealthy widow Lucretia Carrington and her daughter Winnifred were played by Brenda Mutlow and Claire Daley. Carole Morley and Leslie MacKay took the parts of Olga Lane, a movie star, and Ivan Smith, her husband.

The program will also be presented at the auditorium tonight.

expectant press" at a time of government deficits and serious problems.

"What a circus performance that turned out to be," he said. "The double shuffle ended in no deal."

NO FACTUAL BASIS
At the night sitting, Mr. Diefenbaker said Mr. Pearson had expressed horror at reports of division in the cabinet.

"The exaggeration which was given to recent instances had no basis in fact," the prime minister said. "The unity among us is always strong, and I know most effective."

The Conservative government had had nothing in the nature of what happened in 1944 when Defence Minister Ralston, a "great Canadian patriot," had been shoved out of the Liberal cabinet.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Mr. Pearson's voice softened when it had come to election talk.

This reminded him of the 1958 Liberal motion "give us back our jobs." The reference was to Mr. Pearson's proposal soon after he was elected Liberal leader that the then minority Conservative government resign and the Liberals resume office without an election.

Mr. Pearson said Canadians were "more bored than shell-shocked" by the government's "electoral war of nerves."

CANADIANS 'BORIED'
The public had only yawned at Mr. Diefenbaker's declaration last year that the election issue would be private enterprise versus socialism.

There had been rumors of a snap election on the basis of the legislative program outlined in the throne speech. But five Ontario by-elections last week had indicated declining government popularity.

Mr. Pearson said the government's budget should be placed before the voters before an election.

The sooner an election under these conditions, the better for Canada but the worse for the government.

Mr. Pearson said he can understand the government's desire to wait.

The prime minister "has always placed great faith in the healing virtues of delay, as in the camouflaging magic of confusion."

Mr. Pearson accused the administration of "shocking mismanagement" of international economic policy.

The government's policy, particularly in relation to British membership in the European Common Market, had gone from inconsistency to incoherence.

By worrying about trade dangers instead of concentrating on opportunities, the government had forfeited a good deal of Canada's bargaining position.

The government had been blind and stupid about what was going on in Europe.

Everywhere, people were asking "what's wrong with Canada?"

If the government was not aware this question was being asked abroad "they are living in a fool's paradise induced by their own propaganda."

NEED CHANGE
"There's nothing wrong with Canada—that a change of government won't fix," Mr. Pearson said.

Mr. Pearson also taxed the government with a "shocking refusal to make up its mind on defence policy, especially on nuclear weapons."

"Could there be a more complete abdication of governmental responsibility?"

Old Charge Laid Against Accused

One charge, on an alleged recent offence, was withdrawn against an accused, and another charge, alleging an offence in 1967, was laid against the same accused in Queens County magistrate's court before Magistrate James B. Johnston, QC, yesterday.

The charge withdrawn was one of possession of stolen goods, an automobile battery, valued less than $50. Withdrawal was made at the request of Deputy Attorney-General J. Arthur McGuigan.

NEW CHARGE
The new charge alleges that on Aug. 6, 1967, Edison Damerell McKenna, Toronto, broke and entered into the meathouse of Lorne Donald Nicholson, a hinted at an election on the issue of Senate reform after the "sordid mess of the Coyne affair." He had backed away from that because of hostile public opinion.

JFK SEES ASKS STANDBY POWER

He also asked standby authority to start, or speed up, $2,000,000,000 of public works and other pump-priming activities in case recession threatened.

Since the Second World War, Kennedy said, the U.S. has had four recessions. When he took office last January it was in the grip of the latest one.

"The downturn was reversed," he said, and the gross national product grew from an annual rate of $50,000,000,000 in the first quarter of 1961 to a record annual rate of $54,000,000,000 in the last quarter.

Unemployment dropped to 6.1 from 6.8 per cent of the labor force, he added, but was "still far too high."

For 1961 as a whole, he said, the gross national product was $52,000,000,000, and he predicted $57,000,000,000 in 1962—a "giant stride."

Rotary Club Applauds 1961 'Islander Of Year'

Dr. Frank MacKinnon was given a standing ovation at the Rotary luncheon in the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday when congratulated by the club president, John Simmonds on being selected by a panel of judges for the "Islander of the Year" award for 1961.

Dr. MacKinnon had tendered his resignation as incoming president of the Rotary club last May in order to devote his time and talent to an assigned task dealing with the decision to erect the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Building in Charlottetown.

The award presentation ceremonies will take place at the luncheon meeting of Rotary on Feb. 5.

A three-part program by club members and presided over by R.E. Sellar with J.E. Burden as co-chairman dealt with the Rotary magazine, a classification talk and the Rotary challenge. Reginald MacNutt was introduced as a new member by his sponsor, Roy MacGillivray.

Past President T.D. DeBlion read the Rotary challenge to recent new members, A. Walthen Gaudet, C.W. Peters, Walter And and Reginald MacNutt. President John Simmonds spoke words of welcome and presented Rotary literature and a recognition button to each.

John Legerwood described the wide variety of reading material appearing each month in the "Rotarian" and the world-wide distribution of the magazine. Going into the preparation and distribution of "The Rotarian" the speaker said that each year 195 acres of Canadian pulp is processed and rolled into a ribbon of paper four feet wide and 7,000 miles long. Every known method of transportation distributes 80,000 mailbags of the magazine to 136 countries and into half a million mail boxes.

Allison MacRae in giving a talk on his classification in Rotary, "Automobile parts and accessories" said that the type of business referred to is part and parcel of the whole automotive business, a very important factor in the Canadian economy.

"Latest statistics show—that about 13 cents of every dollar spent in Canada is either for a car, car parts or fuel," he said. Describing the early attempts to produce a self-propelled road vehicle, the speaker said that some years before the French Revolution a crude steam-powered vehicle plied the roads of France. Such a vehicle carried
