—"The Secret Garden" AT CAPITOL, SUMMERSIDE

—"The Secret Garden," one of the world's most beloved classics and a story read by fifty million readers since its publication forty years ago, comes to the Capitol screen with two of motion picture's youngest Academy Award winners teamed in the leading roles. They are Margaret O'Brien, who won an Oscar for her work in "Lost Angel," and Dean Stockwell, who won the award for his outstanding performance in "Gentlemen's Agreement."

Others in top roles include Herbert Marshall, Gladys Cooper, Elsa Lanchester and Reginald Owen, together with Hollywood's most unusual newcomers—Captain, a cub fox; Rascal, a squirrel; Nancy, a tiny lamb, and Jimmy, the trick raven.

Based on the novel by Frances Hodgson Burnett its wistful Victorian charm is heightened for entertainment purposes by elements of mystery; the search for a lost love, the suspense of the unknown; the excitement of a forbidden friendship; Margaret O'Brien, in the most dramatic part of her career, plays Mary Lennox, a spoiled and unloved child who finds happiness through the unfolding of a secret garden. Dean Stockwell is cast as Colin, the boy who thinks he is going to die and whose terror in a house of mystery motivates the story's absorbing theme. The sinister role of the hunchback father is played by Herbert Marshall, with Gladys Cooper as the forbidding housekeeper, Elsa Lanchester as the ribald English country bumpkin, and Reginald Owen as the close-mouthed gardener to whom the mystery of the secret garden is entrusted.

M-G-M, after a search which spanned the Atlantic, also introduces a new "find" in the picture in the person of fourteen-year-old Brian Roper, who portrays the pivotal role of Dickon. It is a part which should prove as endearing to filmgoers as that of Jody, enacted by Claude Jarman, Jr., in "The Yearling."
