

Soviet Grain Harvest Seen Missing Target

By PETER JOHNSON
MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union's grain harvest, as both by bad weather and inefficiency, is likely to lag considerably behind the planned target. A foreign diplomatic spokesman says.

On the basis of incomplete figures published here, they forecast that total grain production will be about the same as that of last year—17,200,000 metric tons. Last year's planned target was 154,000,000 metric tons.

Nikita Khrushchev, the master campaigner for a more efficient agriculture, said earlier in the summer that it was possible that this year would see a grain harvest record, to beat the 141,000,000 metric tons of 1951.

But since then reports from many areas have been disappointing. Unusually cool and rainy weather in the Baltic states, White Russia, parts of Siberia, the central region around Moscow and parts of the Ukraine has hit farmers. It may turn out that the

2 Russian Employees At UN Charged With Spy Activities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has accused two Soviet employees of the United Nations of carrying out illegal intelligence activities in New York.

Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy said here a three-year investigation had uncovered the activities of the two.

One left the country before the United States submitted its evidence to the UN secretary and the other left afterwards, presumably expelled by the United Nations.

The justice department said the illegal activities were uncovered by the FBI with the help of Richard F. Fink, a young New York City lawyer who now is a Republican candidate for the state assembly.

The announcement said Yuri A. Mishukov, a 31-year-old diplomat first established contact with Fink in the fall of 1949.

When Mishukov left the country this summer, for reasons unannounced, he turned over the contract work to Yuri V. Zaitsev, a 38-year-old political officer in the UN Political and Security Affairs Council, the department said.

Superior Oil Buys Holding

CALGARY (CP) — Superior Oil, an American-based company, has acquired 40 per cent control of Calgary and Edmonton Corporation, a large Canadian land-holding and petroleum development firm.

R. G. Renne, secretary-treasurer of C and E, said Friday Superior has obtained 966,000 shares in a series of purchases during recent months.

Socialist Paper To Change Name In Great Britain

By GERALD MULLIGAN
LONDON (Reuters) — Reynolds News, Britain's 102-year-old Sunday socialist newspaper, died in name with its last appearance Sunday. But by next Sunday it will have been resurrected as the Sunday Citizen.

Behind this simple maneuver lies a problem which labor party leaders have found impossible to remedy. Their Sunday champion, Reynolds News, has appeared to die slowly, the victim of indifference among 12,000,000 socialist voters.

While the voice of the left languishes with a circulation of 320,000 copies, the newspaper giants of the right forge ahead, with millions of adherents—rebels and reactionaries included. In Britain, a man's newspaper is no guide to his politics.

Now the manly Transport and General Worker Union has attempted to infuse new life into the ailing paper with a cheque for £5,000 ($15,000) which, says editor W. R. Richardson, will be spent on "launching and building-up the Sunday Citizen as a dynamic and influential newspaper of the labor, trade union and co-operative movements."

FOUNDED IN 1850
Reynolds News was founded on May 5, 1850, as a journal of "democratic progress," by pioneer socialist George William Arthur Reynolds, an admiral's son who later mixed with revolutionaries in Europe.

He defined its mission as "the defence of the interests of the enslaved masses" and as editor he gained a readership of 200,000—only 10,000 fewer than today's total.

Britain's co-operative movement bought the paper in 1920 for £150,000 and is said to have been granting an annual subsidy of £200,000 to preserve its life.

Cyril Hammett, chairman of its Co-operative Press Publishers, admits that a change of name has never before succeeded in such circumstances—but this time it will, he maintains.
