Halliwell-Edwards Nuptials Solemnized At St. James

The marriage of Tona Jean, daughter of Mrs. Lawrence Edwards, Charlottetown and George Frederick Halliwell Jr., son of Major and Mrs. G.F. Haliwell, Charlottetown and Halifax, was solemnized recently by Rev. Kirk of St. James, Rev. T.H.B. Somers performed the double ring ceremony. C. Gledhill was the organist. Spring flowers decorated the church.

The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Joseph McDonald. Her gown was a white lace over taffeta with V neck in back and bracelet length sleeves. Her headpiece featured a wedding ring effect of nylon organza with short veil. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

Miss Vera Doyle was bridesmaid. Her gown was of turquoise nylon over taffeta with matching pillbox hat. Her flowers were of pink and white carnations.

Frank LeClair was best man.

The bride's mother wore a multi-coloured silk dress with mauve accessories and her corsage was of yellow roses.

The groom's mother wore a taupe dress with matching jacket, pink accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

The grandmother of the bride wore a black silk dress with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's grand parents. The three tier wedding cake was topped with a miniature bride and groom under a floral arch. The best man proposed a toast to the bride, the groom responding. Telegrams and phone calls were received from relatives in Halifax and Dartmouth, Cathy Edwards, sister of the bride circulated the guest book.

For travelling, the bride wore a blue boucle suit with white accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations. After a short trip throughout the Maritimes, Mr. and Mrs. Halliwell will reside in Charlottetown.

Lot 16 Bride Wore Veil Sent By Penpal Namesake In Man.

Potted plants and spring flowers made a pretty setting for the wedding of Florence Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.A. McFadden of Central, Lot 16 and George Wilbur, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil MacQuarrie of Ellerslie at the Lot 16 United Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Ralph Bell.

Mrs. Clarence Carr was in charge of the wedding music and accompanied Miss Edith Betton who sang "Father Al Creating" before the ceremony and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in her wedding gown of white net and lace over satin. The fitted bodice, studded with sequins and pearls, had a square neckline coming to a V in the back and the long sleeves ended in points over the hands. The tiered bouffant skirt was floor length and her shoulder length veil fell from a crown of net. Her only jewelry was a pair of pearl earrings, a gift of the groom. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink carnation roses. The veil was sent to the bride by her penpal of the same name, Joan McFadden of Hamioto, Man., who was recently married.

Miss Joyce McFadden, as her sister's maid of honor, was dressed in pink crepe over taffeta, with scoop neckline, fitted bodice and ballerina length bouffant skirt. She wore a matching picture hat and carried a nosegay of pink 'mums. Miss Grace Lyle and Mrs. James Paynter as bridesmaids were dressed in yellow similarly styled to that of the maid of honor and they carried nosegays of yellow mums. Each attendant wore a floral drop necklace, gifts of the bride.

Alan McFadden, brother of the bride, was best man while Donald McFadden and James MacLaurin ushered the guests to their pews which were marked with nosegays of lily of the valley.

The bride's mother chose a blue linen, jacket dress with matching hat and wore a corsage of yellow roses.

Mrs. MacQuarrie, mother of the groom, was dressed in navy flowered nylon over taffeta with white accessories and a corsage of white feathered carnations.

A reception for 65 guests was held at the Community Hall and was catered to by the Lot 16 U.C.W.

The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake topped with love birds and wedding rings and flanked by lighted yellow tapers in silver candelabras. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Johnston and responded to by the groom. A telegram from Mr. and Mrs. C.A. Adcock, St. John, N.B., was read by Allan McFadden.

Miss Edith Betton sang "I'll Walk Beside You" accompanied by Mrs. Carr. Miss Betty Smith, cousin of the groom, circulated the guest book.

For a honeymoon trip to Maine, the bride donned a three-piece knitted suit of spray aqua with white accessories and pinned on a corsage of white feathered carnations. On their return Mr. and Mrs. MacQuarrie will reside in Charlottetown where they are both employed.

Mother-daughter Banquet Held

Tryon United Church vestry, was the scene recently of a very happy occasion when the C.G.I.T. from the United Presbyterian and Baptist Churches met for a Mother and daughter banquet.

The 12 girls had as their guests their mothers and members of Women's Missionary Societies, namely, Mrs. Everett Howatt, Mrs. George Robblee and Mrs. Arthur Thompson. Also their music teacher, Miss Arlene Carr who presided at the piano.

A toast to the Queen was porposed by president, Lois Carr; to the Church by Mary Howatt responded to by Mrs. L.R. Graves; to mothers by Lynn Dawson to which Mrs. Robert Crawford replied; Mrs. Everett Howatt proposed the toast to C.G.I.T. and Miriam Crawford fittingly replied.

Special speaker for the evening was Mrs Waldron MacQuarrie after which the Affilliation Service was then carried out and a gift for missions was given to each society.

Following this ceremony, the girls presented their leaders, Mrs LR Graves, Miss Florrie Mabey and Mrs. Waldron MacQuarrie with a gift and an address read by Donna Dixon.

Mrs. Sheldon Howatt, Mrs. Raymond Thompson and Miss Dorothy Taylor were thanked for their kindness in serving at this banquet.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Early-born Crocus Rises To Greet The Maytime

Someone, obviously a lover of, blossoms, has written,
"In dreary winter who would know
My garden's hidden loveliness?
Though Spring will banish frost and snow,
In dreary winter who would know
That here my crocuses will grow
And fill my eyes with happiness?
In dreary winter who would know
My garden's hidden loveliness?"

Crocuses rise now in our lawn-border, to greet the May time. They appear in unexpected corners. And we think how exceedingly good it must have been for those of our cousins and kin, who pioneered in the Canadian West, to have seen these crocuses in abundance their prairies, to give them release from the monotony, the loneliness and actual hardships of first winters there. . . Ours come to be one with the kittens and lambkins, the calves and the piglets that be, long to the farm at this time. Not many spring-flowerings we have at Alderlea. Enough however to have us appreciate how inspiringly beautiful these early-born of the mould can be.

"Oh to be in Ottawa now that the tulips bloom." a friend smilled wistfully back in the days.

Presently May will bring tulips to Island - lawns, so pretty they will be, that we seeing will wonder as we pass by, "Are they actually real?" By the stream the Marsh Marigolds-the Cowslips, will be showing us their gold soon, and beneath the maples back in the grove, the painted trilliums will bloom.

Today was full of mists and showers. But threading them, were odd spells of sunshine. And May spent away her hours.

Now the lambkins come, in singles and in pairs, to bless the farm and the farmers.

"Do the men ever bring any indoors"? a visitor of today inquired.

"Sometimes. A weakling. Or one that doesn't nurse well. Just to be warmed before it is returned to the ewe," we said.

"No pet lambs?"

"We have had. But of late the practice is discouraged. If it is at all possible, the men try to keep them with the ewes."

"I'm told they make fine pets."

"Oh, they do. But sometimes they aren't content to pasture with the flock and that leaves them more or less underfoot during the summer."

"We may have one this year," Alex said smiling at the thought. "I've just never known"

"One step more," Grand-daughter snuggled in the old Queen-chair of the family comments. "One more "final" to write — and then the year is done!"

"One step and then another, and the longest walk is ended", we say.

"It wasn't a long walk - no, how fast the months speed!"

"How about a cup of tea - sort of by way of celebration?" James suggests with a twinkle.

Until tomorrow — — Diary — Good-night.

MARY HAWORTH

Teenager Worries Over Sister's Selfish Attitude

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a teen-age girl and I would like to know if you think it was right of my married sister not to visit our parents on Easter Sunday.

Sis has three small children and lives 10 minutes from us. She was having her in-laws to dinner but I feel she could have stopped by our house for at least a few minutes. I'm sure they'd how cute the little girls' looked.

Mother had three Easter bunnies out, waiting for the grandchildren and I am sure she was disappointed when nobody came. She more or less expected them, though she didn't say anything.

Towards evening my brother and I went over to visit Sis, and her husband left their guests to drive us home. They didn't mind and I am sure they wouldn't if Sis had accused herself to visit us earlier in the day. I think she owes mother that much re. spect, in return for all that mother does for her.

Mother breaks her neck for Sis, always minding her children, jumping to oblige her. Anything Sis wants or needs, we must drop everything to accommodate her. I love Sis and am happy to help her, but she takes so much for granted.

I wonder if you have a leaflet or know of a book that sets forth the duties of children to parents after they marry. Especially as regards visiting on holidays. What is traditional or expected? People seem to have differing opinions and I would like to know what is right. Sincerely,

N. C.

Dear N. C.: As I get the picture, your married sister was a smudge selfish and ungracious in failing to include her devoted mother in her Easter list of fond courtesies to valued kinfolk.

As you indicate, she easily might have (therefore should have) either brought the children over, or sent them by her husband (if she felt obliged to stay with the in-laws) for a style - show visit to their doting maternal grandma.

However, filial indifference is a harvest often reaped by parents who rob themselves, figuratively speaking, to pamper their children; or some of them.

Thus if your mother is sufficiently stung by disappointment in this instance to take a look at the situation and recognize her mistake in overloading Sis with favors, she may turn over a new leaf and teach Sis a lesson.

Quite evidently you are seeking guidance because you feel the bruise of your mother's heartache and you long to heal that bruise or prevent a recurrence. Yet this is a problem in your mother's experience that she must tackle self reliantly, if she is to jolt your sister out of her hardshell selfishness or cut down the wounds to her (your mother's) self - esteem.

My advice to your mother is to find other things to do than jump at your sister's beck-and-call. Your mother should make up her mind (and stick to it) that she won't baby-sit for Sis habitually, beginning now: to wean Sis from counting on Mom to be a fixture whenever wanted.

If your mother hasn't the stamina to take this justified step, for fear of losing close touch with Sis — maybe driving her towards the in-law camp (possibly both camps are vying for the inside track with the grandchildren) — in that case your mother is practically inviting kicks in the teeth.

Undoubtedly Sis would respect and appreciate her more and treat her with greater deference, if Mom were more or less out of her reach, some part of the time.

I don't know of a pamphlet or book that specifically outlines married children's social obligations to parents. But Erich Fromm's book "The Art of Loving" (Harpers) or Aelred Watkin's book "The Enemies of Love" (Kenedy) covers human relations from higher grounds; and each points the way to family concord, for any reader who cares to learn. M.H.

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Top Off Broiler Chicken With Mushroom Sauce

"SMART broiler chickens should wear toppers, Madame," chuckled the Chef. "And nothing could be more suitable than a quick mushroom sauce thick enough to sit atop broiled chicken without running all over it and the plate."

"A good idea, Chef," I replied. "But homemakers are housecleaning or rushing around to outfit the family for summer. They don't have time to make elaborate sauces now."

EASY TO FIX

"Granted," he said. "But the sauce I have in mind is made from canned cream of mushroom soup. Just add the right seasonings, heat and stir, and there's a delectable sauce topper that really tops the bird.

"But the bird must be tops, too. That means perfect broiling, which is really easy to accomplish but too often the chicken is dry from overcooking and lacking in flavor."

Measurements level; recipes for 6

FLAVORFUL BROILED CHICKEN WITH MUSHROOM TOPPER

2 (2½ lb.) broiler-fryers, quartered
1½ tbsp. vegetable oil
1½ tsp. seasoning salt
Mushroom Topper (follows)

Order very fresh broiler - fryers as pkg. frozen fryers cooked by this method are likely to be dry. Brush all over with oil; dust with seasoning salt.

Preheat broiler to 450 deg. F. Line broiler-rack with foil.

Arrange chicken pieces cut-side down in 2 rows apart. Broil 20 min. 4" from source of heat, or until golden brown. Then turn to brown reverse side and broil 15 min. more or until no pink fluid shows when a joint is tested with a fork.

Serve 'as is' or finish with Mushroom Topper.

In this case, place chicken in skillet or low baking dish that can go-to-table. Spread Mushroom Topper over chicken; brown lightly, about 2 min., under broiler. Garnish with parsley, with or without spring carrots.

MUSHROOM TOPPER

2 (10½ oz.) cans condensed mushroom soup
½ c. milk
½ tsp. fine instant onion
½ tsp. seasoning salt

Combine and mix all ingredients; stir-heat and use as directed above.

Note: Try this "topper" with boiled Cornish hens, veal chops, fish fillets, sliced ham. Or put thin - thin slices of eggplant together with it, then saute. Or use it to fill small half-tomatoes to bake — quick, easy and elegant.
