Religion and Life

By Very Rev. George C. Pidgeon, D.D., L.L.D. First Moderator of the United Church of Canada (Copyright)

The fact that we have an election campaign in process is our reason for returning to the theme of social welfare as a necessary expression of the Christian spirit. Just this morning we have found the following in Archbishop Wm. Temple's "Reading in St. John's Gospel": Referring to the fact that the impotent man, whose healing is recorded in John 5, did not know who it was that healed him, he writes "Of what countless multitudes this is true? Christianity founds hospitals, and athletes are cured in them, never knowing that they owe their cure to Christ. Prisons are reformed under the influence that flows from the gospel; and the prisoners never know—sometimes the reformers themselves do not know—that Christ is the Author of the reform." It is, therefore, all the more necessary to persist in reminding Christians of the services which their faith requires and in teaching the world the nature of the salvation offered by the church.

There are two articles in a recent issue of the New York Times Magazine which command attention in this connection. In one of them Arnold J. Toynbee, the famous historian, raises this question: What will scholars 300 years from now regard as the outstanding feature of the twentieth century? His answer is the fact that for the first time in human history, "people dared to think it practicable to make the benefits of civilization available for the whole human race." He adds that "the new idea and objective of extending the benefits of civilization to the common man will in future centuries tower above the rest" and "has come to stay". It overwhelms one's imagination to think how recent this discovery has been and how quickly it has been adopted by the nations of the earth.

The other article is by Barbara Ward on the election in Britain written before the event. She points out that in the sphere of ideals "most of the aims of Labor could not be changed without betraying the humane and generous purposes which underlie most modern democratic thought." She says that the Conservatives have virtually adopted these ideals and that the issue between the two parties was about means and methods of carrying them out.

The speeches being given by the leaders in our Provincial campaign, so far as they are being reported in the Press and by the Radio are in the same direction. Far more attention is given to ways of spending our revenues than to the development of the country's resources. The parties are vying with each other in their promises of the social benefits that they will give if placed in power. No one questions the ideal of "The Welfare State"; arguments turn only on ways of developing more fully its benefits to mankind.

Our interest in this column is in the fact that this principle of sharing with all men benefits formerly reserved for the few is inherent in Christianity. When the question was asked: Why did Jesus concentrate His attention to the poor? one of our scholars answered: "That He might show that He valued men as men, apart from the accidents of their position or possessions. He was as deeply interested in meeting the spiritual need of the Samaritan woman as of Nicodemus the ruler of the Jews."

He found in a Roman soldier a stronger faith than among His own people. When He commissioned His followers to continue His work, He charged them to preach the Gospel to every creature in all parts of the world. His salvation is for all, regardless of their race, creed, outward estate or past record. When the Spirit of Jesus was poured out at Pentecost, the first believers shared with one another their spiritual treasures, and at a later date St. Paul led his Gentile churches in sharing their material wealth with the famine-stricken Christians in Jerusalem. St. Paul, the greatest interpreter of Christ, governed his life by this principle: "I am debtor to the Greeks and Barbarians, to the wise and to the unwise". He possessed what they lacked, and felt under a divine obligation to share them with all who lacked. It means a new world when the nations catch this vision and accept this obligation. As Archbishop Temple points out, Christ is the Author of this new conception of the old truth that we are our brothers' keepers. His spirit works primarily through the individual, and the fact that the state is in action does not absolve persons of their responsibility. Epoch-making ideas and ideals originating in the minds and hearts of individuals. The state cannot take them up until they have been proven. The experiments by which they are being wrought out, and the experience required to create and manage the institutions which embody them must come from private inspiration and enterprise. Hence the priceless worth to humanity of the causes supported by the Red Feather campaign. It says little of Toronto Christianity if we have grown weary in this sort of well-being. To fail here is to cut the creative out of our modern social life.

The WEEK at S. D. U.

Two weeks have passed in the pages of Time since we last reached you through our column. This leaves so much to tell you that it is hard to know where to start. Perhaps we can start with football. Even though our first team did not carry home the intercollegiate crown for us two weeks ago, yet we are very proud of them. Why are we proud? Because they lost the game so well. And what a hard game to lose well! That heart-breaking score of 3-2! But the boys took the defeat in their stride.

The Seniors on the team, "Flu" Cameron and Gerry Clinton had their own feelings as they realized it would be their last chance to wear the Red and White for S. D. U. These boys have played well for the college and they deserve a lot of credit. Congratulations are in order to coach A. J. MacAdara, for doing as well as he did with a practically new team. Many of the boys, we hope, will be back again next year to play football for the primary purpose of playing football and the secondary purpose of winning the championship.

For the first time this season, second team Saints met their match in the Airforce team whom they played here last Saturday. The gridiron was in a very greasy condition for the game. For the members of the Saints' team the game was probably a lesson on being too confident. For the spectators, few as they were, it was a thrill. To see these Englishmen playing "their own" game, ball dribbling, fine passing, long tackling, and pretty half line runs was really something. They really deserved their 10-8 victory.

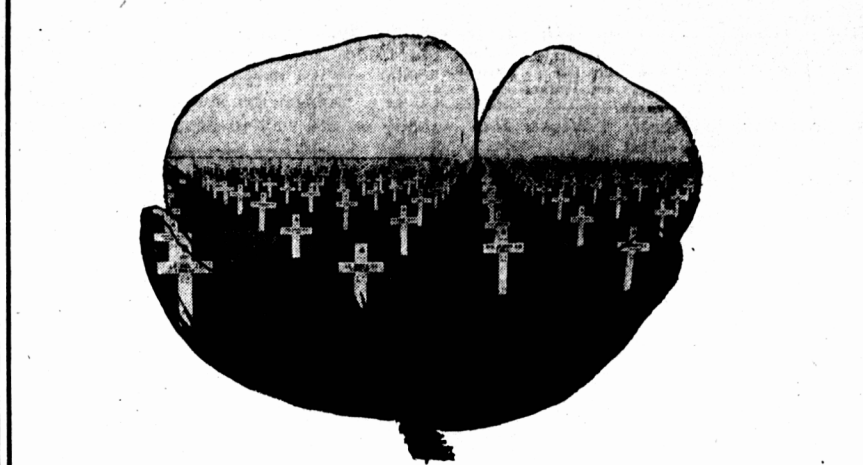

On the campus, both the Senior and Junior Intramural Leagues have been completed. On a chilly evening last week the Sophomore team under captain John Fisher defeated a team captained by Damien Leonard to win the last game of the finals 6-0. They had previously won the first game 6-3. The Sophomore team was a heavier, harder-hitting team than the High School team, but the latter had the Sophs in hot water on more than one occasion. (Gene MacDonald asked for a better write-up than this).

In the three-team Junior League, the Argonauts were the winners. This team, in the early part of the schedule, was well ahead in points, but near the end Allouettes came on strong and it was with this team that the Argos played their final sudden-death game. Just about this time last week.

Remembrance Day 1951

Sunday, November 11th.

A Day of Dedication To Our Countrymen of All Wars

Remembrance Day takes on newer, deeper meaning this year. For it is dedicated not alone to the soldiers of World War I or World War II . . . but to all Canadians of all times who have given, and are giving, their lives to advance the cause of Freedom—for themselves, their fellowmen and for all humanity. Today, each battle fought brings nearer the final realization of Peace with Freedom. Thus Remembrance Day is dedicated not just to the past . . . but to the future.
