Opening lead—seven of hearts.

There is a certain amount of guesswork involved in the play of the cards. The fine dummy player, when confronted with a guess in a particular situation, somehow or other manages to score high in the guess department — far better than the particular circumstances with which he is faced would appear to warrant.

A distinguishing characteristic of the top-flight dummy player is that when a guess situation arises, he frequently solves the problem by avoiding the guess altogether.

Such a solution was provided by South in this deal where a heart loser was inevitable and the success of the slam contract appeared to rest upon guessing which defender held the queen of clubs. The vital queen could be easily captured by a finesse, provided it was known where the queen was located.

The heart lead was covered by the ten and East's queen was taken with the ace. After leading a trump to dummy, South played a low spade to the ace, the first step of a campaign to avoid the crucial club guess.

Another trump lead to dummy permitted declarer to ruff another low spade. East, in the course of the spade leads from dummy, had followed with the ten and queen.

The final step in South's meticulous plan was taken when dummy was again entered with a trump to lead the jack of spades. East had played his king, whereupon South discarded his heart loser on it. And East, saddled with the lead, had no choice but to lead back a heart or club.

A club return would automatically eliminate declarer's potential club loser. A heart set in was bound to be equally fatal. If the king of hearts was led, declarer would ruff, and dummy's jack would become a trick. If a low heart was returned instead, South would simply discard a club and allow the jack in dummy to win the trick.

Guess situations are fine when you guess them right. But as South ably demonstrated, why guess when you don't have to?

CANAL TRAFFIC SHOWS INCREASE

OTTAWA (CP) — Volume of freight moved through Canadian canals in September, registered its first monthly increase this year compared with 1957.

The bureau of statistics said today that shipments in the month rose 8 per cent to 4,462,996 tons from 4,125,331 a year ago. Decreased traffic on the Sault Ste. Marie canal was more than offset by increased business through the Welland, St. Lawrence and Nova Scotia's Canso canal.

Tonnage moved through all canals in the January-September period fell 9.5 per cent to 25,555,025 tons from 28,282,933 last year.
